MIDWEST CITIES REDUCE SCHOOL COSTS SHARPLY

School Opening

Economies of operation as severe as those now being put into effect in the Chicago schools have been undertaken in every large city in the middle west because of diminished revenues, it became known yesterday. This fact showing that Chicago is not the only city which has been forced to take drastic action to live within curtailed finances because of changed conditions was contained in the reports of the school officials of eighteen major cities.

Their reports showed that they have been compelled to readjust the financial operations of their elementary and high schools to the basis of cost within the ability of the taxpayers and the parents of school children to pay. Some of the economies imposed exceed in their severity even those instituted in Chicago.

Indianapolis Saves 59%.

In some of the school systems the salaries of the teaching staff and employés were cut as much as 50 per cent, the class loads of pupils per teacher were increased as much as 50 per cent, and in one city, Indianapolis, Ind., the per capita cost of instruction per pupil between 1928 and 1933 was reduced 59 per cent by the savings effected.

In Minneapolis alone the 1933 budget was reduced to the expenditure basis of 1923, in proportion to the enrollment, by means of retrenchments. There the salaries of the teachers and other employés were slashed 45 per cent in the short space of three months this last summer in addition to other economy steps.

In Cleveland, O., the summer schools have been discontinued. In Grand Rapids, Mich., it is proposed to abandon the night schools. In Racine, Wis., manual training, household arts, and Latin in the grade schools have been wholly dropped. In Flint, Mich., the prospect is that the schools may operate only seven months instead of the customary ten months. In Columbus, O., contracts for only seven months of teaching, instead of for ten months, have been allowed the teachers as a precaution should the lack of revenue be greater than has already been experienced.

Possible 7 Month Term in Flint.

"Schools in Flint, Mich.," said the superintendent, L. H. Lamb, "will open Monday [Sept. 18] under the most drastic reductions in the history of the local school system. The opening date is two weeks later than usual. Prospects are that it may be possible to operate only seven months this year instead of the customary ten months.

"It is practically assured the schools will close two weeks earlier next spring, thus cutting at least a month off the usual time. Salaries of teachers and other employés have been reduced from 10 to 40 per cent in the last two years. Music, athletics, and the auditorium, the latter item including dramatics and similar activities, have been curtailed and the pupil load has been increased from 33.4 to 37.4 per teacher."

"The Cleveland public schools have nearly six million dollars less to spend in 1933 than in 1929," said Charles H. Lake, superintendent of schools. "That huge difference between this year's budget of $11,850,000 and that of $17,768,709 in 1929 has been absorbed principally in teachers' salary cuts, in sharp slashes in the amount spent for maintenance, and in cutting down on supervisory costs.

Cleveland Drops 347 Teachers.

"Within the last four years there has been a considerable saving through the dropping of 347 teachers from the pay rolls and by increasing the size of the classes. As further economy measures the visiting teacher and psychiatric departments have been closed and the summer school discon-

Nude Cultists Hide Modestly from Visitors

Down in a backwoods section of Indiana, about 65 miles southeast of Chicago, is a nudist colony whose members bask blithely in the sunshine, play volleyball and other games, and generally disport themselves as children of nature.

Complete nudism is the rule. And nobody thinks anything of it, according to Attorney Alois S. Knapp and his wife, 2408 Warren boulevard, who own the camp. Most of the members are white collared workers or professional people, including doctors, lawyers, stenographers, clerks and even a clergyman "looking for a church."

Reporter Visits Camp.

A reporter, calling as the guest of Attorney Knapp, found the camp yesterday. It is situated in a thickly forested section of Indiana, less than 10 miles from Lake Village, which is 55 miles from the loop. Farmers in the region know of the camp, but have little comment to make on it. The sheriff, it is said, has agreed not to interfere so long as the nudists offend no one by leaving the premises.

Yesterday's observations indicated the colony is a modest one, the members who think nothing of frolicking about sans clothing, refusing to budge from their huts when it became known that a stranger was about. It was not until twilight that they pursued their usual activities and then their white bodies could be seen through the trees, playing in the clearing.

Warns Not to Wear Clothes.

Before reaching the clearing a visitor must pass through a gate leading to the "white house," or headquarters of the camp. This is the homestead of Mrs. Knapp's parents, now dead. Old Indian trails are followed for about 500 feet, and then the clearing is reached. A bulletin board meets the eye. On it, among many notices is this: "This is a nudist colony, and members are not supposed to wear clothing." They don't.

The clearing is equipped with facilities for playing baseball and other outdoor games. Around it are a dozen tents, used as homes. To the south is a huge excavation, where a swimming pool is being made. Trees and shrubbery all around the 200 acres shield the nudists from curious stares.

"The camp is for healthy-minded, healthy-bodied people," said Mrs. Knapp. "There is no suggestion of smut or sex allowed. People coming here who do not respond to the philosophy of nudism are ostracized and excluded. Most of our members are married couples."

The camp, known as the Zoro Nature colony, has been in operation since July 15. It is Attorney Knapp's idea. Dues are $10 annually.

STOCK AND GRAIN PRICES ADVANCE AS DOLLAR SINKS

Stimulated by a renewal of inflation talk, prices advanced in all markets yesterday and the United States dollar sank to a new low in foreign exchange. The spurt occurred on heavy buying in the last hour of trading.

May wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade closed at 99⅞ cents, an advance of 3⅝ cents for the day. Corn gained 2¾ to 2⅞ cents, and oats were up from ¾ to 1¼ cents. December corn closed at 55⅝ to 55¾ cents.

In New York the rally was led by the "silver" shares after a brisk advance in silver quotations. Gold shares, too, were buoyant on the continued decline of the dollar and the consequent rise in the price of gold to $30.49 per ounce, a new high. The treasury's official quotation on gold compared with $30.41 on Friday and $29.77 on Thursday.

Homestake Mining, leader of the gold stocks, reached a new all time high of $351 per share, an advance of $26 for the day. McIntyre Porcupine, United States Smelting, International Nickel, Kennecott, and other mining shares advanced substantially. United States Steel common gained $2 to close at $55. A. T. & T. rose to $130.25, a gain of $2.62. General Motors advanced $1.25, Chrysler $1.75, Sears-Roebuck $2, Air Reduction $2.25, International Silver $6.75, and Union Pacific $3.50.

San Jose, Cal., Sept. 16.—[U. P.]—A jury here tonight found David A. Lamson guilty of the Memorial day murder of his pretty wife, Allene, and, by failing to recommend mercy, automatically decreed the death penalty.

The jury, including five women, returned its verdict at 8:37 p. m. after more than nine hours' deliberation.

The state claimed the erstwhile Stanford university press executive crushed his wife's head with a piece of iron pipe while enraged over sex frustration. It also charged Lamson was enamored of Sara Kelly, Sacramento divorcée, and that Mrs. Lamson's jealousy, thus aroused, was a contributory motive.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 16.—Participants in two of the most prominent divorce cases in Milwaukee were in court today.

The first to appear before Circuit Judge Otto H. Breidenbach was Michael F. Cudahy, millionaire meat packer, who is suing his wife, Mrs. Alice Dickson Pinto Cudahy, for a divorce on grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment.

Judge Breidenbach took under advisement a motion by attorneys for Cudahy to move the case up on the Circuit court calendar.

The move, opposed strenuously by Mrs. Cudahy's attorneys, would make possible the granting of a final decree by October.

Mr. Cudahy now is paying his wife $1,500 monthly alimony and one-half of the $350 monthly rent on her home.

Rector Appears in Court.

Following Cudahy's appearance in Circuit court came the Rev. E. Reginald Williams, rector of the fashionable St. Mark's Episcopal church, and his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Eckhart Williams, Chicago heiress. Mrs. Williams is suing the rector on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment.

Judge Breidenbach continued hearing on a motion by the rector's attorney to give the temporary custody of their son, Bernard, 8, to Dr. Williams, until Wednesday afternoon. Meanwhile, the judge ruled, Bernard will be permitted to attend school in Chicago, though his father is seeking a restraining order to keep his son in the jurisdiction of Milwaukee county.

Cudahy's plea for an early trial subjected him to several blasts from Mrs. Cudahy's attorneys. The wealthy meat packer was sitting in the front row in the courtroom with Ferdinand Bartlett, prominent in Milwaukee society.

Cites Rights of Poor.

"Mr. Michael F. Cudahy has no rights superior to the poor in the courts of justice, and it is not fair for his case to be moved up ahead of scores who have been waiting their turn for a year or two," Attorney Ray McCann, for Mrs. Cudahy, declared. Cudahy filed suit for divorce on Aug. 7, 1932.

If the Cudahy trial were placed on its regular place on the calendar, there would be a delay of at least two years, due to congestion of the calendar.

Attorney Walter L. Gold, also representing Mrs. Cudahy, was rebuked by Judge Breindenbach for what he termed "veiled" criticism of Circuit Judge Gustave G. Gehrz, who has presided over all of the Cudahy hearings. Judge Gehrz had said in a ruling that it would be advisable to try the case in October, and Attorney Gold referred to Judge Gehrz as being "garrulous," "officious," and "loquacious."

Judge Interrupts.

At this point, Judge Breidenbach interrupted the argument of Attorney Gold and said, "I deem it my duty to check you in your criticism of another court."

Dr. Williams, besides asking for the temporary custody of Bernard, requested permission to enter his former home at 2977 North Shepard avenue to recover personal effects. Whether he will be allowed to do so also will be decided at the hearing Wednesday.

Attorney Leo W. Slensby, representing Dr. Williams, with Nicholas Socrates, Chicago, made the motion for a continuance until his colleague would be able to be present.

Mrs. Williams again was represented by Attorneys Malcolm K. Whyte, Milwaukee, and John Neal Campbell, Chicago. Attorney Slensby said that Dr. Williams has been in Chicago, visiting his son at Lake Forest, Ill., where his mother is keeping him, and conferring with Attorney Socrates.

REPUBLICANISM

(An Editorial.)

In its present recess from the responsibilities of federal administration the leadership and membership of the Republican party will find it profitable to reflect upon its history and upon the issues which have inspired and directed it. Making due allowance for the fluctuations of political circumstance to which every effective political organization in some measure yields, it may be said that the Republican party has represented the political faith of Thomas Jefferson and the economic faith of Hamilton. In one period its emphasis has been upon the former, in another upon the latter, as circumstances have emphasized either political or economic problems. But from the inception of the party both philosophies have run through its policies and influenced its course of action.

Although the towering figure of Lincoln presides over the first stage of the party's history, it has been said truly that "the logical founding of the Republican party was laid by Thomas Jefferson just seventy years before its actual appearance." Of this Lincoln, himself, was intensely aware and it is apparent in his utterances that he considered himself and the party to which he gave its first great leadership as inheritors of Jeffersonian democracy.

Campaign rhetoric and the expediencies of political controversy for many years have obscured this, but it has not lost its significance in our time. The first national platform of the party, that of the Philadelphia convention of 1856, demanded the maintenance of the Declaration of Independence, of the federal constitution, of the rights of the states, and the union of the states. It called for the restoration of "the principles of Washington and Jefferson."

The name of Jefferson was repeatedly on the lips of Lincoln in his public utterances and in his private communications. Thus in his famous letter to the Massachusetts anti-slavery leaders he finds it interesting that "those supposed to descend politically from the party opposed to Jefferson should now be celebrating his birthday . . . while those claiming political descent from him have nearly ceased to breathe his name," and he adds: "All honor to Jefferson—to the man who, in the concrete pressure of a struggle for national independence by a single people, had the coolness, forecast, and capacity to introduce into a merely revolutionary document an abstract truth, applicable to all men and all times, and so embalm it there that today and in all coming days it shall be a rebuke and a stumbling block to the very harbingers of reappearing tyranny and oppression."

On the other hand, republicanism on the economic side inherited from the national republicanism of J. Q. Adams and Henry Clay, which later was absorbed by the Whigs, and Lincoln himself, in the famous message of 1861 on the man and the dollar, quoted with equal fervor by Theodore Roosevelt and Bryan in their contest, expressed the justice and economic sanity which have influenced his party through its history. "Capital," said Lincoln, "has its rights, which are as worthy of protection as any other rights; nor is it denied that there is and probably always will be a relation between capital and labor producing mutual benefits . . . there should be no war upon property, or upon the owners of property."

That passage was avoided by Bryan, but as an authority on party history Prof. Holcombe remarks: "In that spirit the platform of the Roosevelt Progressive Republicans (of 1912) dealt with the tariff, the high cost of living, the currency, conservation, and other problems of the time." Thus in the revival of the Lincolnian spirit of that stage the political inheritance of Jefferson and the economic inheritance of Hamilton combined. The progressive movement, after its mistaken secession, passed back where it belonged, into the body of republicanism, while its title, emptied of its original content, was taken over by a faction which Jefferson, Lincoln, and Theodore Roosevelt would have repudiated. Essential republicanism remains what its heritage has made it through the years, a political force in which a balance has always been sought and in as great a degree as can be expected in political affairs approximated between the essentials of a stable society and the just liberties of the individual.

Ex-Dry Agent Held in Brewer Kidnaping Plot

Denver, Colo., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—A plot to kidnap Adolph Coors Jr., wealthy Colorado brewer, and hold him for $50,000 ransom, was credited tonight by Denver police to three former prohibition agents for the federal government.

One of the men, Paul Robert Lane, is under arrest, and police say he has confessed. Chief of Police Albert T. Clark said the second agent in the case was Clyde Culbertson, who, according to Lane, was the person who first proposed the kidnaping.

The name of the third agent was not disclosed, but police inferred he was a man with whom the department has had trouble previously. A fourth suspect, a hireling of the three former dry agents, also is sought. Lane, who was arrested in Kansas City, Mo., a week ago, was returned here and booked on an automobile theft charge.

Biggest Brewer of Region.

Coors whose brewery at Golden, Colo., is the largest in the Rocky mountain area was selected as victim of the ring because of his habit of going about alone at night visiting establishments which sell his product and checking up on sales.

The original plan was to abduct him on Sept. 1, but the date was postponed because two of the gang were in Kansas City delivering stolen cars and were unable to get back to Denver in time.

Chief Clark, who was instrumental in solving the abduction of Charles Boettcher II., last winter, announced tonight he has in his possession the ransom letter the gang intended to send to Coors' family. It was planned, he said, to hold Coors in a mountain cabin near Deckers, Colo., until the ransom was paid. The gang had a hideout in Kansas City, to which it intended to flee after obtaining the money.

Coors Helps Police.

Coors planned to allow the gang to kidnap him and worked throughout the case with police, who have known of the plot for a month.

He told Chief Clark: "Let them go through with it. I am willing to be kidnaped. Have your men on the job and we will catch them in the act."

LAWYER FREED ON $10,000 BOND 2 HOURS LATER

Liberated by Judge's Unusual Action.

Killer Sentenced

John Bongiorno, one of convicted slayers of Policeman Harry Redlich, is refused new trial and sentenced to 199 years in penitentiary. His sentence is 279th imposed by Criminal court judges since war on crime began. Details on page 16.

Aaron Sapiro, attorney who was indicted with Al Capone, Ald. Oscar F. Nelson [46th] and twenty-one others on charges of conspiracy to terrorize Chicago business men, was brought back from New York last night and lodged for nearly two hours in the county jail.

His imprisonment was solely due to a failure of the sheriff's office to be ready for him when he came. A long search had to be made for the capias for his arrest, but when this was found his jailers accepted bonds for $10,000 which had been arranged with the consent of Judge James J. Fardy, and Sapiro walked out free.

The attorney, formerly a Chicagoan but now claiming New York as his residence, was arrested in New York on July 27, the day the indictments were voted, and fought vigorously to avoid extradition. Gov. Lehman, on the ground that the true bill was faulty, first declined to order him sent back, but issued the extradition warrant on Sept. 6 after an amended indictment had been returned.

Plea for Stay Overruled.

Sapiro then made application for a stay of the order, but it was overruled Friday by Justice Francis Martin of the New York Appellate court division. First Assistant State's Attorney Grover C. Niemeyer then took charge of the accused man and, accompanied by Policeman Francis Hand of the state's attorney's office, bustled him to a train. Mr. Niemeyer had gone to New York to take charge of the state's side of the extradition fight.

As the trio sped westward yesterday on a train, the legal efforts that resulted in the unusual arrangements for Sapiro's accommodation bonds, to prevent his remaining in jail until tomorrow, were started.

Before Judge Fardy, acting as chief justice of the Criminal court, appeared Attorneys Walter F. Lynch and Edward J. Kelly. Appeared also a representative of the United States Fidelity and Guarantee Bonding company, with a bond schedule that had already been approved by the state's attorney's office.

Authorizes Clerk to Free Him.

Attorney Lynch explained that with the courts closed and Sapiro arriving in the evening, it might be necessary for him to stay in jail unless the bonds were arranged. On this plea Judge Fardy attached his signature to the bond and ordered his clerk to fill out a discharge slip. He also gave the clerk the power to accept Sapiro's signature and allow him to go.

Assistant state's attorneys pointed out that the procedure was not customary, but the order held. Jerome J. Greenberg, a deputy clerk of the Criminal court, was commanded to meet Sapiro's train and release him at once without having his look at the inside walls of the jail.

Naturally pleased with this treatment, the two attorneys and Greenberg met the train in the Union station at 6:30 p. m. As Sapiro, Mr. Niemeyer, and Hand stepped down they dashed over and waved the freedom paper.

Prosecutor Orders Him Jailed.

"Good-by, I'll be seeing you later," said the smiling New York attorney to the prosecutor.

Mr. Niemeyer looked at the bond.

"I don't recognize this," he said. "It isn't usual to do it this way and I want Sapiro turned over to the sheriff's office; the proper custodian. Take him to the county jail."

He withdrew from the party and Policeman Hand put his prisoner into a cab and did as he was told. Following them to the jail were the Sapiro counsel and the somewhat perturbed Greenberg. A new disturbing element made its appearance when they arrived.

No one could find the capias for Sapiro's arrest. The receiving clerk scratched his head over the deep problem of how he could accept bonds for a prisoner when there was no authority on which to arrest him.

Pronounces Bond Legal.

Messages were sent to Sheriff Meyering, but no one could locate him. David Moneypenny, warden of the jail, also was out of reach. Assistant State's Attorney Edwin J. Raber, who is to prosecute the racketeering indictments, was asked for advice. He said that the bond was legal, and that while Mr. Niemeyer couldn't accept it the sheriff's men could and must.

Then some one called James Gabriel, chief bailiff of the Criminal court, and he reported the capias was locked up in his safe. He accommodatingly went there from his home in Berwyn and dug out the needed document. Sapiro, who was then released, thanked him effusively.

Before leaving the jail the New York attorney made a brief statement.

"If I had been properly informed of the indictment," he said, "I would have come willingly to Chicago at once. But I had reason to believe there was a move on foot to keep me in jail. I call attention to the fact that I was never called before the grand jury or consulted by the state's attorney's office before I was indicted. I am a reputable lawyer and I could have been found easily at any time. Only because of outrageous treatment did I fight extradition."

Complains of Speedy Arrest.

He complained because Mr. Niemeyer, after receiving the New York court's order for his removal, refused to allow him to visit his home or his office. Previously, Sapiro had asserted all his acts as counsel for the laundry owners' association were legal.

Prosecutor Niemeyer, informed of the complaints, said he had merely treated Sapiro as an ordinary fugitive, adding he never would have come if he hadn't been forced to. Mr. Raber said he wanted to carry the fight against the alleged racketeers into court at once.

"Sapiro," he said, "has argued that he and his association were only organizing the trade for the good of the laundry and cleaning industries. We have evidence to show they used plain racketeering and coercion to accomplish their ends."

Doubts Capone Will Be Here.

Although he would like to have Capone as one of the defendants, Mr. Raber added, he feared the government would not send the noted gangster from Atlanta penitentiary. He hoped to start the trial in two weeks at most, he said.

Among the others named in the indictments are Murray Humphries, public enemy and Capone ally; Dr. Benjamin M. Squires, once dictator of the cleaning and dyeing industry, and Morris I. Kaplan, counsel for several trade associations.

The state expects to prove that bombings, acid throwings, and strikes were all used in the attempts of those under indictment to force business men into organizations which they did not wish to join.

HURRICANE HITS EAST; SWEEPS ON NEW YORK CITY

Storm and Floods Cause Heavy Damage.

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The second hurricane to strike the Atlantic seaboard within a month was swirling northward tonight toward the New Jersey coast and New York City after battering the Carolinas and Virginia with winds that registered a velocity of from 80 to 100 miles an hour during the morning and early afternoon.

Shortly after 10 o'clock tonight the weather bureau announced that the storm center had reached a point about 125 miles south of Atlantic City. It was then traveling in a north-northeasterly direction, and apparently had veered off from Norfolk, which was thought to be seriously threatened earlier in the day. The weather bureau said it would reach Nantucket, Mass., some time tomorrow.

New York in Path of Gale.

New England, deluged with rain, was warned of the approaching hurricane which the bureau predicted might reach the Jersey coast early tomorrow morning and strike New York City between dawn and noon with a wind of a mile-a-minute or perhaps even greater velocity, unless it should head off toward mid-Atlantic in the meantime.

Police in this city warned storekeepers to secure their swinging signs, shipping snuggled in the harbor and countless tenants telephoned their landlords to ask that heat be turned on in apartments dampened and chilled by three days of wet weather.

Hurricane Sideswipes Norfolk.

After assailing the Carolina coastal country, flooding several cities and cutting a number off from communication, the hurricane sideswiped Norfolk this morning, tidal waters flooding the center of the business district to a depth of three feet and putting a stop to train, trolley, bus, and ferry services, as well as most of the workaday activities of the city. Few deaths had been reported from the stricken areas tonight, but several towns were isolated and damage remained generally unknown.

Off Cape Hatteras, where the center of the storm passed in the early afternoon, the barometer fell to 28.28 and the wind blew seventy five miles an hour. The barometer reading in New York City fell below 30 at 5 p. m., and continued sliding down during the night.

Ships Stay in Harbors.

When possible, coastal shipping hugged the harbors today. No ships left Norfolk. A dozen vessels, outbound from New York, anchored in Gravesend bay. A number of inbound steamships were delayed by the storm. The steamship Beckwith, out of Reedville, Va., was taken in tow by the coast guard cutter Galatea and taken to Cape May, N. J., after a boiler explosion crippled her. Off the Massachusetts coast a search was conducted for the forty foot ketch Lavacore, out of Marblehead, missing since it left Cape May, N. J., on Monday bound for Block Island. The ketch is owned by Peter Vosbury of Cambridge, Mass., and a man and woman were said to be aboard.

Highest Tide in 30 Years.

Whirling up the Atlantic from the Caribbean, the hurricane hit the coastal country of the Carolinas Friday night. Tides rose higher than they had been known for thirty years. In places the wind reached a velocity of 100 miles an hour.

At New Bern, N. C., a town of 10,000 inhabitants, the high tides, meeting the waters of two swollen rivers, crushed several waterfront buildings in the streets of the town. Water was waist deep. A three-quarter mile section of the bridge across the Neuse river on federal highway 17 was carried away at 1:30 a. m. Lieut. D. F. Deotte, of the coast guard, estimated the damage in New Bern alone at more than $1,000,000.

The nearby resorts of Beaufort and Morehead City were also hard hit. At Morehead City the wind toppled ten houses in a four block radius.

What the storm did to numerous fishing villages along the Carolina banks was unknown tonight, as all communication with them had been lacking for twenty-four hours.

Four of five miners believed drowned in a flooded coal mine, at Nanticoke, Pa., walked out an abandoned shaft after being trapped underground all day. The fifth man was said to be safe, though trapped on a ledge by the water.

Mexico counted a terrific toll from the hurricane that brought devastation to the Tampico area. At least 67 lives were lost.

CHICAGO STUDENT AT PURDUE DIES IN AUTO CRASH

Raymond H. Hilb, 20 years old, a senior in mechanical engineering at Purdue university and president of Phi Kappa fraternity there, was instantly killed yesterday when he was thrown from an automobile in a collision near Lafayette, Ind. He was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Hilb of 6511 Newgard avenue, Chicago.

Young Hilb was riding in a car driven by Bernard Ambre of Gary, a fellow student, when it collided with an automobile driven by George Weckerly of Delphi.

Hilb was manager of the varsity baseball team.

Robert E. Bielmann, 73 years old, 3052 North Hamlin avenue, was fatally injured last night when he was struck by an automobile while crossing Grand avenue at Marmora avenue. He died shortly afterward at the Danish-American hospital. Joseph J. Post, 1184 South Ridgeland avenue, Oak Park, driver of the automobile, was held for the inquest tomorrow.

Bielmann's death increased the 1933 motor toll in Cook county to 732.

Overinflated Truck Tire Explodes; Driver May Die

John Owens, 28 years old, 5008 North Damen avenue, a driver for the Bowman Dairy company, was critically injured last night when an over inflated truck tire exploded while he was changing it. His skull was fractured by steel fragments from the rim, which was shattered. The accident occurred in the company's garage at 5128 South Wabash avenue. At the Chicago hospital physicians said Owens may die.

CUBANS ACCUSE U. S. BUSINESS OF PLOTTING REVOLT

[Copyright: 1933: By the Associated Press.]

HAVANA, Sept. 16.—While thousands of persons marched in Havana's streets late today shouting against the United States government and its ambassador, Sumner Welles, the Cuban secretary of war and interior in the Grau San Martin cabinet accused American business interests here of seeking the new government's overthrow.

The secretary, Antonio Guiteras, charged American and foreign business interests "are reducing wages, turning workmen loose and provoking them to strike," in a statement urging the "working masses" to back the new administration.

"Down with Welles!"

"Workmen, induced by American enterprises, are unwisely lending themselves to the overthrow of the government," Guiteras' statement said.

Meantime shouts of "Down with Sumner Welles!" "Down with American intervention!" and "Down with Yankee imperialism!" were resounding at Havana's Malecon as 8,000 Cubans paraded in tribute to Mexico's recognition of the Grau San Martin régime.

This demonstration was staged in front of the Hotel Presidente, where Welles has resided since moving from the Hotel National, in which several hundred former army and navy officers have assembled to back their demand that President Grau San Martin resign. The ambassador was not in the hotel at the time.

Business Men Call Strike.

Meanwhile, representatives of Cuba's most important business interests met in another quarter of the city and agreed to close their doors for 24 hours Tuesday as a protest against "acts of violence by the working classes."

They called upon President Grau San Martin to give way to "a government of concentration of all the revolutionary sectors," and declared themselves opposed to intervention by the United States.

They condemned, however, the "propaganda of enmity toward the government of the United States, which now goes beyond that and is interpreted as an attack on the American people."

SEEK TO AVERT CIVIL WAR

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Sept. 16.—A declaration against fighting among civilians was agreed upon early this morning by leaders of rival revolutionary groups and Havana settled back on the seawall with eyes on the endurance watching contest between 460 army and navy officers beleaguered for eight days in the National hotel and Col. Fulgencio Batista's Cuban army, which is supporting the Grau San Martin régime. The army ousted the officers from their commands last week.

The water supply to the hotel was cut off at sunrise. The officers are said to have a four days' supply. Batista's orders are to keep all visitors from entering the hotel. Telephone service has been cut off. At noon officers atop the 40 foot rock on which the hotel stands were stretching their arms and apparently wigwagging occasional signals to watchers on the boulevard just below.

20 Days' Food Supply.

Up in the hotel, one of the finest south of Chicago, salt sea winds breezed through the corridors. The officers were said to be lounging around in easy chairs making a marathon rocking chair contest of the siege. Twenty days' chuck is said to be in the ice boxes.

All night long the air was filled with rumors that the officers were going to make a sally or that the army was going to attack at the break of day, but both sides again fell back on Cuba's best loved word, manana [tomorrow].

Soldiers were redoubled at the driveway entrances and the Maine memorial was sprinkled with sleeping men in khaki at 4 o'clock this morning, snoring loudly under the bust of President McKinley, Spanish war President.

One step toward an industrial dictatorship is planned by the government in the form of a decree establishing an 8 hour day and five day week for all Cuban business where help is employed. Secretary of Justice Rios Balmaseda announced this tonight. Balmaseda said President Grau San Martin will sign a decree Monday with a view to helping the unemployed by spreading jobs. At present a 10 or 12 hour day and a 6 and even 7 day week are common in Cuba.

The growing seriousness of the labor situation in the interior of the island, where syndicalism in some communities is running amuck and where communists have grabbed local governments, has increased the need to restore and maintain peace, two tests on which depend the chances of the United States recognizing President Ramon Grau San Martin's provisional revolutionary government.

From a local newspaper correspondent in Santiago THE TRIBUNE late today received a dispatch denying a report that twelve Americans have been imprisoned in the El Cristo Mining company's property at El Cristo, Oriente. He said that strikers obstructed the highway leading from Santiago to the mines, but it was soon cleared by public works squads. The strike continues at the mines.

Former President Machado's once vast estate is dwindling. At the request of the United Shoe Machinery company of New York, $100,000 worth of machinery of the El Morro Shoe company was ordered confiscated today by the Court of Appeals. Machado was the biggest stockholder of the shoe company, which was one of the ventures with which the former dictator sought to start the industrialization of Cuba, an agricultural nation. The company owes the New York firm $48,000 for rent on 57 machines.

Machado Convicted of Fraud.

At Santiago Machado was indicted and convicted on charges of fraudulent procedures, by which he acquired four parcels of land, which he added to his estate, Ventas de Casanova. The estate covers some 260,000 acres and is one of the largest in Oriente province.

Machado was adjudged guilty by the judge of the Court of Appeals, who ordered the segregation of the land and the payment of 50,000 pesos to Compania Mercantil, Inc. The land was planted in coffee.

Dr. Baldomero Grau Triana, son-in-law of the former president, who acted as public notary on the deal, was also indicted and sentenced to pay an indemnity of $20,000. The court ordered the seizure of sufficient properties of Machado and Grau Triana to pay the indemnity. Machado is now a fugitive at Montreal, Canada.

Peace Parley Fails.

A prolonged conference between Grau San Martin and leaders of the various revolutionary groups with a view to arranging some sort of harmonized program under which all factions could unite reached no conclusions. The negotiations are to be resumed late tomorrow at the presidential palace.

Grau San Martin's proposal to Mario G. Menocal, former president Col. Carlos Mendieta, sugar planter and leader of the Conservative party; and leader of the Nationalist union, and Miguel Mariano Gomez, former mayor of Havana and chief of a party of his own, known as the Marianistas, was that all groups get behind his government, which would make cabinet changes, giving each group portfolio representation.

A counter proposal by the three old political war horses, trained in old school politics, was that for the good of Cuba Grau San Martin and his cabinet should resign. This was turned down by Dr. Grau San Martin and the meeting ended at 6 o'clock this morning after several postulates had been agreed upon.

Revolt Move Continues.

In essence these declare for avoidance of open clashes and violence, but are not to be interpreted as stopping the counter revolt movement to overturn the Grau San Martin administration. This is still continuing subterraneously, but is not revolving with vim, vigor, and virility.

The general proposals agreed upon at the conference at which also were delegates from the ABC and OCRR, secret revolutionary societies, the students' directorate and the Rotary club, which seeks to serve as a peacemaker, were:

"FIRST, to maintain the sovereignty and independence of Cuba and the right of Cubans to solve by themselves their own political problems.

"SECOND, to avoid by all means any clash between forces of the various revolutionary groups. This avoidance is indispensable to reach a pacific and harmonious solution of national problems.

Respect for Individual Rights.

"THIRD, to maintain public liberty and respect individual rights, the basis of the revolutionary program, which will permit unrestricted development of all natural activities proper to effective democracy.

"FOURTH, to recognize the necessity of consolidating the government through support of all sectors of public opinion.

"FIFTH, if the political problem is to be settled in accordance with these principles, all other national problems will be solved with relative facility."

Welles Explains Stand.

At the palace the appearance of United States Ambassador Sumner Welles before the radical students' directorate early this morning to explain his position and to deny reports that he has shown partiality towards groups working for the reinstatement of the Carlos Manuel de Cespedes government, which was thrown out by the army revolt two weeks ago, brought smiles of satisfaction.

The meeting, which the students say was at Welles' request, caused some astonishment among revolutionary groups. The palace jumped to the conclusion that it indicates that Washington is getting ready to recognize the Grau San Martin government.

SPAIN PREPARES FOR REVOLT BY RADICALS; TROOPS HELD READY

MADRID, Sept. 17.—[Sunday]—[U. P.]—Madrid was tense early today with rumors of possible uprisings and the civil guards were ordered to remain in their barracks. One unconfirmed report said several sergeants at the Madrid army barracks had attempted a revolt.

Santiago Casares Quiroga, minister of the interior, issued a statement confirming that precautions had been taken to "prevent possible incidents" between left-wing elements and the Agrarian party of the right. The revolt was believed to be plotted by Socialists, syndicalists, and to be army elements, anarchists and some communists, designed to overthrow the conservative government of Premier Alejandro Lerroux, who took office only a few days ago.

The minister of interior remained at his office all night. It was understood that he was maintaining constant contact with police throughout the country. Detachments of civil guards were stationed in the Communications building. All persons entering the building were subjected to close questioning and searched.

Crisis in Cuban Situation Expected Within 48 Hours

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—(AP)—The administration was described authoritatively today as expecting a crisis in the Cuban situation within 48 hours that would determine definitely the strength of the revolutionary government and what part, if any, the United States will play.

A decision might come well within that period, it was said in the same informed quarter, as to whether the régime of Provisional President Grau San Martin can hope eventually to restore order over the island.

While armed American landing parties were still held in readiness off half a dozen Cuban ports, Secretary Hull today reported a slight brightening in what he termed the fundamental situation there. He declined, however, to discuss the background of his belief.

After a conference with President Roosevelt during the day, Hull said matters other than the Cuban situation took him to the White House and that questions concerning the island had hardly been discussed.

Several Americans are known to be seeking protection at the Guantanamo naval base. At the state department it was made clear, however, that conditions in the interior generally were not considered sufficiently serious to dispatch a general request for United States citizens to move toward the warship protected coast.

Hull's statement that fundamental conditions appeared more hopeful was made after a telephone conversation with Ambassador Sumner Welles. The American envoy conferred early today in Havana with students supporting the Grau San Martin government.

The secretary of state said the meeting with the student directorate had been for a mutual exchange of information, and that the desire for such an exchange had impressed him.

It was assumed in many quarters here that the Grau San Martin students had sought the support of this country for the revolutionary government. Hull added, however, that he could not say either pro or con whether the student leaders had sought a promise of recognition by the United States.

Another destroyer has been sent to Manati, Cuba, a port not hitherto guarded, but elsewhere the line of ships remained little changed.

DEMANDS PUBLIC SAVING IN NAME OF CONSTITUTION

C. W. Hadley Sees Danger to American System.

The issue of governmental extravagance through bureaucracy was raised yesterday as a feature of the observance of Constitution week.

Speaking at the opening fall meeting of the Aurora chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Charles W. Hadley, special assistant attorney general of Illinois and a constitutional authority, closed an appeal for preservation of the basic law of the land with a demand for economy.

He said the present indications are that the federal deficit for the present year will be five billion dollars unless the national administration reduces the cost of governmental operation.

Says Congress Ignores Crisis.

"In spite of this," he continued, "the congress that has just adjourned seemed to have no conception of the seriousness of the situation so far as the nation or the people are concerned.

"Politics and bureaucracy were entrenched and they were resisting the rising demand of the people for relief from taxation and the cost of governmental operation. The situation calls for the united coöperation and support of each and every loyal citizen to stand unitedly for a reduction in the costs of government, the retirement of boards, bureaus and commissions and the restriction of their powers.

"Unless the tide of public expenditures begins to decrease, this nation, founded upon a constitution that recognized the rights of the individual above those of the state, will become increasingly more, from day to day, a socialistic state.

Urges Rule of Republic.

"We hear discussions from time to time of the appointment of a dictator, of the acts of the dictators and the rule of the dictatorship. We have talked of the super-man. Thus have the great nations of the past passed away. Our nation can be saved only by returning to the principles of a republic by turning from the mob-mindedness of democracy to the rule of the republic.

"The hour has come for a reenlistment of all patriots in a militant interest in behalf of the people, in the cause of honest, efficient and economical government, and a departure from those principles and those teachings that have lead us far from the provisions of our constitution."

The speaker also warned against the growth of communism.

"The twenty year radical program that was launched fourteen years ago," he said, "has now reached the stage of action. And while times of depression are distressing, yet they are but a flesh wound upon our body politic and in nowise dangerous unless we permit the wound to become infected with the poison of communism and disloyalty."

The meeting was held at the residence of Mrs. Charles Borngreve.

143,000 N. Y. CITY EMPLOYES FACE DEFAULTS ON PAY

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The 143,000 city employes face three payless pay days before the November election, unless the bankers to whom the city has applied for a $72,000,000 short term loan recede from their present stand, it was learned tonight on excellent authority in the financial district.

Word has been carried to the city administration that the Untermyer $40,000,000 revenue plan is not sufficiently impressive to warrant any further extension of bank credit.

As the situation stood tonight, the probability of a default of the Oct. 1, Oct. 15, and Nov. 1 pay rolls was so strong that Tammany, in desperation, was considering the most drastic measures to head off disaster. They feared its effect on the municipal election.

Army Disbursing Officer Given 5 Years in Prison

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Robert T. Young, 59, former federal disbursing officer for the Indiana National Guard, today was sentenced to five years in federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., by Judge Robert C. Baltzell of federal court, for embezzlement of government money.

Grandparents, Wed 49 Years, Celebrate with Bride and Groom

A bride and groom of 49 years ago shared honors with a couple just married in Highland Park yesterday. In the picture are Mr. and Mrs. W. Frank Workman of Springfield (at left), and the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. John Roderick Rogers. The bride, who was Peggy Glidden, chose Sept. 16 for her wedding so that she and her husband can celebrate their first anniversary next year on her grandparents' golden wedding day.

MARRIED ON 49TH ANNIVERSARY OF GRANDPARENTS

BY JUDITH CASS.

A bride and bridegroom of 49 years ago shared honors with a couple who had just been married at the wedding reception of Mr. and Mrs. John Roderick Rogers yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Rogers was formerly Peggy Glidden. Mr. and Mrs. W. Frank Workman of Springfield, Ill., who received with their granddaughter and her new husband, were celebrating their 49th wedding anniversary.

Miss Glidden had chosen Sept. 16 as her wedding date so that she could be married on the anniversary of the wedding of her grandparents and so that next year she and her husband could celebrate their first anniversary when Mr. and Mrs. Workman observed their golden wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Workman, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers and the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Geer Rogers of Ausable Forks, N. Y., and Mr. Glidden received the hundreds of guests yesterday in the library of Mr. Glidden's spacious home in Montgomery road in Highland Park after the marriage ceremony, which took place at 4:30 o'clock in Trinity church. The Rev. Christoph Keller, the rector, officiated.

Carries Ivory Prayer Book.

The bride, a lovely blonde, was radiant in a gown of white bagheera velvet made simply with a long, full train, and a belt embroidered in pearls. A pearl headdress held in place a short, circular tulle face veil and a longer tulle veil, which fell over the train in back. Instead of a bouquet she carried an ivory prayer book that had belonged to her late mother.

Married in La Grange.

One of the important fall weddings in La Grange took place last night when Miss Jane Kidston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Howland Kidston, became the bride of George Tracy Bunker Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Bunker. The service was read at 8:30 o'clock in the Emmanuel Episcopal church, Dean Irvine Goddard officiating. Following the ceremony there was a reception at the La Grange Country club. The bride wore a white satin gown and a long tulle veil held in place by a coronet of seed pearls and orange blossoms. Her flowers were white orchids and valley lilies.

The marriage yesterday morning of Miss Margaret Emily Lynde, daughter of Cornelius Lynde of Winnetka, to Eugene Vincent O'Brien, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. O'Brien of Winnetka, was a very quiet one, with only the members of the immediate families present.

The ceremony was performed at church in Winnetka. Gowned in white satin with a full veil of tulle the bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attended by her debutante stepsister, Miss Eleanor Janney, and the bridegroom's two sisters, Miss Eleanor O'Brien and Miss Josephine O'Brien. The ushers were the bride's brother, Samuel Adams Lynde, and Timothy O'Brien, a brother of the bridegroom.

After the service a wedding breakfast was served at the Lynde home at 864 Bryant avenue, Winnetka. After a short motor trip Mr. O'Brien and his bride are to be at home at the Marlborough hotel in Deming place.

Debutantes Make Bows.

The debutantes who made their formal bows to society yesterday afternoon were Miss Marie Louise Gardner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Gardner, and Miss Jean O'Brien, the daughter of the Howard Vincent O'Briens.

Winnetka society folk and many more friends from Chicago and towns along the north shore made their calls at the handsome old fashioned house of the O'Briens at 790 Bryant avenue in Winnetka and then moved on to the Indian Hill club where Mr. and Mrs. Gardner were presenting their debutante daughter at a tea dance.

Between the hours of 4 and 7 Miss Gardner, stunning in a gown of American Beauty bagheera velvet, with a sheath bouquet of matching roses, received with her parents in the spacious lounge of the club.

Miss O'Brien wore a dress of gold faille designed on old fashioned lines, in keeping with her background, which was the drawing room of her parents' Victorian house. The "dust" ruffles of the dress drew much comment, especially from the older guests, who remembered having worn them many decades before. Mrs. O'Brien, wearing a gown of green bagheera velvet, received with her daughter.

BANDITS TAKE CAR AND CASH.

Morris Gertler, 3317 West Division street, surrendered $38 and his automobile to two bandits who forced his car to the curb at California avenue and 18th street early yesterday.

EDITOR TO TAKE SENATOR'S PLACE ON DUELING FIELD

Hector Orrego, prominent physician, encountered Senator José Maza while both were attending the burial of a mutual friend. Orrego started an attack with his fists on Maza, who last January shot and killed Orrego's brother and later married his victim's widow.

Friends separated the combatants. Then Maza challenged Orrego to a duel, naming as his seconds former Foreign Minister Jorge Matte and Cornelio Saavedra, chairman of the board of the newspaper La Nacion.

Orrego refused to duel, stating that Maza was not worthy of being met on the field of honor. In accordance with the dueling code, Saavedra then challenged Orrego, appointing as his seconds Arturo Meza, director of La Nacion, and Gen. Bravo. Orrego has not yet named his seconds.

MARY GARDEN SELLS HER HOME ON THE RIVIERA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NICE, France, Sept. 16.—Mary Garden's villa at Beaulieu-sur-Mer was sold today along with all its furnishings, books, and wine cellar.

For many years the famous opera star made an annual sojourn at the villa, which is called Les Galets, but she recently told friends she did not plan to come to the Riviera any more and thus had no more use for the seaside home.

A number of rare books were auctioned today. They brought about $500.

MINE OWNERS SIGN UP CODE FOR ROOSEVELT

End Long Squabble on Wages, Unions.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The soft coal code was signed today and tonight by almost all of the mine owners in the industry. When the last—and most important—operators had signed the pact Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, wearily announced that he was going to bed. He will take the code to the White House tomorrow for the signature of President Roosevelt.

With the President's approval, which is regarded as a certainty because he has followed every step of the recent negotiations, the code will become effective on Sept. 25.

Two small groups of operators have not signed the code as yet, and it is believed the code will go to the President without their signatures. These non-signers are the operators in the Alabama and West Kentucky fields.

Minority Holding Out.

Gen. Johnson declared, however, that the code was approved by operators representing more than 90 per cent of the bituminous coal tonnage produced in the country, and with such a majority of unanimity, the general added, the code will be enforced upon the minority.

The last operators to sign were those of the southern and northern Appalachian fields. They had been most aggressive in opposition to the code, resisting particularly the labor angles of the pact.

Gen. Johnson had spent the whole day at the Shoreham hotel seeking to bring about an agreement between the Appalachian operators and the United Mine Workers. In addition to procuring an agreement on the code, it was necessary to gain a common approval between the two forces on a labor contract.

The administrator said that all the major issues in the contract had been ironed out and that only two minor details remained to be settled.

Sign as Cameras Click.

When this had been achieved, Gen. Johnson and a group of the leading operators who had participated in all of the negotiations went on down to the NRA offices, and there, while news photographers recorded the historic event, the officers of the two associations put their signatures on the code.

They were J. D. A. Morrow, president, and W. A. Jones, secretary of the Northern Coal Control association, and E. C. Mahan, president and H. R. Hawthorn, secretary, of the Southern Smokeless Appalachian association.

A list of the other associations of coal operators who signed the code during the day follows:

Southwest Coals, the Arkansas, Oklahoma Smokeless bureau; Coal Producers' association of Illinois, Coal Trade association of Indiana, Indiana Coal Operators' association, Iowa Coal Operators' association, Illinois Coal Operators' association, Rocky Mountain Pacific Coal Producers' association, and six independent companies in various sections of the country which are not members of associations.

A few technical changes were made in the code during the day, but Gen. Johnson said it will go to the President substantially as it was made public last night.

May Start Court Fight.

The holding out of the Alabama operators was expected, but there is some apprehension in the NRA ranks over that. The Alabama owners have retained Forney Johnston, a well known constitutional lawyer, to handle their case. It is believed that Mr. Johnston will seek an injunction to restrain application of the code to his clients. In that event the constitutionality of the whole NRA program would be put before the United States Supreme court.

The west Kentucky operators held out, it is reported, because the code does not fix the wage scales in their territory. Illinois operators, paying a $5 minimum scale, have protested against the $3.84 rate allowed to the west Kentucky operators in the original Johnson code.

Because of this dispute, which could not be settled immediately, the scales for the Kentucky district were not included, a provision being made that the President would insert the scales, before the code becomes effective, for this and other districts in which the wage rates have not been settled.

The two largest groups of operators in the northern and southern Appalachian territory, were among the last to give their approval. A question as to the manner of paying miners, whether by weight or by volume of coal produced, had caused a delay in the giving of approval by these groups.

Harriman Seems Satisfied.

A possibility that the serious friction which has developed between the industrial advisory board and the labor advisory board of NRA may be eased was seen after a visit to the White House by Henry I. Harriman, member of the industrial board and president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Reports had been current that Mr. Harriman, strongly resentful of the efforts of the American Federation of Labor to unionize American industry, would resign from the NRA board because the Johnson administration refused to aid industry in resisting the labor propaganda.

Roosevelt Blocks Statement.

Gen. Johnson tried to induce the labor and industrial boards to get together in the issuance of a statement clarifying the labor provisions of the NRA, but when after a long discussion of the subject such a statement was agreed upon President Roosevelt refused to permit its publication.

This brought Mr. Harriman into an even more difficult situation. In the beginning of Mr. Roosevelt's bid for the presidency Mr. Harriman had been one of his first supporters. He supported the NRA legislation, despite the misgivings and protests of many members of the national chamber of commerce. With the President vetoing the "treaty of peace," as the statement agreed to by both labor and industrial advisory boards was called, Mr. Harriman found all his efforts to obtain a satisfactory settlement of the labor disputes were in vain.

Will Stay on Board.

After leaving the White House today Mr. Harriman, in better mood, breezily declared that there "was not a word of truth" in the rumors of his impending resignation from the industrial board.

It was learned that the President had indicated to Mr. Harriman that a White House statement on the labor situation may be issued in a day or two. Meanwhile Mr. Harriman expressed himself as satisfied with the President's attitude.

The industrialist declared that the language contained in the automobile code, reciting the rights of employers to hire and fire workers upon a merit basis, are applicable to any other code which may be approved by the NRA.

Mr. Harriman's views on the NRA will be expressed fully next Wednesday night in Chicago. He will address a dinner of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Roosevelt Mine Code Features

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—[U.P.] Following are the principal points in the code for the bituminous coal industry agreed upon last night by representatives of the inudstry and the recovery administration:

Provides for fixing of minimum prices; prescribes a maximum 40 hour work week.

Sets basic minimum wages for underground workers ranging from $3.75 to $5.63 in 16 districts.

Recognizes right of miners to organize.

Creates regional and national boards to govern the industry and settle labor disputes.

Orders Fair Market Prices.

The new code retains the minimum price provisions contained in the code drafted by NRA a week ago. It forbids sale of coal at less than "fair market prices" to be determined by regional marketing agencies and subject to government review.

The provision for a flat maximum 40 hour week replaces a plan for a 32 hours week for 26 weeks and a 40 hour week for 26 weeks thereafter. Hours of work may be shortened if a majority of workers at a mine desire to share work with unemployed men.

Under the code the NRA will study practicability of shortening hours and making further adjustments in wages.

For Meeting Next Year.

Representatives of operators and miners will meet with NRA officials on Jan. 5, 1934, to consider what changes should be made.

Basic daily minimum rates of pay for skilled inside workers and common outside labor were prescribed with the understanding "that other classifications of employment will maintain their customary differentials and that payments for work on a tonage of other price work basis will maintain their customary relationship to the payments on a time basis provided in said basic minimum rates."

Miners working on a tonnage basis are given the right to have check weighmen of their own choosing. No employé shall be required to live in homes rented from the mining company or to trade at company stores. No person less than 17 years old shall be employed underground and no one less than 16 shall work outside.

CHICAGO COAL INTERESTS HAIL SIGNING OF CODE

Coal operators here hailed the signing of their industry's code as a step toward bringing peace to the troubled Illinois coal fields and guaranteeing expansion in markets and employment in this district.

Stuyvesant Peabody, head of one of the largest operating coal companies in this state, said the code would be most helpful in placing the Illinois fields on a fair competitive basis with nonunion fields. Because of increased labor costs to nonunion mines, he pointed out, they will be forced to raise prices while Illinois, now paying top wages, can sell its product at the same price charged before.

During the last two years more than 20 persons were killed and hundreds injured in the factional strife between the United Mine Workers, the old union, and a new faction, the Progressive Miners, for control of the fields in this state. The dispute had its genesis in the termination of the $6.10 basic wage scale in March, 1932.

Citizens went armed for months as strikes spread through the coal fields. Bombings, shootings, sluggings, and fights from ambush followed. Special deputies were unable to cope with the situation and finally the National Guard was called out. There seemed to have been an armed truce in effect recently between unions, each hoping that the coal code would produce lasting peace.

CODE PROGRESS QUIETING COAL MINE DISORDER

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 16.—[U. P.]—Word from Washington that a soft coal code finally had been agreed upon brought hopes today that western Pennsylvania's coal mine "holiday" would end immediately.

The strike originally was called to force operators to sign a code and recognize the United Mine Workers of America. With those purposes accomplished, it was believed the miners would now heed the advice of their union leaders and go back into the pits, but not until signatures are affixed.

The agreement also was expected to forestall strikes by other thousands in counties not yet seriously affected.

RING OF FORGERS HUNTED AFTER GIRL CONFESSES

Miss Lorraine Dissette, 22 years old, 6035 Drexel avenue, told the police last night that she had been forced to cash checks for a ring of forgers. She named Stanley Russell, 27 years old, who lived at her address, as the leader of the ring. Police were seeking him last night. William Mueller, 33 years old, 2138 South Wabash avenue, was arrested at his home after she named him as a member of the ring. Charles Miller, 26 years old, 4512 South Paulina street, and two other men are also being sought. Miss Dissette was arrested Thursday in a West Madison street store when she tried to cash a check for $27.

DEPUTIES GUARD MILK SUPPLIES; STRIKE RECEDES

Milk shipments into Chicago were almost back to normal yesterday as promised reënforcements to strikers failed to materialize and more and more farmers with supplies pushed through the picket lines. Disorder in a mild form was centered in McHenry county, and even there the strike appeared to be slipping. It was reported that the strike leaders were conferring on whether to give up the fight.

At Harvard, in McHenry county, where there was serious trouble on Friday, a force of 45 deputies under Sheriff Lester Edinger opened the highways through lines drawn by 500 pickets and about 25,000 pounds of milk was delivered to receiving plants. The first truck to enter the town was that of Ivan Peters, whose milk was dumped on Friday.

According to Ole Stalheim, director of the McHenry county district of the Pure Milk association, every member will receive ample protection today in taking milk to Harvard.

Await O. K. on Price Rise.

Meanwhile, approval was awaited from Washington on the price increase to 17,000 farmer members of the Pure Milk association, and the resultant increase from 10 to 11 cents in the quart price to the consumer. Under the new price pact agreed upon by the association and the distributors, farmers would receive approximately $2.10 a hundred pounds for milk to be sold at retail in bottles, and $1.45 a hundred pounds for milk to be converted into cream.

During the day the strike forces were in control at Woodstock and Crystal Lake, and many anti-strike farmers had their milk dumped. Last night, however, according to Pure Milk association headquarters, the producers at both places voted to call off the strike and ship the usual amounts to Chicago today.

Consider Strike Ended.

As both places have been in the front ranks as strike areas, the association said they considered the strike definitely ended.

The Borden Farm Products plant at Woodstock was closed yesterday, but a re-opening was planned for today.

It was learned that one of the strike leaders at Woodstock is Gardner Knapp, who is superintendent of the McHenry county poor farm.

Despite heavy forces of pickets at Ringwood in McHenry county, deliveries were pushed through by association members, aided by farmers from untroubled areas and state highway policemen.

At Huntley, in the same county, an attempt to halt delivery was balked by 40 automobile loads of Pure Milk association members from southern Wisconsin and deputy sheriffs. They guarded the large shipping platform in the town, which has no plant.

Milk Sent In by Railroad.

Eight tank cars of Wisconsin milk passed through the strike towns of Woodstock, Crystal Lake, and Cary, on the Chicago and North Western railroad. Pickets who saw the cars recalled that E. L. Bost, the strike leader, had told them the Wisconsin farmers were on a sympathy strike. Bost's promise that he would bring 1,000 Wisconsin farmers to reinforce the picket lines had also failed to materialize.

Hampshire, in Kane county, which had been closed to milk delivery since the strike began early Wednesday, opened up yesterday.

Sheriff Lester Tiffany of Lake county sent deputies into the southeast corner of the county to convoy trucks into Cook county. Two armed deputies rode in each convoy car.

The price agreement on which Washington's approval is expected followed three weeks of negotiation. Copies of the revised contract were sent to the farm administration, which is a party to the milk marketing code now in force.

The new agreement made an immediate break in the ranks of McHenry and Kane county farmers, it was reported. Dr. Fred D. Walmsley, for the distributors, and Don N. Geyer, for the Pure Milk association, asserted that the farmer would get the entire benefit of the price increases.

Admitting the association members to the cream market is an important advance of their interests, it was said. At present the farmers receive $1.75 a hundred pounds for milk sold for retail, and about 85 to 90 cents a hundred pounds for the remainder of their production, classed as surplus.

Club Members Race Aboard Fishing Schooners

Members of the Cliff Dwellers aboard the fishing schooner Bluenose, as they raced members of the Tavern club who were aboard the schooner Thebaud yesterday. From left to right in the picture are: Herbert E. Hyde, chairman of the event; Mrs. William Wallace Kimball of Hinsdale; Thomas H. Talmadge, president of the Cliff Dwellers, and Mrs. Herbert E. Hyde. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Speed Contest a Tie

Capt. Angus Walters of the Bluenose and Capt. Ben Pine of the Thebaud had agreed that there would be no race, but speed tests were made for the entertainment of the guests. The results of these tests, the guests insisted, was a tie.

On the Thebaud a man provided a thrill by jumping overboard, but his jump was prearranged, and in nine seconds a dory was launched and he was thrown a life saver. He was a Tavern waiter, Rudy Hofer. Passengers on the Thebaud practiced trap shooting by breaking balloons.

FIND MILLIONAIRE IN RAID ON GIRL'S ROOM, WIFE SAYS

Mrs. Tillie Blum, 37 years old, 3530 Sheridan road, yesterday filed a supplemental bill for separate maintenance in the Superior court against Harry Blum, head of the National Brokerage company, 35 East Wacker drive, charging him with misconduct with one of his former employés.

The co-respondent, according to the bill, is Miss Lavada Long, formerly employed as a switch board operator at the brokerage company, which deals in liquor certificates.

Girl's Room Raided.

The bill, filed by the law firm of Socrates, Davis, and Cohen, alleged that on Sept. 9, Lewis Dannenberg, a private detective employed by Mrs. Blum, raided Miss Long's apartment near the Belmont hotel, where Blum lives, and found Blum and Miss Long together.

Blum several months ago filed a divorce bill against his wife, charging her with desertion. She filed a separate maintenance bill, alleging cruelty and charging that Blum lavished money and gifts on a woman, who was not identified until the present petition as Miss Long. After hearings before Master in Chancery Martin Gorski on Blum's income, during which it was brought out that he was worth nearly $2,000,000, Mrs. Blum was granted temporary alimony of $100 a week.

Left Second Time, She Says.

According to Attorney Benjamin Davis, Blum then pleaded for a reconciliation and Mrs. Blum returned to him. During the reconciliation, the supplemental bill alleged, Blum continually talked of Miss Long, and again left his wife June 4.

The alimony had been discontinued during the time the Blums were reconciled, and the supplemental bill asks that it be renewed and increased. The Blums were married Jan. 4, 1921.

GIRL HELPS ROB HOTEL.

Two robbers accompanied by a girl companion obtained $5 early yesterday from Clifton R. Mott, night clerk at the Rokeby hotel, 3831 Rokeby street, and threatened a guest, Richard Ulm, who was in the lobby.

TO OPERATE ON GIRL TO REMOVE SEED FROM LUNG

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 17 [Sunday.]—(AP)—Two year old Jane Austin, raced here from Lubbock, Tex., by airplane and train with a watermelon seed in her left lung, arrived early today and immediately was rushed to a hospital in a waiting surgeon's automobile. Mrs. Harvey Austin, her mother, said, "Jane stood the trip better than we expected."

At Temple hospital, where the child was taken, attendants after a preliminary examination announced it was not likely that an attempt would be made to remove the seed before "three or four days."

DAIRY INDUSTRY GROUPS TO HOLD 2 CONVENTIONS

Problems resulting from the government's ventures into market control will hold the spotlight when two branches of the dairy industry hold international conventions this week in Chicago.

The International Association of Milk Dealers, with 2,000 members from the United States and Canada attending, will open a three day convention at the Palmer house on Thursday. The administration policy is expected to be defined on this day by Dr. Clyde L. King, head of the dairy section of the agricultural adjustment administration. Dr. King was formerly arbiter for the industry in this area.

Efforts of other governments to stabilize the industry will be described by T. H. Price of the United Dairies, Ltd., London, and George Hogg of the Guaranteed Pure Milk company, Ltd., Montreal.

The A. A. A. will also be the main topic at the three day convention of the International Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers opening at the Palmer house tomorrow.

SUIT CHARGES PROFIT PLOT IN STANDARD OIL

17 Present and Former Officials Named.

A suit charging 17 present and former directors or officers of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana with making six to eight million dollars in "secret profits" through breaches of trust was filed in the federal district court yesterday.

Chief among the defendants is Col. Robert W. Stewart, former chairman of the board of the company, who was ousted by the Rockefeller interests in 1929 following a senate investigation of the forming of the Continental Trading Company, Ltd., to wipe out the Republican national committee's deficit.

After the filing of the suit, L. L. Stephens, general counsel for Standard Oil of Indiana, issued a statement that the action was "without grounds, and apparently an effort to gain publicity or embarrass officials of the company."

Suit Begun by Stockholder.

The suit was filed by Attorneys Harrison F. Fryberger of New York and Erwin Seago of Chicago on behalf of Frederick W. Wilhelmi of Minnesota, who owns 22 shares of common stock in Standard of Indiana. The suit seeks an accounting of certain stock transactions between 1925 and 1931, and the recovery of what may be shown to be due the stockholders.

The petition charges that the defendants "committed so great a number of violations of duty and so many breaches of trust that they have forfeited all right to compensation for their services rendered." It says that Stewart was granted a pension of $75,000 a year when he was removed from office and that he continues to draw this pension.

Basis of the Charges.

The charges center on the organization of the Pan American Eastern Petroleum company for the purpose of acquiring control of the Pan American Petroleum and Transport company and the organization of the Panamex company preliminary to a plan for selling these properties to the Standard Oil company.

Stewart is charged with subscribing for 150,000 shares of the Pan American Petroleum and Transport company in 1925, of which 40,000 shares were allotted to directors of Standard of Indiana, according to the petition. These shares, it is alleged, were purchased for $10 each, and for each four of them one share of stock in Standard of Indiana was received.

At the time of the sale, in 1927, Standard of Indiana shares were selling at $73, so that the defendants made a profit of $33 on each four shares of Pan American Petroleum and Transport stock, the bill alleges.

Huge Secret Profit Alleged.

The petition further charges that "during this same period and prior to January, 1931, the said Standard Oil company [Indiana] acquired from said Panamex company and its directors at the price of $86 a share many thousand shares of said Pan American Petroleum and Transport company stock . . . and that said directors thereby secured to themselves a secret profit of somewhere between six and eight million dollars."

Other defendants named in the suit are E. G. Seubert, now president of Standard of Indiana; W. M. Burton, William E. Warwick, Allan Jackson, R. H. McElroy, Edwin J. Bullock, T. J. Thompson, Amos Ball, Robert E. Humphreys, Charles J. Barkdull, Melvin A. Traylor, Bruce Johnstone, Robert E. Wilson, A. S. Peake, Louis L. Stephens and Max G. Paulus.

The petition states, however, that defendants Traylor, Johnstone, Wilson, Peake and Paulus, all members of the board, were not directors during the years from 1925 to 1930.

Diversity of citizenship is the ground on which the suit was filed in federal court.

AIMEE DEPARTS TODAY TO START THEATER TOUR

Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton will leave Chicago by train this afternoon for New York to start an evangelistic tour in several eastern theaters following a four day rest here incognito at the Belmont hotel. Her husband, who instituted a suit for divorce when he started a vaudeville career recently, is appearing at a Brooklyn theater.

The Los Angeles evangelist said last night that she has no plans to see her husband. She refused to discuss their rift further. Hutton told reporters when he was in Chicago a week ago that his wife wanted a reconciliation, but she shook her head to that suggestion. While in Chicago this time, she spent her time resting and shopping, Mrs. Hutton said.

Her eastern tour starts at the Capitol theater in New York next Friday and will include engagements in Washington and Philadelphia, she said. An offer has been made for her to return to Chicago for an engagement at the Chicago theater.

NO MONKEYSHINES

SOMETIMES people ask us what "tricks" enable A & P to sell good food at such ridiculously low prices. A little investigation, however, soon convinces them that there are no tricks in our trade. A sound economic policy regulates our business: We buy direct from the original producers of food; cut down distribution costs to the bone; and keep only a few cents in a dollar for our own profit—passing on to the housewife, in lower food prices, the money we save by efficient handling of food.

No monkeyshines here. A & P's business method is an open secret.

TWO SUSPECTS IN FUR ROBBERY FREED ON BONDS

Speedy action was taken last night to release Irving Beigel and David Grossman, both 30 years old, fur dealers from New York, who are accused of the theft of $50,000 worth of furs there.

Judge Joseph H. McGarry during the day issued fugitive warrants for the men at the request of the New York authorities and set a hearing for next Wednesday. Meanwhile, the judge ruled, they might leave jail if they would furnish bonds of $50,000 each.

In the evening the bonds were scheduled and approved by Municipal Judge Harold P. O'Connell. Examination of the schedule filed for Beigel's release showed that the only property guaranteeing his appearance is real estate owned by Mrs. Lena Derien, 6152 South Morgan street, and valued at only $18,000, 1928 valuation. For Grossman's release the schedule showed property valued at $75,000.

Both men, in whose rooms in a loop hotel five trunks filled with furs were found, were allowed their freedom.

Leon Waitz, 3550 Sunnyside avenue, owner of a fur store here, who also was arrested, was freed when police became convinced he was not involved in the theft.

SEN. WHEELER, 4 OF FAMILY HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Car Overturns on Way to Washington, D. C.

Glasgow, Mont., Sept. 16.—(AP)—United States Senator Burton K. Wheeler suffered a slight concussion and other injuries when his car careened wildly and overturned on a highway 24 miles west of Glasgow today. Tonight he was seemingly out of danger.

The senior Montana senator, Mrs. Wheeler, three of their children and a Filipino servant, all suffering injuries of varying degree, were treated in Glasgow.

Senator Wheeler was unconscious when removed from the wreckage of his sedan. Recovering consciousness he was unable to say what occurred. A shattered rear tire, however, was believed to have thrown the heavy machine out of his control.

Passerby Helps Them.

Charles Dawley, a passerby, brought the party to this city for medical attention. The Wheelers were motoring from their summer home on Lake McDonald to Washington.

The car overturned twice and landed upright, throwing May Ann Wheeler, 8, to the ground. She, however, escaped with only slight abrasions.

An extensive examination of the senator here disclosed a head injury and cuts, and a bruised leg. His two sons, Richard, 14, and Edward, 19, were cut and bruised.

Mrs. Wheeler escaped with a wrenched back and cuts, and the Filipino house boy, Simeon Arboleda, was merely shaken.

En Route for Conferences.

Senator Wheeler, vigorous advocate of remonetization, had planned to drive directly to Washington for conferences on monetary problems and to meet with others of the Montana congressional delegation. The family spent last night at Havre.

When a complete examination indicated there were no grave injuries suffered by the party, Senator Wheeler announced they would rest here until the sedan is repaired and then would go on to Williston, N. D., for a day and thence to Washington.

POLITICAL LEADER SHOT TO DEATH; SON IS DETAINED

Camden, N. J., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Jacob Schiller, 72 year old political leader, was shot and killed tonight. Police detained his son, William, 32.

Police said the shooting occurred after young Schiller's wife fled to her father-in-law's home after a quarrel. Details were lacking because the son's wife, Mrs. Augusta Schiller, the only witness, became hysterical and was ordered taken to a hospital.

The elder Schiller was a political aid of former United States Senator David Baird, one time Republican leader of New Jersey, whose son and namesake now is a political figure in South Jersey.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Police today were searching for Mrs. Sylvia Millie Wilson, 26, bride of Dr. Charles Andrew Louis Wilson, 61. Mrs. Millie Belcher, mother of the missing young woman, said she had been unable to locate her daughter for five weeks. Nor could Dr. Wilson be reached, it was said. Some declared Dr. Wilson described himself "as a second Christ."

BLOW TO LONG RECALLS NOSE PULLING MEDAL

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 16.—[U. P.]—Casting of a medal to commemorate the attack on Senator Huey Long recalled today a precedent in high official circles.

Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, commander of the Seventh corps here, displayed a volume relating that in June, 1889, a gold medal was "presented to Maj. George A. Armes by 100 subscribers in approval of his pulling Gov. Beaver's nose."

The book, "Ups and Downs of an Army Officer," says the incident leading to the presentation occurred during the inauguration parade of President Harrison on March 4, 1889.

Gov. Beaver of Pennsylvania had assigned Armes to the escort of the Vice President's carriage. Later he rescinded the order. Armes tried to ride anyway, and Beaver's staff officers seized him.

In a hotel lobby Armes demanded an apology. It was not forthcoming. He tweaked the gubernatorial nose.

Learning of the incident, 100 citizens of Pittsburgh contributed $300 for the medal presented to the major.

Court martialed and dismissed from the service, Armes' sentence was commuted by President Harrison.

CHINAMAN SPENDS 53 YEARS IN WILDS; FORGETS LANGUAGE

VANCOUVER, B. C., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Ah Look, who went into the wilds of northern British Columbia 53 years ago in a gold rush and stayed there until now, "came out" today to go home to China.

Ah Look mushed up the Fraser river in 1880 and over the historic Cariboo trail to Manson creek in the hinterland. He panned his gold and made his pile.

When Ah Look emerged at Smithers he saw for the first time in his life electric lights and horseless carriages. He couldn't speak English and he had forgotten his native tongue, but he could talk five Indian dialects.

INCORPORATION PAPERS FILED TO RESTORE OPERA

Incorporation papers were filed yesterday at Springfield for the Chicago Grand Opera company, heralding the restoration to the city of operatic entertainment for the coming winter. Incorporators listed in the application are George C. Lytton, William C. Grunow, Postmaster Ernest J. Kruetgen, Joseph M. Imburgio, Julius Smietanka and Dr. Eugene J. Chesrow.

Further organization work will be facilitated by the application for incorporation, it was explained. Herbert M. Johnson, former vice president of the Chicago Civic Opera company, is general director of the new company, which revives the name of the original opera organization here. Gennaro Papi, famed as the conductor of the Metropolitan and Ravinia Opera companies, will be musical director of the Chicago Grand Opera.

Many of those formerly identified with the Chicago Civic Opera will be included in the board of trustees of its successor, as well as prominent Chicageans representing large groups which are lending their support.

SCHOOLS REOPEN TOMORROW UNDER ECONOMY PLAN

Bogan Minimizes Reports of Possible Disorder.

Supt. William J. Bogan announced yesterday that preparations had been completed for the opening of the Chicago public schools tomorrow. He expressed hope that the opening under the sweeping changes made necessary by the school board's economy program would be calm.

"I am counting on the good sense of the parents, pupils, and teachers," asserted Mr. Bogan, "to coöperate with school officials so that the educational program may be carried on smoothly. There have been rumors of trouble makers planning to upturn the apple cart, but I don't believe anything of a serious nature will develop."

500,000 Pupils to Return.

Approximately 500,000 pupils will go back to their classrooms after the summer vacation. The teaching force, reduced by the retrenchment action of the board, will total 12,275, or 1,467 fewer teachers than last year. There will be 8,400 teachers and principals in the elementary schools and 3,875 in the high schools.

When the children return to their classrooms more than 1,000 teachers, temporarily out of employment through the economy program, will enroll at Chicago Normal college for special intensive courses. After completing their studies in the college the teachers will take examinations in order to fill vacancies as they occur in the system. About 600 vacancies through death, retirement, and other causes occur each school year.

Buildings and Boilers Ready.

Don C. Rogers, director of research and building survey, stated that the physical equipment of the reorganized school system was in good shape to take care of the influx of children. Engineers and janitors have been tuning up the boilers in the school plants during the last week.

Under the revamped educational plan junior high schools have been abandoned and ten of the plants have been converted into senior high schools, making 34 in all. The number of elementary schools has been increased from 303 to 337. As a result of additional housing facilities made available by the economy program thousands of pupils who otherwise would have been housed in portables will enjoy comfortable seats in regular school buildings tomorrow. Under the old plan they would have been forced to go to school in portables, ill ventilated and vermin infested, in store basements, and other devices resorted to in the face of congestion.

REDS PROMOTING SCHOOL RIOTING, ARVEY CHARGES

Seize on Agitation for Publicity.

Assertions that communists had seized upon agitation over the school board's economy program as a vehicle to promote riots and to gain publicity for their own cause were made last night by Ald. Jacob M. Arvey [24th] and Police Lieut. James Peterson of the Fillmore street station.

One group, gathered at Central Park avenue and Roosevelt road without a permit, learned that Ald. Arvey was having a Saturday night shave in a barber shop at 1209 South Central Park avenue. A crowd that filled the shop poured in, crying: "We want a permit."

Recognizes Red Leaders.

"There were a number of communist leaders in this group," the alderman said. "They were the same men who were in front of my home protesting about relief conditions some time ago. I made them a speech, pointing out that they should not call illegal meetings and then demand permits when the police do their duty and stop them.

"I asked that a small delegation be left and that the others retire. To this delegation I suggested that they schedule a meeting in a hall and that I would pay the rent and get the permit.

"This did not set well with the crowd when the delegation went back. They attempted to carry on their meeting, defying the police. It was apparent that the radicals were not so much intent on having a meeting as in stirring up trouble."

Another clash of so-called protestors took place on the grounds of the Herzl High school at Lawndale avenue and Douglas boulevard. One young man there, it was asserted, shouted through a loud speaker when the police approached that "if the cops bust us up, we'll bust them up."

Three Are Arrested.

The shouter, Julius Hauser, 19 years old, 5648 Harper avenue, was arrested. So were two others, Joseph Arnstein, an Englewood High school graduate, and Morris Tietelbaum, who attended the closed Crane Junior college.

Lieut. Peterson said that communists were prominent in the activities of this group. His men, he said, had to break up the meeting because it was disorderly as well as unauthorized.

The organized groups opposed to the school program will hold a meeting tonight at Shotwell hall, 55th street and Blackstone avenue. Speakers will include John Fewkes, Jack Light, the Rev. G. C. Cox, and C. A. Stone. The gathering will be under the "Save our Schools" committee auspices.

The committee yesterday asserted that great confusion would occur at the opening of the schools tomorrow. It added that a backward step had been taken and that all education progress in the last fifty years had been scrapped for "a claim to economy that has not been substantiated."

SCHOOL BUDGETS CUT SHARPLY IN MIDWEST CITIES

Many Show Economies as Drastic as Chicago's.

curtailments in the purchasing of supplies for the classroom, for medical services, and for the playgrounds, and the cost of maintenance has been dropped from $1,200,000 in 1929 to $350,000 in 1933."

Supt. Lake stated that the per capita cost of instruction in the Cleveland schools has been reduced to $98.83 this year from the peak figure of $130.33 in 1929. Despite all of the retrenchments effected, the quality of the instruction has not been impaired, he declared.

In Minneapolis the annual per capita cost of instruction has been reduced to $79.94 this year from the high figure of $108.02 in 1930 because of vigorous economies instituted and adhered to, according to Supt. Carroll E. Reed. The school year has been shortened two weeks, the staff has been reduced by 100 teachers, no vacancies by deaths and resignations are being filled, and classes have been increased to as many as 38 pupils.

Minneapolis Cuts Down Frills.

In making these savings which have brought the Minneapolis school budget for 1933 to the approximate level of ten years ago, when there were 65,000 pupils as compared to 78,522 now, a number of subjects and activities had to be drastically curtailed, according to Supt. Reed. Instruction in manual training, home economics, and the arts in the high schools were cut down considerably and supervisors and assistants were put back into teaching positions, he said.

The Racine, Wis., schools have reduced their educational budget from $1,360,356 to $1,027,356, a reduction of 25 per cent, by means of reductions in salaries and other expenses. Most of the saving was effected through a graduated salary slash ranging from 15 to 35 per cent and by several other curtailments. Several activities, including household arts, manual training, and Latin, were eliminated from the elementary schools. Twenty-two teachers and two principals were taken off the staff. In addition, the board closed an open air school, while all class loads were increased 50 per cent.

Grand Rapids Cuts Salaries 37%.

In the Grand Rapids, Mich., schools 100 teachers were dropped, while the salaries of those who remained were cut an average of 37 per cent. Schools will open Sept. 18, two weeks later than usual. The per capita cost of instruction has been lowered to $64.17, the lowest figure since 1920, it was stated. The peak was $108.35 for the year 1930-'31.

In Indianapolis, Ind., the city board of school commissioners, a nonpartisan body, has reduced the educational cost of operating the schools 24.7 per cent in the last three years. The economies effected reduced the annual per capita cost of instructing pupils from $134.09 in 1928 to $54.48 last year. A total of 108 teachers was dismissed and the number of supervisory principals was reduced from 87 to 65 in the last two years. Teachers' salaries were cut 15 to 19 per cent and the salaries of principals and supervisors 19 to 25 per cent.

The number of high school pupils to a class was increased from 24 to 30.8 per instructor, and in the grade schools from 32.6 to 40 within the last year. Other savings were effected through the elimination of some departments and the merging of others such as cooking, sewing, music, art and physical education. Pay for teachers absent because of illness was done away with.

Save on Athletics and Dramatics.

In Cedar Rapids, Ia., within the last year salaries were reduced 15 per cent for all teachers and employés, 38 teachers were dismissed, the school dentist was eliminated, and appropriations for athletics, school nurses and dramatics were curtailed.

Duluth, Minn., school officials reported that teachers' salaries had been reduced 25 per cent last year, with the cut continued in effect for the new school year. Another economy was the discontinuance of all automatic salary increases, which last year totaled $50,000. It was stated that the savings have totaled $400,000 in the last two years from the salary reductions alone. With other economies the total saving was $1,000,000 in the last few years. The cost of operating the Duluth public school system for the year 1932-1933 was $1,672,944, as compared to $2,560,605 for 1929-1930.

Similar curtailments were reported from the Indiana cities of Gary, Hammond and East Chicago, where the school budgets are from 25 to 37 per cent lower than they were in 1929. In three of the municipalities the school year was cut from ten to nine months. In Gary, the fourth, teachers were given contracts for only six months terms in place of the usual full year. If tax collections are sufficient the contracts will be extended another three months, said Supt. William A. Wirth of the Gary schools.

LABOR DECLINES TO JOIN FOES OF SCHOOL ECONOMY

State Federation Offers Aid to Public Officials.

The Illinois Federation of Labor last night refused to approve resolutions condemning the Chicago board of education's economy program. Instead a resolution was adopted pledging sympathetic coöperation with public officials in their efforts to meet the financial crisis. The action took place in the closing session of the federation's convention at the Congress hotel.

Miss Lillian Herstein, a teacher at Crane Junior college, which is now closed as an economy measure, spoke in favor of the resolutions condemning the school board's program. She declared that the economy plan has become a national question involving the general principles of democracy.

The Resolution Adopted.

In spite of Miss Herstein's plea that the federation oppose the economy program, the convention adopted the substitute resolution, which said:

"The problem of maintaining the public school system at the high level of efficiency essential to proper training, education, and school accomodating of the children is one that under all circumstances and conditions demands careful and thoughtful consideration on the part of all citizens and to which the officers and members of the trade union movement have always devoted very earnest attention.

"The distrust engendered against expenditures by public bodies in general has to a large extent paved the way for curtailment of our public school system in Chicago and in other cities in various parts of Illinois and the nation.

Careful Consideration Urged.

"We do not underestimate the difficulties which confront the school authorities in relation to the work of rehabilitation of the schools. In this connection we desire to repeat with emphasis that the prevailing condition is one which calls for the most thoughtful consideration on the part of educators and laymen alike with a view to advocating and introducing practical and remedial methods capable of immediate application, rather than mere angry denunciation.

"We must not make the error of assuming that the problem relates only to Chicago and a few other large centers of population. It is national in scope and is particularly acute in some of the rural sections where school systems have always lagged, due invariably to lack of taxable resources."

The resolution recommended that labor and its constituted organization and membership endeavor to aid public officials of Chicago and the state in an effort to find a solution for the problems of public finance with which "they are now wrestling, particularly to the end that the school system may be rehabilitated and that the wages and salaries of public employés be paid."

4 OF EVANSTON'S NRA COMPLIANCE BOARD APPOINTED

Some of the members of the first NRA compliance board to be organized in Chicagoland for hearing complaints against violators of the President's recovery program were named in Evanston yesterday. Alderman George A. Paddock, co-chairman of the central NRA board of Evanston, announced the appointment of four men who will form a nucleus of the new board.

John H. Wigmore, dean emeritus of the Northwestern university law school, will represent the legal profession and will act as temporary chairman. Mrs. Mary Oldberg, wife of Prof. Arne Oldberg of Northwestern university, will represent consumers.

The industrial employers will have Clarence A. Hemphill, a contractor, as their representative, while Edgar A. Stevens, owner of a clothing store bearing his name, will watch the interests of mercantile employers. Representatives of mercantile and industrial employés will probably be named tomorrow. These six members will name the seventh, who will be permanent chairman.

A parade and demonstration in celebration of Cicero's 100 per cent compliance with the NRA will be held Wednesday evening, Mayor Joseph G. Cerny announced yesterday. All citizens were called upon to join in the public acknowledgement that every business man in Cicero has signed a code. Places of business were requested to close at 3:30 o'clock Wednesday to enable employés to prepare floats for the parade which will proceed through all the principal thoroughfares of Cicero.

The names of 552 additional Chicago concerns employing 1,374 persons were posted yesterday on the honor roll at the United States courthouse as having signed the President's re-employment agreement.

Hear of Impending Milk Drivers' Strike in Kenosha

Kenosha, Wis., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Dispatches from Madison today quoting Dr. Edward Fitzpatrick, state NRA administrator, as asking that the Kenosha NRA committee settle difficulties between dairymen and milk wagon drivers in Kenosha, were greeted with surprise by the dairymen here, Frank Van Alstine, secretary of the Kenosha Milk Producers' association, said that rumors of a milk wagon drivers' strike were news to him. On Sept. 8 the dairies gave the men an increase of wages of $4 per week. They had asked for $3.

841 Relief Roll Men Will Watch School Crossings

The Illinois Emergency Relief commission announced yesterday that 841 men, unemployed heads of families on the county relief rolls, will be made special patrolmen tomorrow. The men will be assigned to escorting school children across busy streets. They will be paid at the same rate as the regular police force, but will be allowed to earn only as much as their relief budgets stipulate.

John McCormack's Daughter Weds

5,000 RESTAURANT MEN TO MEET IN CITY TOMORROW

The competition given restaurants by beer taverns and problems of the NRA will occupy 5,000 delegates who are expected to attend the convention of the National Restaurant association which will open tomorrow in the associations new permanent headquarters, the Restaurant Mart, 666 Lake Shore drive.

Indicative of the discussions, two of the addresses scheduled are "Do Restaurant Operators Want to Be Licensed?" by E. J. Tobin of Syracuse, N. Y., and "A Code of Fair Competition For The Restaurant Industry," by Myron Green of Kansas City, Mo., and H. L. Gardner of New York City. The convention will close on Friday.

"America's most beautiful waitress," will be chosen on Celebrity day, Wednesday. Each waitress in the contest will wear the uniform of the restaurant in which she is employed, but skill in juggling trays will not be considered.

Sings at Wedding

LONDON, Sept. 16.—(AP)—After witnessing the marriage of his only daughter, Gwendolyn, in the ancient Brompton Oratory today, John McCormack, world renowned tenor, sang the Ave Maria so beautifully it brought tears to the eyes of many of his listeners.

The daughter, who was married to Edward Pyke, a Liverpool business man, stood at her husband's side as her father's voice floated through the building. She wore an old Irish lace veil belonging to her mother. Her gown was of satin in a deep ivory shade. The ceremony was read by the bishop of Liverpool.

Outside, where a large crowd struggled to gain admission to join the 2,000 already in the building, many of those who witnessed the ceremony had remained over after an early mass in the hope of hearing McCormack sing.

When McCormack, who had traveled all the way from Hollywood, arrived with his daughter, he smiled and waved his hands as cheer after cheer arose from the crowd. A reinforced police detail was necessary to hold back the people.

Joseph Vanderbilt Reweds as First Wife Gets Divorce

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Twenty-four hours after his first wife won a Reno divorce, Joseph K. Vanderbilt, New York financier, was remarried today in the Municipal building. His bride, Miss Ottilie Kranz, 36, arrived here from California by airplane, scarcely an hour before the ceremony, which took place in the Municipal chapel. They sailed shortly afterward on the liner Rex.

Alaskan Robbed of $2,000 Diamond in Hotel Room

Truman A. Horton, a wholesale fur dealer from Port Yukon, Alaska, in Chicago for the Fair, reported to the police he was held up in his room in the Morrison hotel early today and robbed of a diamond ring valued at $2,000, and $5 in cash. Horton said that he opened the door in response to a knock, believing his visitor was a hotel employé.

FIELD ESTATE TO OPEN SCHOOL AT APARTMENTS

Approximately 100 children between 3 and 9 years old will be enrolled in the new kindergarten and primary classes of the Marshall Field school for children of tenants in the garden apartments on the near north side tomorrow. The usual school courses, supplemented by industrial and fine arts, music, drama, and supervised play will be offered, according to Mrs. Grace Ward Sligh, supervisor.

The educational project is sponsored by the estate of Marshall Field and the Pestalozzi Froebel Teachers' college. One feature of the school will be an all day child care service for children of mothers who are away during the day. Children may be "checked" with teachers, who will attend to their education and supervise their play.

A new free school of typewriting and shorthand will begin registering pupils tomorrow morning. This is the Pruitt institute at 172 North La Salle street, sponsored by Chauncey McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Worcester, Dr. Robert B. Harshe, Judge Howard B. Casey, Judge Robert Jerome Dunne, and Otto E. Pruitt. The school will accommodate 1,500 students, offering a six weeks' training course in the two subjects. Classes will start a week from tomorrow.

SAME MAN ROBS HOTEL TWICE.

C. F. McDonald, the night clerk at the Cedar hotel, 1118 North State street, surrendered $25 early yesterday to two robbers accompanied by a brown eyed girl about 20 years old, early yesterday. The hotel was robbed of $75 a few days ago by one of the men, who then had a different companion.

Seymour Blair Arrives from Europe for Visit

Seymour Blair, youngest son of Edward Blair, 1516 Lake Shore drive, who has been living in France and Germany since before the world war, arrived home yesterday on one of his infrequent visits. He is a brother of William McCormick Blair, Mrs. Howard Linn and Miss Edith Blair, who also has made her home in Europe. During the war Edward Blair served in the ambulance corps. He has devoted many years to the study of music and the writing of poetry.

ANIMATED MAP DRAWS MANY TO OHIO'S EXHIBIT

Towns of State Shown by Small Electric Lights.

Back of all progress in human affairs must lie some one's dream—a constant and determined vision for the days and years ahead. Without undue heroics as to her pioneers, Ohio takes pleasure in honoring the men and the women who, through frugalities, hardships and frequent suffering, led early America onward.

May we of today face the problems of our future with an equal fortitude, with as cheerful but unflinching an initiative and resourcefulness.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

The Ohio map is one of the prime fascinators of the Fair and as an educational device it is said to be unique.

On some days it draws as many as 3,600 people an hour to Ohio's hall on the Court of States. Week before last visitors averaged 25,000 a day.

To build this map took from three to eight men three months and it cost $3,000. It contains three and a half miles of electrical wiring, weighs a ton, has 1,302 electric lights operated by the same number of push buttons, and shows 2,800 towns, one of which said Mr. George R. Boyce, resident Ohio commissioner, has a population of four. It is the hamlet of Tabor, Carroll county, in east central Ohio.

Each of the electric push buttons lights up a township, of which there are 1,302.

The map's 168 square feet gives you the story of Ohio, historical, economic, cultural, and scenic, at a glance.

That means swift impartment of knowledge when you recall that Ohio contains 41,040 square miles, has a population of 6,647,000, and has been one of the most important states in the Union for 130 years.

Would you know the highest point between the Alleghenies and the Mississippi? The map will tell it to you in a flash.

You glance at one of two indices that rest on desks at each side of the map. The index of "Points of Interest" gives "T-11" as the letter and number of the button to be pushed for highest point. Push it, and Bellefontaine—which Ohioans pronounce as if the last two syllables were the English word "fountain"—leaps into light. The point is in Logan county.

Once an Ohioan, Always One.

"Be it ever so humble," etc.

Roam he ever so far, an Ohioan never ceases in his soul to be an Ohioan. His loyalty is as unquestioning and as long-lived as a Virginian's or a New Englander's.

Hence the ingenious light-leaping map is every born Ohioan's joy. Entering his state's hall, he hurries to the index of towns, finds his birthplace, then lights it up with the impressiveness of Columbus landing on San Salvador, and gazes around him like one who, after long exile, has once more glimpsed the promised land. He laughs long and loud. And the smaller the town the better pleased he is to have revealed it to an expectant world.

New Scheme of Education.

Ohio is divided into 88 counties. The map shows them all in varying tints. Every township in every county is also shown in squares, each measuring 3½ inches to a side.

When you illuminate a county by pressing the proper button pictures and figures on the area of that county show its five principal agricultural products and their value in money as well as its annual industrial pay roll.

The whole device, so unique and instructive, was originated and built for the World's Fair by the Sewah studios at Marietta, O., and beyond doubt it is one of A Century of Progress' exhibits that will become a permanent scheme of education in museums and schools. Its ways are easy, vivid and prompt, and more and more do Americans like to learn without an effort—which may or may not be good for them.

150,000 Maps Presented.

The Ohio World's Fair commission not only shows that remarkable map but gives away an interesting cartograph that is laden with pictures and statistics up and down from Toledo to Cincinnati and all the way across from Dayton to Steubenville. Since the Exposition opened 150,000 of these maps in color and conversation have been presented to visitors. Teachers, said Commissioner Boyce, are especially eager for them.

Ohio's hall is homey.

When it was being planned Gov. George White said to the commissioners at a conference in the Hotel Sherman:

"Now, I'll tell you boys that people are going to be pretty footsore and weary tramping over all that World's Fair space. So what do you say if we have a place where they can sit down and rest and at the same time be learning something?"

"That's fine, governor!"

It was so ordered.

$75,000 for Serenity.

And Ohio's $75,000 World's Fair appropriation went to the construction of a hall that is as spacious as a railroad station, restful as a college library, and as informing as a blue book.

Eighteen murals picturing the economic and cultural development of the state from earliest recorded times to the present day were painted by William Mark Young, an Ohioan residing in Chicago, and thirty-four six foot settees were carved from Ohio's best wood—black walnut—and upholstered in prize winning examples of hand-hooked tapestry woven from Ohio wool by rural women of southeastern Ohio, principally women of Washington county.

Mr. Young's murals represent a great deal of research and dramatic feeling, and the tapestries on the settees are prime examples of honest handicraft—a kind of handicraft that often is done in a very slipshod way by dabsters, with the result that it unravels in a few months.

"It Orter," Said the Expert.

An Ohio countrywoman, plainly no novice in hooked rug weaving, was critically examining the work in the hall.

"The tapestry you are looking at, madam," ventured Mr. Boyce, "is the piece that wins first prize."

"It orter."

"Why do you think so?"

"It's close woven, and whoever done it got her colors harmonized nice, and her design is novel."

"You like it better than the floral design over there that is so much admired?"

"Land's sakes! they been doin' them flower pieces since time out of mind. This here's novel. It's a real good flame effect."

And that was a point, for the back of the settee in question is carved in silhouette to represent the burning at the stake of Col. Crawford in an Ohio Indian uprising after the revolutionary war.

The prize winning settee is on the east side of the hall, near the map that talks in lights.

Each of the thirty-four settees is carved with an episode in Ohio's annals. Each carving is abundantly lettered and thus forms a short lesson in history.

How Indians Obtained Oil.

Of special historical interest is the mural entitled "Oil." It shows Seneca Indians absorbing oil with their blankets from the surface of an Ohio pond and then wringing the blankets over receptacles of pottery. They used the oil as medicine. So Ohio's present large oil industry began.

Another picture [east wall], illustrating transportation, shows the historic old limestone Hedley inn, near Zanesville, which opened for business in 1803 and is still operating.

Busts of the seven Ohio-born Presidents of the Union adorn the hall—if "adorn" be not too flattering a word. For the story of their presidencies is not exhilarating. Grant was the victim of corrupt men; Hayes, a fine soldier and a scholar, labored under the burden of a disputed title; Garfield died too soon to prove anything; Benjamin Harrison's surly manners made him and his policies unpopular; Maj. McKinley was a suave compromiser; Taft was inept, and Harding was a failure. Ohio's Presidents have been no boon to the republic.

Mrs. Knowles and Her Aids.

Members of the Chicago Society of Ohio Women act as hostesses at the hall. They are very faithful and tactful in a task that is not all fun. Mrs Daniel E. Knowles is the society's president and Mrs. Joseph B. Greulich and Mrs. Edmund J. Tyler are chairman and co-chairman of the hostesses' committee. Each week they select four other women of the society to assist them. The hall is open from 10 in the morning until 10 at night and the interesting Mr. Boyce is almost always on the scene.

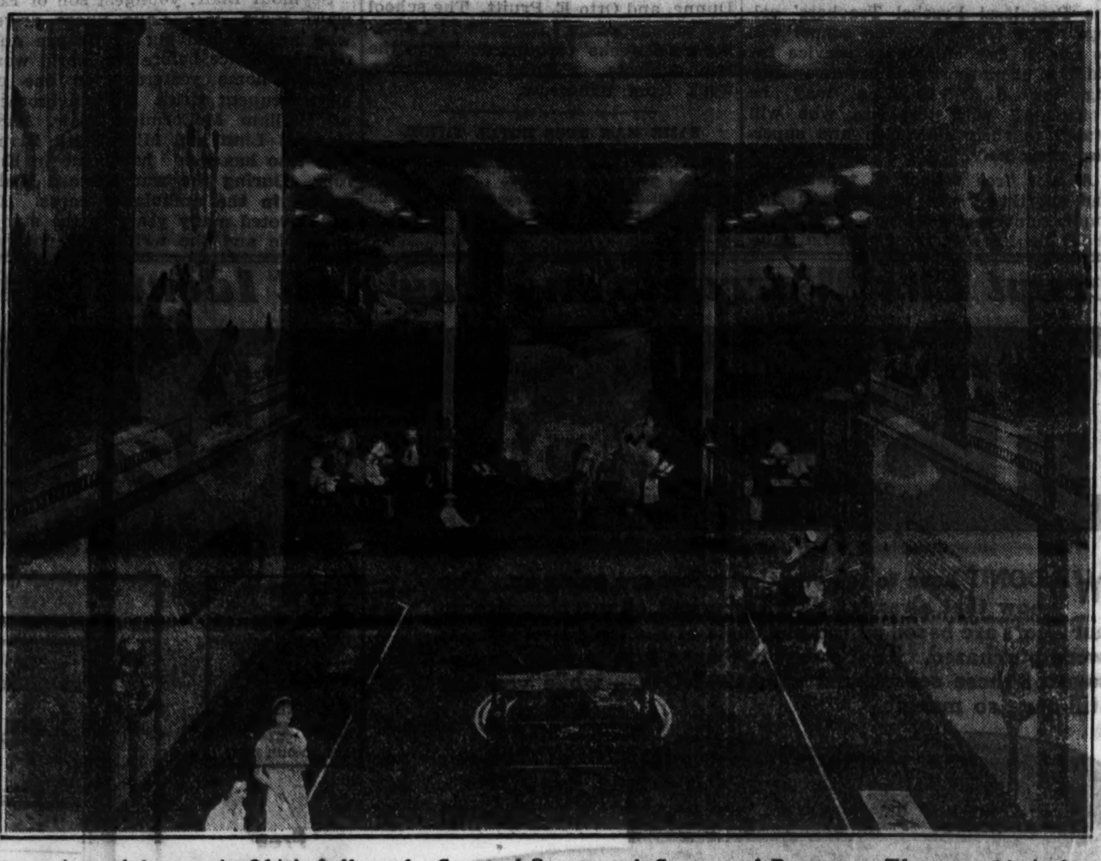
It is painful, but it may be salutary, to state that the souvenir thieves have been a pest at Ohio hall. Bronze name plates from the presidential busts have been stolen. Inkwells have been stolen. Everything that can be hidden by thieves has been stolen. About the same tale is told at nearly every exhibit on the Fair grounds. Elders wag their heads and ask, "What possesses the American people?"

I know what possesses them. It is the result of a cult of "Let-the-child-express-himself" that began about thirty years ago in this country. Domestic discipline came to be considered antiquated.

Well, the dear child has grown up mannerless and lawless. Souvenir stealing by our people when they are received at the Elysée palace and souvenir stealing by them at fairs is one result of "expressionism." Nasty shows permitted by Pecksniffs at the present fair is another.

Absence of early spanking is the cause.

OHIO'S DEVELOPMENT SHOWN IN MURALS AT FAIR



A restful scene in Ohio's hall on the Court of States at A Century of Progress. There are 34 six foot settees carved from Ohio black walnut in the hall, on which visitors may rest while viewing 18 murals picturing the cultural and economic development of the state from the earliest recorded times. CITY AND FAIR OFFICIALS GREET ALASKAN VISITOR

"Slim" Williams, trapper and fur trader, who drove his seven dog team from Alaska to the Fair, arrived at the city hall at 10 o'clock yesterday morning and was greeted by Ald. John J. Coughlin in behalf of Mayor Kelly.

Williams' sled was equipped with wheels instead of runners. Behind a motorcycle escort he drove to the Fair, where President Rufus C. Dawes and United States Commissioner Harry New gave him a second welcome. The trapper intends visiting the Fair for a week and will probably quarter his dogs in the Soldiers' field stadium.

The Alaskan is 52 years old and has spent 32 years in the Yukon. Coming to Chicago he traveled on the Alaskan-Yukon international highway. Sled runners were used for 1,800 miles and wheels the rest of the way.

A safe car has great influence toward making a safe driver.

Car faults will magnify driver faults several degrees, whereas freedom from car faults will go far to nullify many serious driver faults.

Car safety depends on two sets of factors: first, what the car itself can do to avoid trouble; second, what protection it can give when trouble comes.

In the Ford V-8 the factors that prevent trouble may be summed up in two words—steadiness and obedience.

A steady car is one that runs straight and does not weave or wobble or "hunt" all over the road. Our reliable steering gear, our special type of springs and our X-type frame with 4 full-length side members, instead of 2, keep the Ford V-8 steady.

Our car hugs the road because its center of gravity is low.

It is steady on curves or sudden turns, due to our transverse springs which prevent the car from leaning or rocking or tipping as it makes a turn or a sudden necessary swerve in driving. A car that does not go easily around a curve without swaying or tilting, is not a safe car.

An obedient car obeys its accelerator and brake instantly. There is no lagging at the start, no uncontrolled momentum when you want to stop. Instant response when you release the power is as important as instant response when you apply the power.

Now, should accident unfortunately occur, the car's protective qualities come into play. In the Ford V-8 they are these:

Safety glass eliminates a whole range of danger. Every Ford windshield is made of safety glass. Every Ford de luxe model has safety glass throughout.

Our one-piece, all steel, superlatively strong body resists shocks and strain, and affords the highest possible protection to its occupants, and that strength and protection is as great and firm the last year you drive your car as it was the first.

Our welded, all-steel spoke wheel (not the common built-up wire wheel) resists disabling shocks and tends to insure the car remaining upright and thus preventing further danger.

There are 40 different kinds of steel in your Ford V-8, each developed for use where it will produce the greatest safety—first for prevention of danger—second, for protection from danger.

BY EARL MULLIN.

Music, military pomp, and the romantic allure of old world ceremonials will mark the colorful programs to be given at the Fair today in celebration of constitution, international, and Brazilian day.

In the evening the Venetian Nights carnival, bringing the gaiety and lure of the city of the Doges, will round out the complete attractions of the Fair. With fair weather in prospect, officials are preparing to welcome a crowd in the neighborhood of two hundred thousand visitors today.

Attendance at the Fair yesterday showed an improvement over the figures of earlier in the week when bad weather kept many away. At 11:30 p. m. 166,005 paid admissions had been recorded. An hour later the figure was 166,569. The total attendance a week ago Saturday was 144,494.

Troops to Present Program.

The army troops from Camp John Whistler at the Fair grounds, including cavalry, artillery, and infantry units, will join with a detachment of artillery from Fort Sheridan to present the military features of the Constitution day program. The troops will gather in the court of honor at the 14th street entrance at 10:30 a. m. and parade in review past the Illinois Host house.

Following the parade, addresses will be made by Rear Admiral Wat T.

Only 45 More Days Remain in Which to See the Fair

Cluverius of Great Lakes, Maj. Gen. Frank A. Parker, commandant of the Sixth Corps area, and Dr. Allen D. Albert, executive assistant to President Rufus C. Dawes of the Fair. The Hall of Religion will be the setting at 5:30 p. m. for a patriotic program given by the Sons of the American Revolution in commemoration of the 146th anniversary of the signing of the constitution.

The evening program will include addresses by President Dawes, Dr. Hugh S. Magill, head of the Sons of the American Revolution, and James G. Skinner, assistant attorney general of Illinois.

Closely allied with the Constitution day program will be the ceremonies of International day. Fourteen national groups, in addition to the Brazilians, who are presenting a program of their own, will participate.

Music, Dancing, and Speeches.

The nationals' program will be staged in the court of the Hall of States at 2 p. m. and will include, music, dancing, and speeches. All of the nationals will appear in costume for the events. Those participating are Rumanian, Greek, Italian, Jugoslav, Czechoslovak, German, Irish, Welsh, Polish, Russian, Chinese, French-Canadian, Bulgarian, and Lithuanian groups.

The Brazilian program will be held in the court of the Hall of Science at 3 p. m. Lima de Silva, ambassador to the United States, is scheduled to arrive in Chicago this morning to give the major address and be honor guest of the day. Other speakers will include Dr. Sebastiao Sampaio, consul general in Chicago, and Capt. Joao Alberto, chief of the Fair commission, and members of the Brazil colony in Chicago. The program will include the dedication of the national exhibit in the Travel and Transport building.

The Venetian nights' carnival will center around the Floating theater in the waters of the north lagoon. Included in the program are all star vaudeville features, a musical revue, and a program of dancing. Free dancing will be held in the Avenue of Flags. There will be a parade of gayly decorated and lighted floats in the lagoon.

Loses Necklace of Pearls on Visit to World's Fair

J. C. Hoot of Alliance, O., reported to the South State street police yesterday that a necklace of 53 pearls, valued at $800, had been lost or stolen from the purse of his daughter, Margaret, 25 years old, on the World's Fair grounds Friday evening. Hoot is vice president of the Alliance Machine company.

JAIL GEORGIAN ON GUN CHARGE.

CENTURY OF PROGRESS NOTES

Another reunion will be brought about by the Fair this morning when Mrs. Gertrude Rempe, 61 years old, of Great Neck, N. Y., steps off a train at the Union station. She will be greeted by her girlhood friend, Mrs. Catherine Rateuke, 62 years old, 6036 Addison street, whom she has not since moving from Chicago in 1903.

More than 500 employés of the state of Wisconsin were given a half holiday yesterday by Gov. G. A. Schmedeman to visit the Fair. They arrived in Chicago yesterday and will stay until late this evening.

Thousands of dahlia blooms were placed on exhibition yesterday at the Horticultural building at A Century of Progress in a seven day exhibit sponsored by the Central States Dahlia society. More than 300 exhibitors are competing for awards.

A first edition of Gouverneur Morrison's "Bells: Their History and Romance," said by the author to be the only book of its kind on the subject, is on display at the California exhibit.

Parrots will be given an opportunity to demonstrate their command of the English language tomorrow afternoon in a contest to be staged on the Foating theater. More than twenty entries have been filed with the events division of the Fair. Prizes ranging from $25 downward will be awarded to the owners of the five parrots with the largest vocabularies. Three minutes will be allowed each bird in which to begin talking. If the bird speaks within that time limit, an additional five minutes will be allowed to complete the speech. The contest will begin at 2 p. m.

A memorial program of pageantry and speeches will be given at the Marquette cabin, Sept. 25, to commemorate the 260th anniversary of the arrival of Father Marquette and Louis Joliet at what is now Chicago. The program will be sponsored by the French government, the Illinois Catholic Historical society, and Loyola university.

Eunice Tietjens, Illinois poet and author, will read her poems at 3 p. m. today in the Illinois Host house. At 5 p. m. another of the musical programs in the Illinois Composers' series will be given in the host house. It will feature Dr. Daniel Protheroe, composer-conductor, assisted by Helen Protheroe, soprano; Gwilym Jones, baritone; the Chicago Welsh male choir, and Robert Sheehan, accompanist.

Middle western Boy Scouts will hold their annual canoe regatta on the lagoons at the Fair today, starting at 2 p. m. The regatta is under the auspices of the western division of the American Canoe association.

Nine extra sections of regular trains over the New York Central lines were required yesterday to bring visitors to the Fair from the east. Extra sections on the Michigan Central will bring 360 persons into Chicago tomorrow from Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Niagara Falls, Canada. Several small groups of G. A. R. veterans will arrive today and tomorrow on the New York Central system.

A film depicting the invention of radio is being made at Hollywood at the Fair for use during National Radio week, Oct. 2 to Oct. 7, when Guglielmo Marconi, father of wireless, will be honored guest in this country and at the Fair.

MEXICAN ART EXHIBIT DRAWS CROWD AT FAIR

The Mexican Arts and Crafts exhibits in the Texas state room in the Hall of States and in the Horticultural building are attracting crowds of visitors at A Century of Progress Exposition.

They include pottery, tiles, lanterns, book ends, chairs, and other works of craftsmanship made by native Mexicans in the San Antonio workshops of the Mexican Arts and Crafts, an organization sponsored by various San Antonio societies such as the Junior league, the Art league, and the San Antonio Conservation society. The president of the Mexican Arts and Crafts, Mrs. Ethel Harris, explained that the society's aim was to preserve native crafts and traditions.

Colorful hand made tiles in native Mexican designs, and wrought iron holders likewise made by hand, for the purpose of hanging the tiles from walls tell many a story about this picturesque part of Texas. All are made of Texas clay. One shows the wishing well in the restored Spanish governors' palace in San Antonio. Another was inspired by the vivid blooms of Texas cactus. Book ends, tables, plates, and trays are made of the tiles.

INDIANS TO HOLD 3 DAY CEREMONY AT WORLD'S FAIR

A three day Indian celebration, closing with American Indian day ceremonies, will open at the Fair Wednesday. Jules Cornelius, managing director of the Indian Village and chairman of Lincolniana commissions to the Fair, last night announced the complete program, which is the official ceremony of Indian participation in the Exposition. There will be an exhibition of Indian costumes, beadwork, and household equipment. On Thursday an Indian opera, "The Chilkoot Maiden," will be presented. On Indian day, Friday, all six of the tribes at the village will hold an outdoor feast. An advance showing of the ceremonials will be staged tomorrow when Winnebago and Hoopa chiefs call on Mayor Kelly in tribal regalia.

FIND WIDESPREAD WAVE OF BUYING CREATED BY FAIR

Report Sales Stimulated in All Parts of U. S.

Chicago's A Century of Progress has stimulated a formidable wave of buying that is being felt in every part of the country, as well as locally. It is sending into the stores and shops of the nation thousands of customers on a quest for the new and improved appliances and other articles which many of them viewed for the first time at the Fair. It has stirred up a potential business of selling and consuming which is expected to last for many years.

These facts were made known yesterday when officials of the Fair and the exhibits called attention to the great public benefit on national proportions, which has arisen from the years of toil and planning that culminated in the opening of A Century of Progress last May.

They called attention to actual sales at their exhibits and to increased sales traceable to the Fair in reports from district branches scattered about the country.

General Motors Sales Increase.

An outstandin, example is the General Motors corporation, which has an automobile assembling plant in operation at the Fair. James A. Grier, resident manager of the company, said that during June, July, and August sales of some types of cars increased from 46 per cent to 330 per cent in the Chicago area alone. Mr. Grier placed the credit for this increase of business wholly upon the Fair and the visitors that it attracted.

"The good that will result from the display of our products to so many people can never be measured in figures," he said. "The fact that General Motors has been able to show its products and processes of manufacture to some six and one-half million persons will undoubtedly influence sales in the years to come."

Frank W. Heiskell, advertising manager of the International Harvester company, declared that branches in every part of the country were reporting sales directly and indirectly attributable to the Fair.

Edward H. Sniffin, assistant vice president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, who is in charge of the company exhibit, declared that the buying reaction of the country was a marked result of the Fair.

Sell Directly to Visitors.

The experience of the American Radiator and Sanitary corporation was cited. Homer R. Linn, who is in charge of the exhibit, said that his staff has already sold directly to Fair visitors 200 gas conversion burners, 150 oil burners, 62 Arcola burners, 50 Kewanee boilers, 23 home air condition plants, and 4 home air cooling plants. In addition many orders for bathroom and kitchen fixtures to replace outmoded styles have been taken, he said.

Mr. Linn also disclosed that the statuary of Psyche, Spring, Iris, The Athlete and Venus, which were placed as adornments about the exhibit, have been bought by Fair visitors for delivery when the fair closes, and that orders for duplicates have been transmitted to the sculptor, Rudolph Evans of New York City.

In the home planning group, J. C. Folsom, the exhibit supervisor, reported that thirty homes, duplicates of those on display, have been sold to Fair visitors. The Brick Manufacturing association, one of the group, has sold houses to visitors from Africa, China, Holland, and South America, he said.

Compile List of Prospects.

Several houses were sold by the Roscone company, which also has a list of 56 prospects. An $18,000 home was sold by the Century company, which incidentally effected the sale of two expensive automobiles of the same make as the one housed for utility effect in a model garage. The company also sold two arra glass bathrooms, and two dozen copper goblets which were being used to decorate the model home.

Five $15,000 homes we.. sold by the American Rolling Mills—Ferro Enamel corporation. The Mansfield corporation has assembled a list of 3,000 prospects and the names of 500 architects and builders who intend to make use of the company's system of construction. The Southern Cypress Manufacturing company, another of the home planning group, sold six duplicates of their cypress types of cabins, six sets of lawn furniture and $3,300 worth of greenhouses, it was learned.

A. B. Racht, divisional sales manager of the Holland Furnace company, said that at least 2,000 sales of air heating, cooling and conditioning combination plants have been made as a result of their display at the Fair. The company also has a list of 8,000 prospects.

Other Examples of Buying.

Other examples of the widespread buying were cited yesterday. One was by Gifford W. Plume, supervisor of exhibits in the Hall of Science, where the Burton Dixie corporation, a Chicago firm, has an exhibit of its mattresses. Plume was in a Devon avenue furniture store when he heard a customer requesting one of the mattresses which he had seen demonstrated at the Fair. On inquiry the supervisor was told that the store had already sold two dozen sets to persons who said they had seen them in the Hall of Science.

The Proteo booth has been demonstrating a new diabetic bread in an exhibit in the Hall of Science. Dr. Louis A. Rumsey of the firm said that when the Fair opened the company was selling 500 loaves a day. Now, he declares, the firm is receiving orders for 3,000 loaves daily.

Another instance is that of Baker & Co., manufacturers of platinum, which has an exhibit in the Hall of Science. Dr. Howard, the Chicago representative in charge of the exhibit, said that a surprising number of sales of platinum, which is used in the manufacture of rayon and other products as well as for jewelry have been traced directly to the Fair. One recent order was for $23,000, he said.

R. F. Dixon, assistant manager of the Firestone Tire and Rubber exhibit, revealed that the firm has secured a large number of dealers whose original orders range from $20 to $3,000 each.

NEW FOREIGN MINISTER OF JAPAN MAKES BID FOR U. S. FRIENDSHIP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Sept. 16.—Koki Hirota, new Japanese foreign minister, gave his first interview to the press today. He said he hoped "relations with the United States were not of a state necessitating the signing of an arbitration treaty."

If they were in such a state, Hirota continued, he was confident that the traditionally friendly relations would be maintained. Hirota said he would take some time to study the situation before acting. He admitted he is not opposed to a nonaggression pact with soviet Russia. The foreign minister added that he does not expect to replace Katsuji Debuchi, Japanese ambassador to the United States.

He gave out a statement asserting that "the fundamental foreign policy of Japan is clearly and unequivocally set by imperial rescript," but he indicated this would not prevent a change in policy in the future.

Honor May Robson for Her 50 Years as an Actress

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Two hundred guests toda.. were entertained at a luncheon in honor of May Robson's fiftieth anniversary of her debut as an actress. The luncheon was held on a stage at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, where the 74 year old actress now is featured in movies. Other honor guests in attendance were Henrietta Crosman, Elsie Janis, Zelda Sears and Lionel Barrymore. Edgar Allan Woolf, author, and L. B. Mayer, head of the studio, extolled Miss Robson in speeches.

CLARENCE GETS A WORM'S-EYE VIEW OF FAIR

Eight World's Fair firemen with crowbars early yesterday extricated Clarence Shashaguea, 30 years old, of Gary, from his uncomfortable position beneath a steel fence near the 31st street entrance to the Exposition grounds. Clarence, who said he is half Scotch and half Ottawa Indian, is a machinery repairman, but he had not brought his tools along.

For eight hours, from 9:30 o'clock Friday evening until dawn, Clarence remained silent. His neck had become wedged between a conduit and the bottom of the tall fence which is a few inches above the ground. Once in a while he wriggled his legs to keep warm, but that was all.

Sergt. George Brummer of the Fair police found Clarence and called the firemen, who pried the fence up a few more inches. Clarence got up, but he did not appear perturbed. "I wanted to see a fan dance," he said, "but I guess I'll have to pay my way in."

SEEK LAW TO HALT STUNT DIVES FROM G. WASHINGTON BRIDGE

New York, Sept. 17.—[Special]—So many persons have tried stunt dives from the new George Washington bridge that officials of the port of New York authority have announced they will seek legislation to punish those who encourage and sponsor bridge jumping.

Four individuals on six occasions have sought to leap from the span while photographers waited to take pictures. The leap was actually made on three occasions and two men were killed. A third was injured and the fourth is now in jail at Hackensack.

The general manager of the port authority said that after the first fatality officials of the bridge believed that no one would find a sponsor for such a stunt, but they were surprised to learn that acrobats could easily get support for a dive from the bridge.

SETS $50,000 AS BAILEY'S OFFER TO BREAK JAIL

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 16.—(AP)—A federal official expressed the opinion today that about $50,000 was the price agreed upon between Harvey Bailey, notorious outlaw, and those who aided him in his Labor day break from the Dallas county jail.

Federal investigators asserted they had developed an "air tight" case against Thomas L. Manion, 60 year old deputy jailer and former army colonel, and Grover C. Bevill, alias Jack Beval, 45, who are under arrest as Bailey's alleged accomplices.

They were held in jail today under $10,000 bond each to face trial on federal charges of aiding in the escape. Clyde O. Eastus, United States district attorney, said the government might file additional charges of conspiracy in order to double the two year penalty that might be assessed in the event of conviction.

Bailey sawed his way out of a cell in the jail and used a smuggled pistol in making his sensational break. He was captured four hours later at Ardmore, Okla., and is now in jail at Oklahoma City. There he will go on trial Monday with eleven others charged with the $200,000 ransom kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, oil man.

COLLIE BATTLES BANDIT; BULLET HITS ROBBED MAN

Bruno Buino, 1436 Blackhawk street, and his wife, Hattie, had an exciting time with a couple of bandits, a collie dog and some guns early today. In front of 1443 North Paulina street Buino's automobile was curbed by the robbers, who took $150 and the car. Buino and his wife walked to the tavern of his brother-in-law, Tony Ulamitz, at 1509 Dickson street. A few minutes later there was a knock at the door and Buino opened it. The two men who had robbed him entered.

Buino yelled that they were the stickup men and dashed for the rear to get a gun. One of the bandits followed with drawn pistol and was about to shoot when the collie sprang at him and seized him by the right arm. The pistol in his hand was discharged and the bullet lodged in Buino's leg.

Next to a Camel
Chevrolet gives most miles per gallon
CHEVROLET No argument about the camel. When it comes to a matter of miles per gallon, there's nothing in all the Gobi desert—or Sahara—or anywhere else—that can beat him. No argument about the Chevrolet, either. It's the most economical form of full-size transportation on wheels.
You can travel a long, long way in a Chevrolet Six without a single stop for gas or oil. In fact, you can get more miles out of a gallon, in a Chevrolet, than you can get in any other full-size car. The best proof of this is the way Chevrolet is being preferred by leading national business firms. These firms know their mileage figures. And today, Chevrolet is their first choice by an overwhelming count.
Chevrolet is also first choice of the American public by the widest margin in history. And it isn't hard to see why: In addition to giving the best mileage on gas and oil, Chevrolet costs less to keep up, especially after 10,000 miles! Chevrolet has the finest name for dependability of any low-priced car. Chevrolet also gives you so many things that other cars don't! A Fisher body. Fisher steel-plus-hardwood construction, safest and strongest there is. The Fisher Ventilation System. Syncro-Mesh shift combined with Free Wheeling. A cushion-balanced six-cylinder engine. A Starterator. And a long list of other features you're entitled to get in a modern car.
No—you really don't need to take the word of any "man about Gobi" to appreciate a Chevrolet. Take the word of the great American public, "It's by far the one best low-priced buy of all."

TELLS WHY JAPS LAUD KILLERS OF NATION'S CHIEFS

Quirk Seen Due to 20th Century Feudalism.

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Sept. 16.—In the United States a man made an attempt on the life of President Roosevelt and killed Mayor Cermak of Chicago. The assassin was immediately arrested, tried, convicted and sentenced to death, and the death sentence was carried out within a comparatively brief period of time.

In Japan a band of army and navy men, including minor officers, carried out an assassination plot and campaign of violence on May 15 last year. Their actions resulted in the deaths of Premier Tsuyoshi Inukai and the head of a leading semi-official trading and banking corporation. Simultaneously attempts were made to wreck the Tokio central police station, the central power station, the Bank of Japan, and other institutions.

The military men involved in the plot immediately surrendered to their superior officers, while the civilians, mostly young farmers, were shortly apprehended.

Year's Delay in Trial.

The trials of these men did not begin for more than a year after the commission of the crimes. Much to the surprise of foreign observers, the official court procurator in the army court martial of 11 cadets on Aug. 21 recommended sentences of only 8 years' imprisonment. This recommendation was made under a military criminal code which provides that those who rebel under arms shall be subject to punishment ranging from death and life imprisonment to terms exceeding five years.

Last week the government prosecutor in the naval trial of 10 naval officers involved in the May 15 violence asked death for three, life imprisonment for three, and terms ranging from three to six years for the others. Few Japanese believe, however that such severe sentences will be meted out or, if decreed, made effective.

As a protest against the demand of death sentences, Ensign Kazuo Fukuado today attempted suicide aboard the airplane carrier Kaga by hara-kiri, dispatches from Tokio said. Physicians said he would recover. Other dispatches reported that an aged farmer hanged himself in Chiba prefecture in protest against the death demand for the terrorists, while a girl threw herself beneath a train and died, leaving a letter which said she hoped the "accused might be saved."

May Delay Civilians Trial.

The trials of a group of civilians who took part in earlier assassinations of prominent government leaders have not yet begun. According to reports in the Japanese press these trials may be postponed indefinitely because Nissho Inouye, a Buddhist priest, leader of the so-called "Blood league," who led the civilian gang involved, objected to the competency of the court which was scheduled to try him and his associates.

As a result of Inouye's publicly voiced objection to the competency of the court, Chief Justice Sakamaki personally visited the priest in prison and offered to conduct the trial in a manner satisfactory to the accused.

These developments naturally have been confusing to occidentals who are accustomed to more or less speedy action in cases of this kind. But there were other developments during the course of the military trials in the May 15 case which were even more sensational and confusing.

Following Procurator Sagisaka's demand for sentences of 8 years for the army men involved in the murders and acts of violence, Dr. Kotaro Nakagawa, one of the attorneys for the defense, brought into court a package wrapped in white cloth from which he dramatically produced a bottle of alcohol containing the little fingers of nine persons. He explained that these fingers had been chopped from the hands of nine individuals and sent to the war minister with a petition asking leniency for the accused military men.

50,000 Ask Leniency.

It also was brought out in this connection that some 50,000 persons had signed similar petitions. In the face of this sentiment, the attorneys for the accused demanded the sentences be reduced to not more than three years.

These sensational developments constitute a public manifestation of a revolutionary situation now taking place in Japan which may result in civil war, a foreign war, or a complete scrapping of the present form of government in Japan in favor of a military dictatorship.

There were further developments in the military trial bordering on the sensational, at least from the viewpoint of occidentals. One of the accused, a minor officer, declared that he was inspired to murder Inukai by certain "ghostly influences" dating back to 1703 when 47 "ronin" avenged the death of their master by slaying the lord who had caused his death and then, in turn, committed suicide by the hara-kiri method.

Inspired by Patriotism.

Others of the accused when testifying delivered fiery political speeches declaring they had been inspired by a patriotic desire to "save" the nation. Lieut. Kuroiwa, who fired the first bullet in the assassination of the premier, declared that he wished to express his resentment against the weak diplomacy of the nation in the immediate past.

"My disgust with the country's weak diplomacy grew more and more deep when I felt the future of the empire jeopardized with the occurrence of the Manchurian affair," he said.

Another, Lieut. Kakushi Murayama, declared he was inspired by a desire to abolish the plutocracy of Japan, to restrict the system of private ownership and penetration of Manchuria by the Japanese forces. Several of the accused declared they were inspired by a desire to cleanse corrupt politics, in proof of which he exhibited in court two receipts for 500,000 yen [about $135,000 currently], allegedly bribes paid to two members of the Japanese house of representatives by the late Chinese Marshal Chang Tso-lin of Manchuria.

Called Naval Pact Disgrace.

Practically all of the accused army and naval men declared they were inspired by a desire to wipe out the disgrace of the London naval agreement which had bound Japan to an inferior naval status with respect to the United States and Great Britain.

The Japan Advertiser, American paper in Tokio, on Aug. 18 stated that the seemingly widespread sentiment throughout the country favoring leniency for the accused was being stirred up by two leading patriotic organizations, the Young Men's association and the Reservists' association. Other organizations involved were certain orders of Buddhist priests and labor bodies in centers where munition factories are located. Although the circulation of such petitions in Japan is unlawful under the so-called "petitions law," the home office, which has charge of law enforcement, has as yet taken no action.

The Foreign Affairs' association of Japan, which publishes a magazine called Contemporary Japan, issued on Aug. 19 an explanation of the so-called "May 15" case and also of the earlier assassinations of Baron Takuma Dan, financial czar, and Junnosuke Inouye, former minister of finance. This article, written anonymously, but issued to the press by the Foreign Affairs association, claimed the assassinations and attempts to destroy key industries and institutions were inspired by the ideology of "national socialism."

Cites Red Movement.

Previous assassinations of public officials, of which there have been several in modern years, had always been inspired by patriotism and loyalty to the emperor, but recently sentiment had changed and those favoring direct action had derived their inspiration from socialism or a desire to eliminate corrupt parliamentary government, the article said. A further element cited was antipathy to communism which has made such inroads in Japan that more than 2,000 students and professors and labor union leaders are now serving sentences on charges of harboring "dangerous thoughts," which stands for communistic thinking in the island empire.

In the background of the May 15 murders were the teachings of three so-called "thought reformers," Dr. Shumei Okawa, Kozaburo Tachibana, and Ikki Kita. Dr. Okawa was the director of the eastern Asia economic investigation bureau, a society which was devoted to the study of political, economic, and social reform. He preached that the best elements in Japanese society were to be found in the army and navy and the common people.

The second "thought" leader was Kozaburo Tachibana, who cherished the ideal of self-government based on the interests of agriculture. He established a school known as the "aikyo-juku" near Tokio, and devoted himself to teaching young men of the farming villages. Many persons interested in national socialism came under his influence. The third, Ikki Kita, is a revolutionary idealist whose program borders on anarchism.

Plot Born from Teachings.

The plot to assassinate national leaders and create chaos in Tokio is generally believed to have resulted from the teachings of these three "thought" leaders. They obtained arms and ammunition which they distributed together with considerable sums of money to their students and followers and actually framed the plot which they hoped would result in the enforcement of martial law and ultimately the overturn of the present system of government.

Behind these immediate elements, however, is a situation practically impossible of understanding on the part of occidentals. It is best explained by the fact that Japan, within the memory of many persons now living, has emerged from a status of feudalism to a first rank status among the nations of the world. But while the country has taken on many of the outward forms of modernity, the masses of the people are still feudalistic in mentality.

For example, there was recently formed in Tokio a society known as the Nihon Bunka Remmel, the chief object of which was to propogate the doctrine that the Japanese are physically, mentally, and culturally the superior of occidentals. This doctrine is also said to have a great influence with Gen. Sadao Araki, present war minister, who recently wrote that the Japanese people are spiritually and physically the superior of Europeans

Jap Supremacy Justified.

"Thus the Japanese people are fully justified to march abreast of other nations in respect to natural ability and character," he stated. "The divine spirit in which the Japanese empire was founded should not be confined within the country, but should be introduced all over the world in order that the imperial Japanese spirit may become the ruling spirit of all mankind. The divine way thus laid out by Japan has therefore become the way for the rest of the world to follow."

Americans and Europeans may smile indulgently at such remarks as intended for domestic consumption with an eye to obtaining parliamentary approval of tremendous military budgets, but it goes far deeper than that. Every school child in Japan is taught that the Japanese empire was founded by the supreme creating kami or gods and that his imperial majesty, Hirohito, the present emperor, is the 24th in direct descent from Amaterasu-o-kemi, the sun goddess, who ruled many centuries before the Christian era.

Superiority Complex Created.

This means that the emperor is regarded as above the man made constitution and modern laws of the country and when the moderization program was decided upon, those in control of the army and navy thoughtfully placed these departments directly under the emperor in order that politicians and business men could not interfere with the appropriations in the diet.

Naturally the universal teaching of divine origin has created a sort of superiority complex on the part of the leaders of the country which has made it extremely difficult for occidentals to understand their motives and reactions in international conferences.

Gen. Araki in a recent interview declared that Japan could not tolerate bolshevism or fascism and neither could the country place any hope in democratic institutions. He said that Japan and the other nations must follow the "divine way." In Manchuria the Japanese military officers frequently refer to the "kingly way."

Confusion of Thought.

At the last session of the diet it was decided to create a holy city or sacred zone on the Ise peninsula on Owara bay, where is located the famous Ise shrines. These shrines are regarded as the origin of the imperial line and according to Japanese school books were dedicated many centuries before the birth of Christ to the worship of the sun goddess. nese representative signed the Kellogg anti-war pact, a tremendous political commotion was stirred in Japan because of the phrase in the document reading "in the names of the respective peoples." It was seriously argued that no representative of Japan other than the emperor was entitled to sign any international treaty on behalf of the "people."
A few years ago when the Nippo-

Along with these teachings representing fundamental beliefs on the part of the Japanese people, there has grown up in recent years an over-expanded industrialism based on modern western science and engineering The result is a confusion of thought that has produced a situation bordering on complete chaos from the standpoint of national psychology.

The country is replete with secret organizations, each of which has a plan for saving the empire, in which respect there is a close resemblance to conditions which prevailed in czarist Russia prior to the bolshevist revolution. When the modernization program was forced on Japan the country was ruled by the shoguns or feudal lords which had been for decades involved in civil wars similar to the present Chinese practice.

Forced to Unify.

Outside pressure was so strong, however, that Japan had to discontinue its internal wars and unify. The emperor previously had not occupied an exalted position, so in order to elevate him above the shoguns or clans, the doctrine of the emperor's divine origin, Shintoism, was revived. The shoguns then proceeded to divide up the other interests of the country, one clan taking the navy, another the army, another the railways, government monopolies and so on.

For many years the study of western things and institutions was a national fetish, to such an extent that the country became modernized almost overnight, but in form only, for the minds of the people remained feudalistic, aided by the teachings in the school books.

This explains, partly at least, the recent strange manifestations on the part of the younger men in the army and navy who regard themselves as the heavenly inspired saviors of the nation. Thus the slaying of a premier or a finance minister who signed an unpopular treaty or who was responsible for unpopular domestic or foreign policies becomes in the minds of large numbers of people acts of highest patriotism.

The present worldwide economic depression has probably caused more distress in Japan than in any other country, due to an over-expanded industrialism, limited agricultural land and an impoverished population. Thus the country is cursed with industrial, political and social ills which baffle the leaders of the country. The military elements and the ruling groups, descendants of the original shoguns, self-perpetuated through a curious system of adoption of sons in cases where there is no lineal heir, are fighting to maintain their positions and also the old traditions.

The result is a struggle, the bitterness of which is little understood outside of Japan. A short time prior to the intervention in Manchuria the civilian leaders in the government were considering a proposal to abolish the system of having the army and navy represented in the cabinet by line officers. Army leaders headed that off by starting the Manchurian affair. Now they are preaching the doctrine that Japan can only be saved by continuing the military in control indefinitely, which means more warfare.

COUNT TOGO WARNS JAP NAVAL OFFICERS TO HOLD THEIR TONGUE

TOKIO, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The Japanese naval minister, Admiral Mineo Osumi, visited the national hero, Count Heihachiro Togo, today and asked the veteran Russo-Japanese war hero for some word to allay arising indignation among officers over the trial of ten youths accused of killing Premier Inukai in May, 1932.

The admiral was uneasy lest naval discipline be undermined among young officers at the principal Japanese naval bases because the state prosecutor had asked severe penalties, including the death sentence, for the defendants. Togo replied to Admiral Osumi that "all officers in the imperial navy must be prudent in speech and action."

This Osumi broadcast in the form of a general order to all commanders in the fleet and navy bases and added his own statement that "undoubtedly the court martial will reach a fair and just decision." Evidences of a movement among officers against the severe punishment asked in the court martial caused a secret conference of Premier Saito, Osumi, War Minister Araki, and Minister of Justice Koyama.

Today's session of the trial at the Yokosuka naval base opened dramatically when six men placed a file of letters and petitions, with 61,000 signatures, before the judges' bench. The documents asked clemency for the lieutenants.

Wife Beaten for Going to Choir Practice, She Says

Mrs. Helen Hinz, 19 years old, 906 South Lathrop avenue, Forest Park, testified yesterday before Circuit Judge Walter J. La Buy that her husband, Edward, objected to her attending choir practice and struck her when she returned home one day in May, 1932. Judge La Buy instructed her attorney, Floyd Faxon, to draw a divorce decree, and ordered Hinz to pay $3 a week for the support of his son, 1 year old.

Radio Science's Most Thrilling Achievement, A Radio Set That Completely Revolutionizes All Previous Ideas of Radio Reception By Actually DUPLICATING Studio-Performance Down To the Faintest Whisper

THERE'S one audience that can't be fooled about radio reception—and that's the families of the radio stars themselves! For they're in a position to know!

That's why, almost over night, the sensational new Stewart-Warner Radio has swept into the homes of 9 out of 10 of the biggest stars in radio's hall of fame!

For Stewart-Warner engineers have at last perfected a radio that actually duplicates studio-performance in the home. And does it with an accuracy that is utterly uncanny.

In fact, no less a star than Jack Pearl says:—"To my mind Stewart-Warner is one radio that gives perfect duplication of studio-performance. That is why I had one sent to my father to use in his own home." And Jack Pearl is only one of the galaxy of famous stars who acclaim this new radio development and have it in their homes.

Its secret lies in the fact that it's built on the premise that a radio set is NOT a musical instrument in itself. Its sole function is to duplicate exactly—not impose a tone of its own. And upon this premise has been built the most perfect sound-duplicating instrument radio science has ever known.

Act Now! All Prices Advance October 1st!

To satisfy your curiosity, if for no other reason, see these sets at your nearest Stewart-Warner dealer. Hear—perhaps for the very first time—the true, living voices of your radio favorites just as they really sound.

You'll be delighted, too, with the Dual Harmony feature of the new Stewart-Warner Radio of the Stars. You'll see cabinets that do not look like radio sets at all. Mechanisms concealed in useful and beautiful pieces of furniture that please the eye, as harmonious reception pleases the ear. See and hear them today!

"The newspaper is an institution developed by civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

MORE SECOND THOUGHTS ON THE CONSTITUTION.

Citizens who flatter themselves that they have lived beyond the useful years of the American constitution and who now regard it as an archaic historical document might not be able to confirm their impressions if they looked elsewhere than at the land of the constitution. Let their thoughts travel where this constitution does not, where none of its guaranties prevail, where its antitheses govern man's place in the nation and under the government.

The newest of these modern states is Germany. There the American constitution would be archaic and there persons are proscribed for race and religion. Political opposition is a crime against dictatorship. The faithful must raise the hand in an Iroquois-Roman salute to the new all highest or be known as unfaithful and be immediately unhappy. Part of the population is in a cataleptic state of hysterical coma and the other part is in terror and despair. The lettre de cache and the Bastille have been revived. Learning has been driven into exile or the catacombs. A word against the government is warrant for the prison camp and may be an order on the undertaker.

The press is either craven or silent. The pulpit obeys the secular, not the ordained, ministry. Marriage proposals are controlled by the police code. Property is held by sufferance. The professions are regulated by anthropological nonsense. The schools glorify the name of Hitler. The informer may be under the dinner table or behind the bed. Germany is a state in which the American constitution would be archaic.

Germany's model is Italy. Italy did not invade Germany in the war, but it has since. There is one voice in Italy. It sounds in the forum and in the press. So much castor oil has flowed since the black shirt march on Rome that the opposition now is quiet. The Fascist inquisition cannot find many heretical opinions. Everybody swings into line when the trumpets sound. Here the American constitution is archaic. It protects the rights of minorities, the voice of opposition, the privileges and freedom of the individual, granting the right to vote one government out and another in —or it did before it became unfitted for modern use.

Another great modern state is Russia, where the possession of two cows and their increase qualifies a peasant for a kulak deportation camp near the arctic circle, where the place of residence is determined by government classification, where food is doled out by cards, where a mummy is regarded as a god, and the delight of childhood is the Marxian dialectic.

The American constitution was and is intended to protect the people living under it from the worst curse humaity has ever known outside the ills which are in nature itself. That curse has been powerful, autocratic, and dictatorial government, which destroys what it cannot make supple and suppliant to its will. The modern importance of the American constitution depends entirely upon the desirability of the conditions it guarantees to the people under it. If the conditions are infelicitous in their liberties and freedom the constitution has seen its most useful days.

OUR JAPANESE RELATIONS.

The comments of the Japanese press upon the American naval building plans are not without some justification. We do not include them in our protest against the unfriendly and inflammatory propaganda against us which has been carried on for some months in Japan. The exploitation of irresponsible and unfounded rumors is not compatible with the friendly intent professed by War Minister Araki and some other Japanese spokesmen, but the Japanese press may very properly note our official program for naval increase. War Minister Araki has now given official approval to the press criticisms in a speech before the military section of the supreme war council, declaring that American sympathy for China and the continued presence of the American fleet in the Pacific called for the immediate strengthening of Japan's naval defense.

We must acknowledge that the administration plans have not been announced with due consideration of Japanese susceptibilities. A naval building program of some hundreds of millions broadcast so as to develop the most domestic political effect was bound to create a bad international impression. This is another instance of the mishandling of our relations with Japan in recent years.

On the other hand, it is proper for us to point out to our critics in Japan that the program approved by the administration as such does not justify exaggerated concern. If carried out to the full extent and at the maximum rate it will merely be an exercise of treaty rights acknowledged by Japan in formal convention. The Japanese press allege that it inaugurates a naval race, but that charge comes with ill grace from Japan, which has been building substantially while we had stopped building and which therefore had advanced its relative strength to a ratio not contemplated at least by our government at the Washington or London conferences. It is not inaugurating a new naval race to exercise formal treaty rights. If Japanese consideration of American naval planning is disposed to be fair it will not ignore our sacrifice of the right to develop naval bases which are essentials to any aggressive operation in her waters and it will not ignore the fact that because of our long abstention from naval construction our fleet has become unbalanced, and to that extent, and seriously, has lost efficiency. Indeed, our zeal for peace and the reduction of armament has prevented us from carrying on a logical program of fleet maintenance, and this must be corrected without further delay. Such a program does not envisage naval competition, but merely the proper organization of a naval force, whatever its rank may be.

There is in the United States a growing concern at the militant threats from Japan. They should cease, as they can lead to serious misunderstandings.

THE SUCKERS OF MUSCLE SHOALS.

The Chicago Better Business bureau has come out with another, and no doubt timely, warning against the purchase of lots around Muscle Shoals. President Roosevelt is among those who have advised against such speculations. Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of the board of the Tennessee Valley authority, is another. He is quoted as saying "there is no justification for the present nation-wide advertising of Muscle Shoals real estate. Most of those who buy will lose." To these weighty judgments are appended the findings of the Better Business bureaus of New York, Washington, and Birmingham, Ala.

The turbines at the Wilson dam have been turning since 1925 but the city of Muscle Shoals contains 42 voters. Photographs of the heart of the town show a few scattered buildings, paved streets overgrown with weeds and a few telephone poles as the only signs of civilization.

It is too bad that good money is being sunk in these lots by gullible investors, of course; but the fact might as well be recognized now as later that the aggregate losses of the profit-seeking individual suckers will be negligible compared to the losses which the collectivity of suckers, known as taxpayers, will take as a result of the government's fantastic Tennessee Valley scheme. The whole thing is a fraud on the American people. The government is spending millions to develop power plants where there is already a superfluity of power. It is spending more millions to develop agricultural productivity though the output of our farms is already alleged to be a menace to the welfare of the nation.

Why pick on the sales talk of the subdivision boys? Their sins are negligible, relatively speaking. Nobody has to buy one of their weed-grown lots but every taxpayer is obliged to pay for the dams, the machinery and all the rest of the expensive improvements, so-called, which the Tennessee Valley authority will install. Then the taxpayers will pay interest on the losses. If the taxpayer doesn't want to be a participant in this folly he goes to jail, sent there by the same government which dragged him into the scheme.

It may be said that the real estaters know their lots are nearly worthless whereas the government thinks its scheme will be a huge success. It is probably nearer the truth to say that the real estaters, being uncritical optimists, hope their customers may make a profit, whereas the whole Tennessee Valley folly was undertaken to pay a political debt to the solid south at the taxpayers' expense, and as a typical pork barrel venture is not expected to be worth what it will cost.

DAVID'S BUSTED ROMANCE.

Aimee's whataman, Dave Hutton, has been ripened by experience into a marital philosopher. He may be mistaken in thinking that to Aimee, although the temple bells were ringing, he was only a gigolo. After all, David can sing, and gigolos do not need two accomplishments. Also, he is a man of reflection. Aimee has given him a public. She has the magic touch. Even to divorce her gives him a press and a gate value. This, wise man, he realizes. People want to hear him sing because he is divorcing Aimee. It's probably better for him, thus, than marrying her. If later he should contemplate marrying any one for the gate receipts it might be well for him to consider Mae West. What a team! "You're a bad girl." "You're going to find out." Burns and Allen could do no better.

David, however, has his profundities. He says: "Marriage fails when you marry a person and wake up the next morning to find you are married to 20,000 church members, a board of elders, and a few old hens."

Solomon did it, but probably a lesser person would find it difficult.

Editorial of the Day

IOWA'S TAX PROBLEM.

[The Rock Island Argus.]

When the Iowa assembly convenes shortly there is bound to be much controversy on the subject of taxes. Those who favor a net income tax will demand a graduated tax upon incomes. It will be objected to on the ground that such a tax represents an invasion of the federal tax field; that it is double taxation; that it penalizes thrift and rewards indolence; that if carried to a point where it would be effective as a producer of revenue it would defeat its own purpose by stifling thrift and initiative, a process which would stop the wheels of industry and paralyze progress. This graduated tax, it will be argued, is fundamentally un-American, unjust, unsound and dangerous, and violates the equality intent of the constitution.

"Get the people accustomed to levying a 10 per cent tax on a $5,000 income and 20 per cent on $10,000," says the Marshalltown Times-Republican. "Step it up from time to time until complete confiscation is reached. Is this the big idea of advocates of this tax? A flat rate gross tax on incomes can be regulated. It is a tax which all people pay. When its rates go too high the people can elect representatives to make laws that will reduce this tax. A tax which is paid by a small minority, and which exempts a vast majority, can be made confiscatory, and the minority which it robs is helpless. The intent of our constitution was to protect a helpless minority from a ruthless majority."

We think that more and more the idea of a flat rate gross income tax is growing in favor. If such a tax were in lieu of all other state taxes it would have much to commend it to the people. A tax of this sort would be fair to all, rich and poor.

BUSINESS AND RECOVERY

BY JOHN F. WOHLGEMUTH.
[Secretary, The National Underwriter.]

The newspapers are filled with doubts about the NRA, but who has a definite plan? If the brain trust change their minds from week to week, are they any worse than the business leaders of the country, who have no idea of what should be done, or, if they have, are afraid to express it?

There may be argument about the morality or the desirability of inflation, but there can only be universal agreement on its effect, which is the cheapening of money. This is a debt depression. Prices sank under the pressure of selling to pay debts, including taxes, which are debts to government. Prices rose under the promise of inflation because that promise relieved business of the threat of distress selling and gave promise of higher prices through a cheaper dollar.

It is idle to argue whether we have had inflation or not. The dollar has been cheapened, which is the only effect of inflation that concerns business. The markets daily prove that prices are tied to gold through the dollar. Then why do we not have the prosperity promised through inflation?

Inflation history is too recent to be obscure to a candid observer. Business started upward with the promise of inflation. It was still upward bound in June, when the meddling acts were passed. Then it slid off. Why? In the enthusiasm of visible recovery from one measure, inflation, the congress gave unlimited powers under the explicit promise that they would be used only if necessary. As soon as it became apparent that the meddling powers would be exercised business took alarm.

Whatever recovery has taken place is due to cheaper money and consequent relief from the fear of distress selling. The reason for buyers holding off has been removed by the promise that prices would be kept upward. Whatever check there has been to recovery has been due to fear of actual measures or to open threats of new terrors to come.

The only intelligent and definite plan and reason in the whole depression and recovery have been stated by the President. In his radio address of May 8 he promised stabilization on the new value of the dollar, "so that trade can make contracts ahead." "Confidence" has been the great cry for four years, but no one took the trouble to define it until the President paraphrased it as the ability to "make contracts ahead."

Business consists of men venturing their savings to supply consumer wants in the hope of a profit. It does not matter whether their savings are large or small, whether the ventures are individual or corporate. Whether the venture is money or credit, there is no business except venturing savings in the hope of a profit.

The codes so clearly threaten profits that the brain trust frankly discusses government financing of initial losses because so many businesses scarcely have capital to earn profits, let alone absorb losses. But who will venture savings when initial losses are so sure that the government must prepare to finance them? There is no assurance of profits after the initial losses, only a hope based on brain trust say-so.

Gen. Johnson in July said sixty days would tell the story of the codes. The story is pretty well told to those who feel the pulse of business. Are we going on to new terrors that will destroy what business has managed to survive, and so into the most appalling winter of unemployment and suffering that this country has seen?

Or have business men enough intelligence to unite quickly in a demand for simple measures that will enable business to go forward?

Stabilization was sidetracked at the London conference because the nations were not ready to coöperate. We are losing more every month than we could hope to gain from the most hearty and friendly world coöperation. Why let our own business sink to new depths while waiting for world coöperation?

The codes are admirable to distribute prosperity, but not to win it. They are paralyzing enterprise, which is the heart of prosperity. Is it better to carry the codes to the bitter end and wait for a Russian winter to prove their effect or admit that unforeseen effects more than counteract their benefits?

Let business be given the utmost freedom to operate, but not to combine on prices, and let that freedom be proclaimed at once, so that business can get started and resume employment before winter sets in. Price combines will be as bad as the codes because they will lead to buyers' strikes. Business that cannot stand competition cannot be saved in these times. What is needed is the utmost freedom of business effort. Private choking of enterprise is as bad as public.

Cheapening of the dollar has raised prices, but there are two factors in prices. One is the value of money and the other is supply and demand. The second can work only when trade can with confidence "make contracts ahead." It was the promise of stabilization, as well as of inflation, that started business upward and made June the best month. It was the setback to stabilization, as well as the threat of the codes, that started business downward again.

The simple steps that are possible are two. First, frank recognition of unexpected harm in the codes and total abolition of all interference with business under the June laws. Second, stabilization of the dollar on gold at about its present gold value or lower if a lower level is intended. But stabilization at once.

The agricultural measures will bring only loss to the treasury and disappointment to the farmers, but the AGA program might be completed except for the processing taxes. The treasury can stand losses if business is allowed to recover. The profit to the government on the gold stock will take care of heavy losses.

If there are any moral scruples about devaluing the dollar they are too late. The dollar has been devalued. What business man or banker or bondholder would predict business revival from a return to the gold standard with the former gold content? Such return would send prices below the February level.

What no writer seems to point out is that inflation, or its object, the cheapening of the dollar, has no effect on trade except as debts affect prices. Trade will simply accept any value of the dollar and go forward if that value can be relied on. Debts affect prices in two ways. First, forced sales depress the market, more especially when they are hanging over the market rather than after they have been made. Second, debts enter into costs.

A debt illustration will be most convincing in case of a farm. If a farm is mortgaged for $75 an acre the interest charge is $4.50 a year. If an acre will produce 15 bushels of wheat and the farmer gets 40 cents a bushel, three-fourths of the $6 proceeds goes for interest cost alone. He gets less than his labor and seed cost, after paying the interest, and nothing for his own capital investment.

If inflation raises the farm price to 80 cents a bushel the farmer's return jumps to $12 an acre, but his interest cost remains at $4.50. He has $7.50 left for himself instead of $1.50. If wheat doubles in price from inflation, all that the farmer buys will also double in price. Nevertheless his interest cost is reduced from three-fourths of what the land will yield to three-eighths.

Cost in industry is not so simply shown, but interest cost works the same way as on the farm. Another illustration may help. It is profitable to a railroad to run a $1 round trip Sunday excursion from Indianapolis to Chicago because it is extra business and does not have to earn interest on the capital and bond investment. Yet the road could not live on $1 fares from Indianapolis to Chicago because it must earn interest on the large cost of way and equipment.

If inflation doubles prices the relief to the farmer obviously is at the expense of the mortgagee. The latter still gets $4.50, but can buy only half as much with it. Thus there is a limit in conscience to inflation or, more effectively, a limit in the outcries of creditors. Germany wiped out all debts, some say deliberately. France stabilized on gold at a level that canceled four-fifths of each debt by reducing the gold value of the franc from about 20 cents to about 4 cents. The furthest the President can go is to cut the dollar in half.

Creditors in this country have made little outcry against inflation because they realized they might get nothing if the depression continued into universal bankruptcy. The morality question is vital only to relatively few holders of underlying bonds because other creditors will get more through inflation than through stagnation and bankruptcy.

THIS EPIDEMIC OF SLEEPING SICKNESS.

THE sleeping sickness prevailing in St. Louis appears to be somewhat different from any known in America at any time hitherto. It has been likened to an epidemic which prevailed in Japan a few years ago. The clinical peculiarities of the disease in the present epidemic are rather more fever, stiffness, and pain in the muscles; greater resemblance to typhoid, less tendency to double vision as an early symptom, rather high mortality rate, tendency to complete and prompt recovery; absence of prolonged after effects such as drooling, paralysis agitans, feeble-mindedness, or other mental impairment and change in personality.

The peculiarities in pathology appear to be less tendency of the disease to be limited to the brain stem and a greater tendency toward a general involvement of the brain.

During several weeks prior to the outbreak of the disease in St. Louis, and during its earlier weeks, an unusual number of blood specimens were sent to the health department laboratory to be examined for evidence of typhoid fever. This examination was negative. When the encephalitis epidemic appeared the health department investigated some of the cases that had been tested earlier for typhoid. They strongly suspect, though they are not able to prove, that a large proportion of these were mild, atypical cases of encephalitis. Most of them recovered completely and the nature of the disease would never have been suspected had the epidemic not developed.

The Illinois health department has likewise reinvestigated cases that were earlier reported to them as cases of intestinal flu, typhoid, malaria, and such.

The indications are that the disease is far more prevalent than the St. Louis reports indicate, many of the cases being mild and atypical and not being recognized as such.

Diagnoses are now being made by puncture of the spinal canal, and examination of the fluid withdrawn, in addition to consideration of the symptoms. The laboratory procedure is helping in the diagnosis of the mild, atypical cases. Finding cases of this type, practically all of which get well and without complications, is causing the disease to be recognized as less serious, but more widely spread, than was thought to be the case at first.

The encephalitis commission, located in New York City, is trying out a serum as to its ability to cure and prevent. They have not been able to decide how much value it has, if any. This commission has been studying the disease for several years. They have issued two valuable reports on it.

BETTER INVESTIGATE.

B. M. M. writes: How can I prevent acid foods from causing indigestion and sour stomach? I enjoy eating fresh vegetables, but the result is bad. Sometimes I have to take a piece of bread with each mouthful to absorb the acid juices before they reach the stomach.

REPLY.

You probably need to have your case investigated more thoroughly than it has been. Very few vegetables contain enough acid to taste sour. In fact, we use vinegar on many vegetables because they are not sour enough to suit the taste. We use vinegar in barbecuing meats and in certain Austrian meat dishes for the same reason. When we eat underripe fruits and sour fruit juices there is enough acid to put the teeth on edge. When this condition exists we overcome the objectionable taste effect by eating a little bread or potatoes. However, this is quite different from the acidity which we call "indigestion and sour stomach" and also from acidosis.

MAY BE SERIOUS.

M. A. G. writes: Can you tell me what causes the forearms of a woman of 60 to break out with what resemble blood blisters? She has two or three on each arm. As soon as one heals another breaks out. They are not sore, but when pressed they break and discharge blood. She seems to be in good health.

REPLY.

I judge she has some form of purpura. This is a condition in which blood cells go into solution and some of the blood elements ooze into the tissues. There are purpura conditions that are serious. Others are much less so. There are several skin diseases which are characterized by blood blisters. This lady should have a physician with experience in skin troubles decide which she has and whether it is important.

BLEEDERS.

Mrs. P. C. B. writes: I have two boys, aged 5 and 3 years. They both have hemophilia. I read in the paper where the ex-king of Spain's both boys have it also, and that one of the boys has undergone treatment that proved successful. Perhaps some doctor knows what that treatment was. I would be very grateful if I could find out, as I have nearly lost my boys several times from bad bleeding spells. My two brothers bled to death from this disease.

REPLY.

The treatment for hemophilia now being tried out is an ovarian extract. This was proposed at the Illinois Research hospital of the University of Illinois, where it is being used somewhat experimentally and with promising results. Most physicians have read of this method and know how to make use of it.

INTEREST.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Two years ago I borrowed $1,000, the loan to run two years with interest at 6 per cent. This loan was secured by a first mortgage on our homestead. When the loan was made I paid a $15 service fee to the real estate broker and a $50 commission fee, which was turned over to the mortgagee. 1. Is there an Illinois statute which provides that any charge for a secured loan above 7 per cent is usury? 2. If the above is so, then is the charge made to me usurious, in view of the fact that the $50 commission paid to the mortgagee plus the 6 per cent interest on the $1,000 for the period of the two years amounts to 8½ per cent? 3. If the combined charges amount to usury, what can I do to recover the excessive charge? G. A.

1. No. Legitimate charges are not regarded as interest, but if the charge is called a commission where the broker has already been paid, then this charge is presumably a cover for interest and the transaction would look usurious.

2. Yes.

3. Refuse to pay the interest. It probably will be necessary for you to employ an attorney to defend the court proceedings that are brought against you and this will likely cost more than the amount in issue.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

"FIVE DAY NOTICE."

Chicago, Sept. 8.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. In computing the time of a five day notice on a tenant for nonpayment of rent, are Sundays or holidays included? 2. How many days must intervene from the time of service to the date set for a court hearing? C. A. N.

1. If the five days end on a Sunday or a holiday, then the tenant would have an additional day, otherwise not.

2. At least five days.

BUILDING REPAIRS.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—[Friend of the People.]—I wonder if anything can be done with the building at Congress and Kedzie. There was an explosion in May and glass resulting therefrom still litters the sidewalk. The condition of the building is a disgrace to the neighborhood. L. S.

Permit has been issued to repair building damaged by fire. The débris on sidewalk is being cleaned up by workmen.

JOHN E. ERICSSON,
Commissioner of Buildings.

TITLE TO PROPERTY.

Pasadena, Cal., Sept. 5.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My wife and I purchased a building lot about eight years ago. The deed was made out to her and was so recorded. Deed should have been made out in both names. My wife died some months ago. Now I want to get a deed made out in my name. I have two children over 21 years old. Could you advise what steps to take in order to secure such a deed? H. F. A.

Conceivably you might be able to induce purchaser to accept the title in reliance on affidavits, but if the persons with whom you are dealing are inclined to be technical the simplest course would be to probate the estate and secure quitclaim deeds from the two children. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FRIEND OF THE FARMER

[Inquiries on problems of farm management, financing or governmental regulations sent to this department must be accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope for reply.]

F. J. B. asks: The tenant on my Dakota farm borrowed money from the government for seed and feed last spring. Must I have part of this debt deducted from the government wheat bonus if I sign the reduction of acreage contract?

Answer: The contract with the government provides that the allotment payments for wheat shall be made to both owner and tenant on the same basis as they participate in the wheat crop of the farm under present lease. The farm credit administration, which made the seed and feed loan, is asking farmers to apply as much of the proceeds from such wheat payments as they can to previous debts, and the contract provides that this may be done. It is not compulsory, however.

D. A. N. asks: The wheat crop on our farm in Sac county, Iowa, was badly damaged this year by what my tenant says were Hessian flies. Can they be killed off so this won't happen again?

Answer: The Hessian fly may be prevented from damaging next year's wheat crop by sowing the crop some time after Sept. 15, so that the wheat will not come up until after the adult flies have emerged, laid their eggs, and died. Any volunteer wheat should be plowed under or disked up.

Miss F. B. asks: My uncle has a heavy mortgage on his farm which is in arrears on both interest and principal, and one year's back taxes. Where can he get a government loan to refinance the mortgage and pay up the taxes?

Answer: Since your uncle's farm is in Missouri, make application to Wood Netherland, Federal Land bank, St. Louis, Mo.

Mrs. B. A. T. asks: Some one told me that if I signed a contract with the government to reduce the wheat crop on our South Dakota farm next year the government could force me to store the crop until we were told it could be sold. Is that true?

Answer: No. There is a provision in the farm adjustment act that farmers might borrow from the government in anticipation of the wheat benefit payments by properly storing and sealing the crop and giving it as collateral for the loan. Your crop can be sold anywhere and at any time you please under the wheat contract.

NRA QUESTION BOX

Requests for information concerning the NRA will be answered in this column. It is urged that questions be stated briefly. Following are some typical questions occasioned by the national recovery act and their answers:

QUESTION—Do the downtown filling stations come under the NRA?

ANSWER—They will. A code for this industry, which covers both garages and parking stations, has already been submitted to Washington officials. In the meantime, many Chicago operators of parking stations and garages are operating under the modified form of the President's reëmployment agreement which calls for a maximum of 54 hours a week.

QUESTION—If you work in a factory and they don't live up to the NRA by saying you are not on the pay roll, what can be done about it?

Answer: This is a new one to us and the matter is not entirely clear. If it is a question of evading the contract with the government under the President's agreement it should be reported in detail so that an investigation may be made.

DR. EINSTEIN'S PACIFISM.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—As a foreign visitor in rather rapid transit through the United States of America I have been carefully reading your paper during my short stay in Chicago.

I understand from your columns that my country is giving asylum to Albert Einstein and that he has abandoned the pacifist position.

A man who holds a certain faith so long as it is not against his interest and abandons it so soon as it entails danger is universally despised, but I doubt whether Einstein really ever was a pacifist, i. e., one who repudiates violence as a method, holding it to be clumsy, old fashioned, and inefficient; one who is convinced that killing people, individually or in armies, is unscientific and immoral, leading to banditry and economic collapse; one who knows there is no short cut to safety, because you can only overcome evil the way Jesus did, by self-suffering, and this calls for great courage and constant preparedness; this prevents you from handing over your purse to any one with a pistol, because you recognize in your attacker a child of God, and you want to rescue him from his dangerous and unsatisfied way of life, even at the risk of your own.

If Mr. Einstein was not, in this sense, a pacifist, I do not think he can be ridiculed as a deserter.

MURIEL LESTER.

AMENDING THE CONSTITUTION.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—If and when the twenty-first amendment, repealing the eighteenth, is ratified, it will be the first amendment to our constitution to have been ratified by conventions. All other amendments have been ratified by the action of state legislatures.

It seems obvious that had congress selected the ratification of the eighteenth amendment by state conventions, some, perhaps a great part of the states that ratified the amendment, would have rejected it.

The legislatures are usually elected on entirely different issues existing in the state and having no concern with national affairs. They are more ready to listen to the threats of the organized minority than to register by their vote on the amendment under consideration the true feeling of the people of the state. Also it is, I believe, a well known fact that such legislation is more a result of bargain and sale between legislators than a reflection of majority opinion.

Under the convention system of ratification the people of each state are permitted to show by their vote the approval or disapproval by the majority, and they are not subject to the importunities of the organized minority.

The sooner we eliminate the possibility of ratification of amendments by state legislatures and make it mandatory to ratify by state convention only, the less chance there will be for a repetition of the mistake of placing an unpopular amendment in the constitution.

A PERMANENT FAIR.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—As general counsel for the Garden and Flower show in the Horticultural building at A Century of Progress it gives me great pleasure to inform you that the directors of our company cordially indorse the suggestion of THE TRIBUNE that A Century of Progress be made a permanent fair in Chicago. We pledge you to the fullest extent our coöperation to that end.

We sincerely hope that the officials of the Fair and others who may be able to arrange for its continuation will see their way clear to carry out your suggestion.

SAMUEL A. ETTELSON.

CREDIT IN RURAL AREAS.

Rochelle, Ill., Sept. 11.—The requirements of banks are so strict in making loans in agricultural communities that few loans are made.

During the last two weeks I have asked a dozen or more of our citizens in a country city, who should have the best of credit, if they knew where they could borrow $500. Only one answer. No. "Do you know anybody in our city who can borrow $500?" "Not unless he can find a friend who will loan it to him." "Do you know of any such loan being made within a month?" "No."

For putting borrowed money into business the entire wealth of this community has lost its credit standing. The rule that collateral must be liquid practically puts such communities out of the borrowing business.

The money deposited by the community must be invested in the commercial centers for liquid securities. The deposits of the community cannot be kept there to finance local business because such loans would rarely be liquid.

A local bank is strong and sound, and served its community well. This service required that bank to take many farm mortgages. These must now be placed on the reserve list. Hence after the moratorium the depositors had to waive 40 per cent of their deposits. These deposits are now dead to the community. Furthermore, no new farm mortgages will be made by that bank.

This cripples and temporarily destroys one of the greatest values of property—the basis of credit. Little discussion seems to be given to this obstacle to prosperity in agricultural communities. Some way of making rural property a basis for loans must be found or such communities will remain in the slough. This will weight the wings of commercial centers with lead.

It is not by obtaining money from the United States government that the right kind of help can come. Rather it is the removal of the shackles imposed by banks, so that communities can use their own funds for self-service that will result in lasting rebuilding.

W. P. LANDON.

JAPANESE LAND HUNGER.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—In your column today James W. Walker, M. D., writes about what he claims is a need for birth control in Japan and cites an alleged "penetration into Manchuria" as proof.

May I ask Dr. Walker what evidence he has that there has been a Japanese penetration in Manchuria? From the best figures I am able to find the present population of Manchuria is 250,000 Japanese, 32,000,000 Chinese. Since 1906, when Manchuria came under Japanese influence, the population increased from 16,000,000 to 32,000,000, and only 250,000 of the additional 16,000,000 were Japanese, the rest Chinese.

If these figures are not correct, may I ask that Dr. Walker give us whatever figures have led him to believe that the Japanese are "land hungry" in their development of Manchuria? If Japan had the birth control problem that Dr. Walker claims, would they not most certainly have sent to Manchuria more than 250,000 in twenty-seven years?

DEFACING THE CURRENCY!

Chicago, Sept. 13.—Last Sunday while I was at the World's Fair I noticed that at the Oriental Village several people were having United States pennies made into souvenirs to be used for bracelets, necklaces, and to be hung on watch chains. Is this not against the currency law of the United States?

POLICE SLAYER DENIED RETRIAL; GETS 199 YEARS

Bongiorno Sentenced for Redlich Murder.

John Bongiorno, 32 years old, convicted slayer of a policeman, was refused a new trial yesterday by Judge Harry B. Miller in the Criminal court and he was sentenced to 199 years in the penitentiary in accordance with a verdict returned by a jury last week. Bongiorno is one of two men found guilty by the jury of the murder of Policeman Harry Redlich.

Judge Miller was also ready to dispose of the new trial motion for Ross King, co-defendant with Bongiorno, but Public Defender Joseph Power did not appear. King's motion was continued for hearing until tomorrow noon. His punishment was fixed at death by the jury.

Total of 279 Sentences.

The sentencing of Bongiorno brings to 279 the total of sentences imposed by Criminal court judges since the war on crime was started soon after Aug. 1 to put an end to police killings. Eleven policemen have been killed by gunmen since Jan. 1. Three police killers have been sentenced to death since the war started and two have been sentenced to 199 years in the penitentiary.

Attorney W. W. O'Brien argued for a new trial for Bongiorno on the basis that although he was guilty of the robbery just preceding the murder he was under arrest at the time of the killing and could not be held as a participant.

Vagrancy Drive to Go On.

King and Bongiorno, both paroled convicts, robbed the office of the Thomas W. Compton Advertising agency, 9 south Kedzie avenue, on July 8. Policeman Redlich, who was summoned by a girl employé of the agency, caught Bongiorno, but King jumped through a window. While Redlich was questioning Bongiorno, King returned and shot the policeman in the back. Both men then escaped.

"The loss of life is always probable in robbery," said Prosecutor Charles Dougherty in answering the defense argument. "When men arm themselves with revolvers and start out on a robbery the law says the act of one is the act of all. Bongiorno is lucky to escape the electric chair."

Policeman Shot in Back.

Although Police Commissioner Allman and Chief of Detectives Schoemaker expressed disappointment yesterday over the acquittals of Edward [Spike] O'Donnell and James Adducci on vagrancy charges, the drive to prosecute all known hoodlums on these charges will not be slackened, they said.

"Though it was a great disappointment to us, we don't intend to allow it to slow up our efforts," Commissioner Allman said. "The score is still in our favor. To the two acquittals we have six convictions to show."

Chief Schoemaker said he will hold a conference with State's Attorney Courtney and ask for instructions as to how to plan air-tight cases against the other hoodlums to be tried.

Police Redouble Efforts.

"I intend to find out if we can pick up O'Donnell and Adducci again if we dig up some new testimony," said Schoemaker. "But even if the two escape any more prosecution we are going to continue with the other cases. We never before had the judges cooperating with us as we have now. To us the acquittals mean that we have to redouble our efforts, and this we will do."

John [West Side Jack] Barry, reputed hoodlum and labor racketeer, is to be the next to face trial in the vagrancy division of the crime war. He is scheduled to appear before either Judge Green or Judge Padden tomorrow morning.

Vessel with 30 Aboard Missing; Feared Wrecked

MANILA, P. I., Sept. 16.—[UP.]—The insular constabulary received reports today that the sailing vessel Peter, with 30 persons aboard, was missing and believed wrecked in Romblon sea. The custom office dispatched the cutter Arayat to Romblon sea to search for the passenger and freight carrier. The Peter left Romblon island on Sept. 4, bound for Mindoro.

now the DEAFENED may HEAR thru their bones

AND now comes the last word in hearing aids—the new SUPER-SONOTONE! It embodies science's newest technique—Bone Conduction. SUPER-SONOTONE does not demand an unimpaired outer ear. Instead, it employs the until now rarely used inner ear for establishing a contact with the brain through the bones of the head.

NOTHING WORN IN EAR NO BUTTON VIBRATOR

The new SUPER-SONOTONE employs only the slenderest of ear loops. It has no button vibrator—the entire smooth surface of the oscillator forms the sound conveying unit. In a word, those who have bone conductivity hear with virtually no demands on the nervous system.

FREE TEST!

Regardless of the apparent hopelessness of your hearing; no matter what type of aid you now use, don't fail to investigate this newest super-powered SUPER-SONOTONE. Come—come at once for a free test. Only a minute of your time is needed for the demonstration. If you cannot call, write at once for details. You've nothing to lose—and a new life to gain.

[SEND 10c FOR SONOMETER. It will test your bone conduction. If it causes a gong to ring inside your head then be assured you can hear anything through your bones. So send 10c now (to cover postage, packing, etc.) for Sonometer and full instructions.]

Sam Incandello, 30 years old, 3618 Division street, a minor police character, was taken for a ride yesterday and shot to death under the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad viaduct at Bloomingdale avenue and Ballou street.

Witnesses told the Shakespeare avenue police that they saw two men pull Incandello out of a car, talk to him a moment, and then heard three shots. The victim slumped to the pavement with two bullets in his head and one in his body. His assailants leaped into their car and sped from the scene.

William Moore, 2509 Bloomingdale avenue, found a revolver with three shells exploded lying in front of 1795 Hancock street where the gunmen had apparently thrown it in their flight. Police, in their early investigation, were unable to discover a motive for the murder. They said it was probably the result of an underworld feud.

Incandello was sentenced to a year in the Bridewell and fined $100 on Sept. 14, 1929, when he was found guilty of larceny.

Rumor Insists Fairbanks Jr. Will Wed English Actress

LONDON, Sept. 16.—[U.P.]—A report that Douglas Fairbanks Jr., recently divorced from Joan Crawford, has become engaged to Gertrude Lawrence, English actress, was renewed today.

"I have nothing to say," Fairbanks said. "I am a sphinx."

"They are not going to marry me off yet," Miss Lawrence commented.

John F. Curry Jr. Weds; Son of Tammany Chief

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—In a comparatively quiet ceremony, Miss Virginia May Dillon and John F. Curry Jr. were married today at the Church of St. Ignatius Loyola. Miss Dillon is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Dillon of New York and Port Chester and Mr. Curry is the son of the leader of Tammany hall.

ALL OF APPEALS JUDGES NEEDED, McSURELY SAYS

Avers Court Here Writes 70% of Opinions.

Judge William H. McSurely, who has been a member of the First division of the Appellate court of Illinois, First district, for 22 years, yesterday asserted that the nine judges of the First district court "have an abundance of work—more, in fact, than the statutes require." He said that the First district court writes opinions for 70 per cent of all the appeals taken in the state.

Although only some 269 appeals are pending for disposition during the October term of the court, which opens Oct. 3, there are an aggregate of 658 cases awaiting rulings. These cases, it was explained, will be heard during later terms of court and include many cases filed during the summer months and during the June term of court.

On the basis of the aggregate number of cases now on the court dockets, Judge McSurely said, the First district court is fully justified in having three divisions, or nine judges. This total equals the number of judges in all the other three district Appellate courts in the state, each of which has only three judges.

Asserts Law is Antiquated.

The judge was asked about the requirements of the statute which provide that no division shall be added to any district court unless there are more than 250 cases awaiting trial during any given term.

"When that statute was passed," said the judge, "there were only two terms of court each year. That meant that three judges were expected to write opinions in not more than 500 cases within twelve months.

"Now this district court has six terms of court a year, or one term every other month. The statute doesn't apply. I talked with Justice Frederic R. De Young of the Supreme court about this matter only a day ago. When I picked up the statue book to argue with him he waved it aside. He told me: 'I don't want to see the statutes, Judge McSurely; I know your court has more work than it can do.'

99% of Opinions Upheld.

"And we do," concluded the judge. "We have an abundance of work. We do it well, too. Only about 1 per cent of all our opinions are reversed by the state Supreme court. I don't recall that a single one of our rulings which have been taken to the United States Supreme court — and there are many—has ever been reversed."

Judge McSurely's statements were made in reply to suggestions that the First district Appellate court could be operated with six judges instead of nine. It was suggested that three of the judges could return to their usual duties in the Circuit or Superior courts to aid in the trial of nearly 100,000 civil suits awaiting trial there. The appointment of the nine Appellate judges and of 12 Criminal judges from the 48 judges in the two courts leaves only 27 jurists to hear civil suits.

It also was suggested that some of the Appellate judges could return to either the Circuit or Superior courts for their usual trials after completing all their work in a given term of the higher court.

To this Judge McSurely replied:

"But we never get through. I don't believe we would even if the court had five divisions. The work is so divided by the First division of the court, which has the power to assign cases, that each division is continually working. If one division completes its cases while another is stuck with a long list of pending matters, some of these are reassigned to the judges who are up to date."

The judge also asserted that the work of the court could not be judged by the number of cases handled alone. He explained that cases such as the sanitary district "whoopee" case or the Bain bank case, both of which are pending for the October term, will each take one branch of the court from 30 to 60 days to decide. The rest of the pending cases will have to be handled by the third branch, he said.

Judge McSurely said that when he was first appointed to the court by the Supreme court justices there had been between 4,000 and 5,000 cases awaiting trial. Only the fact that the nine judges in the present court work continually prevents a return to this condition, he said. The judge added that a survey made a year ago by the California Bar association disclosed that the First district of the Illinois court does more work than any other state Appellate court in the country.

COURTS FACE 64,964 CASES WHEN THEY REOPEN TOMORROW

The Circuit and Superior courts will open tomorrow after a nine weeks' summer vacation. The 14 judges of the Superior court and the 12 judges of the Circuit court face a record amount of work with 64,964 cases pending. This is approximately 12,000 more cases then were on call when the courts reopened last fall.

In the Circuit court are pending 20,534 common law cases and 18,000 chancery cases. Chief Justice Dennis Normoyle has assigned six judges to hear the common law cases and six judges to hear the chancery matters. Judge Walter J. La Buy will hear divorce cases, which are included in the chancery division.

The Superior court has 16,430 law cases and 10,000 chancery cases pending. Chief Justice Denis E. Sullivan announced that eight judges will hear the law suits, and six judges will sit in chancery, including Judges Joseph Sabath and Rudolph Desort, who will hear divorce suits. In addition, three country judges will sit in the Superior court. They are George W. Bristow of the Circuit court of Danville, Albert M. Crampton, city judge of Moline, and Paul McWilliams, city judge of Litchfield.

The Fastest and Most Powerful Car in its Price-Range

In talking with you about its cars, the Hudson Motor Car Company tries pretty hard to make only statements that can be easily proved by anybody.

So, when we say, "The Terraplane Eight is the fastest and most powerful car in its price-range," you can not only have confidence in the truth of the statement—you can easily prove it.

The Terraplane Eight's engine is rated at 94 horsepower in all official lists of motor car specifications—the two next highest ratings in its price-range are 82 and 77 horsepower.

The Terraplane Eight's top speed of 85 miles an hour has been proved under official supervision of the American Automobile Association.

The Terraplane Eight's ability to outclimb and out-accelerate every other car on the road, regardless of price, is provable, not only by 32 official A.A.A. records, but by yourself, any time—just drive it and make your own comparisons.

The greater roominess of the Terraplane Eight is measurable—a simple dressmaker's tape is all you need to prove it. Or ask to see the engineers' measurements in any Hudson-Essex dealer's showroom.

We are glad to have built a car about which so many superiorities can be so easily proved. Naturally, we think you'll be glad and proud to own it.

MOVIE OFFICIAL TO SURRENDER OVER SLUGGING

Operator-Victim Guarded in Loop Hotel.

Dr. Emmett M. Quinn, dentist at 55 East Washington street, and steward of the motion picture operators' union, will surrender tomorrow, according to reports, to face a charge of assault and battery made by Clyde Osterberg, 30 years old, 4716 Winthrop avenue, a union operator. Osterberg obtained a warrant yesterday after charging that Quinn beat him into unconsciousness with a pistol on Friday afternoon when the operator went to the union office at 500 South Wabash avenue, scene of murders and other violence.

After obtaining the warrant, Osterberg, who formerly was an intimate of Quinn and Thomas E. Maloy, czar of the union, went to the office of Capt. Daniel Gilbert, chief investigator for the state's attorney, in the Criminal Courts building.

Will Remain in Hiding.

After remaining closeted with Capt. Gilbert for more than an hour, Osterberg was taken to a loop hotel, where he will remain in hiding until he can appear in court against Quinn. Capt. Gilbert refused to discuss the nature of the information given by Osterberg, but he said that he was furnishing a police guard for Osterberg. The operator told him, Capt. Gilbert said, that he believed union sluggers would make an attempt to kill him.

The warrant against Quinn was issued by Municipal Judge Joseph H. McGarry after Osterberg had related the circumstances of the alleged slugging to Capt. George O'Connor of the South State street police and to the judge. Detectives who sought Quinn went to the union offices early in the afternoon and were told that neither Maloy nor Quinn had returned after fleeing from the office Friday afternoon.

Later in the day Maloy returned to the union offices an announced that Quinn would surrender in Judge McGarry's court tomorrow. Maloy denied that Osterberg had been slugged by Quinn. He said that Osterberg had made a flying tackle at Quinn who stepped aside. Osterberg's head struck a chair and he was knocked unconscious, according to Maloy.

Osterberg revealed yesterday that Quinn is employed as the chief motion picture operator at the Chicago theater and also maintains dental offices in room 3300 of the Pittsfield building at the Washington street address. Osterberg said he had known Quinn since 1924, when he was granted an operators' permit, although he was not a full fledged member of the union. The permit members, Osterberg explained, pay 10 per cent of all their wages into the union coffers.

Son of Former Business Agent.

Osterberg said that his father, Robert Osterberg, was a former business agent for the Flat Janitors' union. When the son became a motion picture operator he was sponsored by William Quesse, former president of the flat janitors' organization, who is a friend of Maloy.

Until eighteen months ago, he said, his salary ranged between $76 and $137 a week. He paid his regular percentage to the union and always had work. When a number of motion picture theaters closed during the depression he found it impossible to get regular work, but he was given part time work by Quinn at the Chicago theater, Osterberg said. Some of this brought no pay, he added.

On last May 27, he said, he was given a job by Quinn as an operator at the Chrysler building at the Fair. He was expected to work a six hour shift and be relieved by another man, he said. The salary was set at $35 a week, although the Chrysler officials were paying the union $2.50 an hour for their operator, he asserted. When he actually went to work he found that he was expected to work both shifts for the $35, he said.

Discharged by Quinn.

Eventually, he said, Quinn learned that he had complained of the arrangement to the Chrysler people, and fired him. He was paid only $35 for the 39 hours which he had worked, he said. When he complained to Maloy, he said, he was told: "We don't like scabs. You were working for less than the union rates."

Osterberg said he went to the union offices Friday to see Maloy. Instead he was met at the door by Quinn, who slugged him. During the sluggin, Osterberg said, Maloy walked out of an inner office and told him, "We don't want to see scabs around here."

The affairs of the Motion Picture Operators' union have been frequently under police surveillance. Bombings, at least three murders, and many sluggings, have been laid to strife within the union.

O'BRIEN IS 2 TO 1 FAVORITE OVER F. H. LA GUARDIA

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Betting at odds of two to one that Mayor John H. O'Brien would defeat F. H. La Guardia, fusion candidate, were reported today. A week ago the odds on Mayor O'Brien were three or four to one.

The shortening of the odds was attributed to the seeming weakness of Mayor O'Brien and expectation that something of the unrest and dissatisfaction in Tammany and its allied Democratic organizations would be disclosed in the vote at the primary election on Tuesday.

Despite talk of the possibility of the withdrawal of Mayor O'Brien by nominating him for Supreme court justice and the substitution of another candidate, it was learned that Mayor O'Brien has no intention of withdrawing.

The movement has been halted temporarily to await the result of the primary election. Should the vote against the mayor fall short of expectations, the movement will be revived.

Bad Weather and Duty Keep President at Home

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Business and the weather combined today to keep President Roosevelt from his planned week-end cruise on the Potomac river. The navy early warned of the gale blowing up the coast. One reason the President wanted to stay at home was to await completion of the long sought coal code.

TAX PAYMENTS FOR 1931 RISE TO 53 PER CENT

Collections Exceed Last Year, McDonough Says.

TAX COLLECTIONS.

Real estate tax collections last week totaled $9,884,094. Collections for the previous week totaled $11,007,217. A total of $68,065,737 has been collected since the enforcement of the Kerner-Skarda act was started last April 28. The week's collection of real estate taxes and the uncollected taxes of the last four years follow:

Sept. 11-15....	$ 259,247	$ 532,559
Uncollected	17,549,766	46,378,340
	1930.	1931.
Sept. 11-15....	$ 722,279	$ 8,370,009
Uncollected	72,851,448	81,612,747

County Treasurer McDonough announced yesterday that 53.44 per cent of the entire 1931 tax levy for Cook county, consisting of real estate, personal property, and railroad taxes, has been collected. The levy is $263,756,610, of which $140,944,938 has been paid.

The treasurer pointed out that the rate of tax collections this year is higher than last year. Of the 1930 total tax levy of $290,284,505, which was extended in 1932, $189,355,307, or 65.23 per cent has been collected. This percentage will be surpassed by the 1931 collections, the treasurer said, as soon as the state Supreme court rules on the legality of the order of the board of appeals reducing the assessments of homes and small flat buildings 15 per cent.

Delay Payments Pending Ruling.

The majority of the 430,000 property owners affected by the reduction have been withholding the payment of the second installment of their 1931 real estate tax bills pending the court ruling. The penalty of 1 per cent a month on delinquent tax bills will not apply to these property owners until 30 days after their revised bills have been mailed out after the ruling of the Supreme court.

County officials said that the tax collection rate has been accelerated by the enforcement of the Kerner-Skarda act, under which County Judge Jarecki is empowered to appoint the treasurer as receiver for income bearing properties to collect delinquent taxes.

Realty 54 Per Cent; Personalty 96.

The treasurer's report showed that $98,302,657 has been collected in 1931 real estate taxes. This is 54.6 per cent of the real estate levy of $179,915,404. Personal property tax collections for 1931 totaled $33,075,856 or 46.7 per cent of the $70,791,691 levy. The railroad tax levy is $13,049,513, of which $9,566,421 or 73.3 per cent has been paid.

The treasurer yesterday filed tax receivership petitions against 100 properties. The properties named owe an aggregate tax bill of $303,800.

During the week Treasurer McDonough was appointed receiver for 141 properties by Judge Jarecki. Since the enforcement of the Kerner-Skarda act began, the treasurer has been named receiver for 2,340 properties.

LEAGUE MAY ASK U. S. TO PARTICIPATE IN ECONOMIC PARLEY

GENEVA, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The question of inviting the United States to participate in the forthcoming assembly of the league of nations for discussion of international economic problems has been raised in league circles.

The question arose following an announcement that the heads of the economic and financial sections had left for London to consult with Prime Minister MacDonald, president of the world economic conference.

It was stated that if Washington intimated a desire to come to the league, an invitation undoubtedly would be issued, as was done in the case of the opium and disarmament conferences.

Mr. MacDonald summoned A. Loveday, director of the financial division of the league, and Dr. Pietro Stoppani, chief of the economic division, to consider the future of the world economic conference.

AN INTERVIEW WITH JOSEPH PREHER, DIVISION CIRCULATION MGR., LOUISVILLE (KY.) HERALD-POST

"No more of the old kind for me . . . after owning a PLYMOUTH"

NINETY-FIVE news-stands wait eagerly for Joe Preher to come rushing around every time a new edition hits the street.

He's got to make time . . . keep a split-second schedule . . . slam on the brakes 600 times a day.

Working his brakes so hard on his former car cost him plenty for adjustments and relining. But with Plymouth's hydraulic brakes, it's a far different story. For they're always equalized. They stop faster . . . evenly . . . and make brake linings last so much longer!

Brakes are not the only thing that must stand up on Joe Preher's cars. For he puts 50,000 miles a year on the speedometer.

He's found that Plymouth can take all the punishment he'll give it. His car is still "tight as a drum" at 12,000 miles. Floating Power engine mountings helped to do that by cutting down vibration.

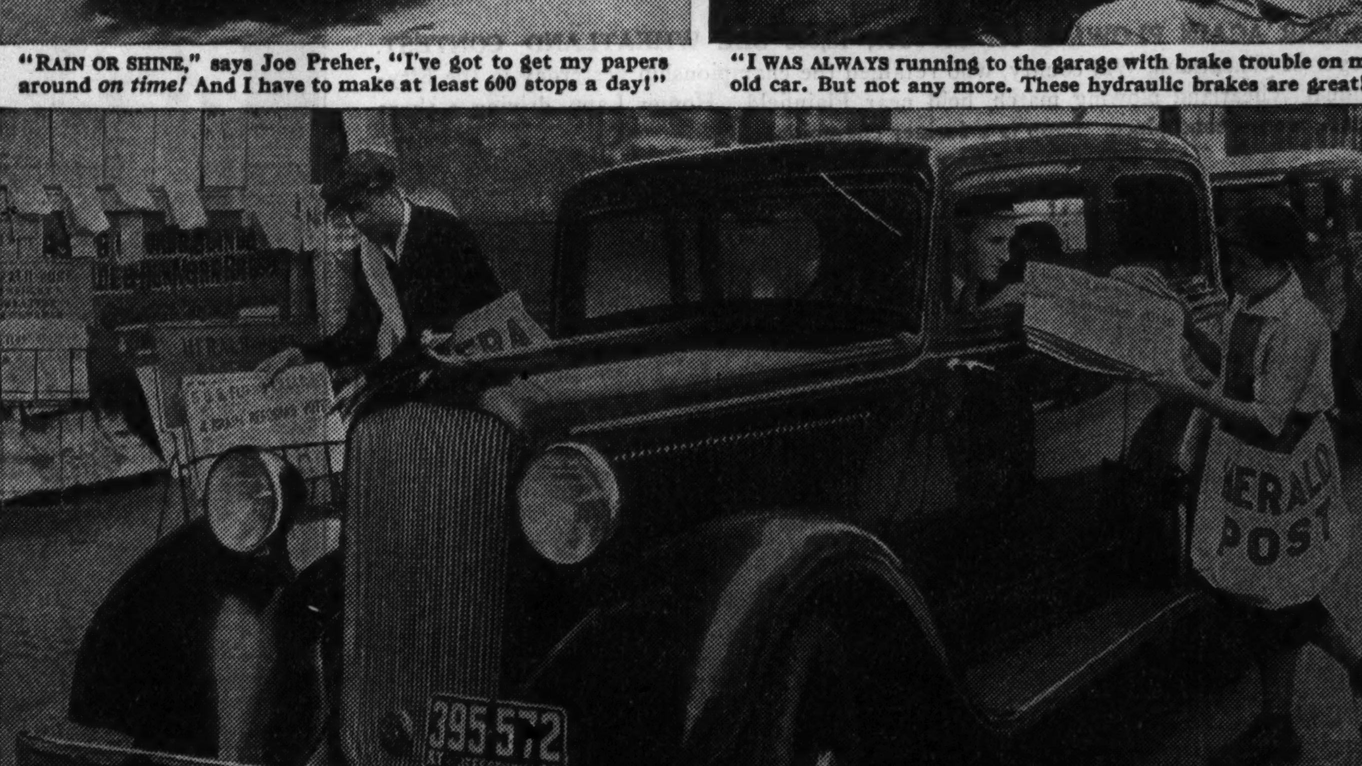
It stands to reason, too, that you avoid rattles with a welded safety-steel body that has no joints to work loose. And a rigid-X double-drop frame that's 10 times sturdier than the ordinary type.

Look at the things that make a car stand up when you look at "all three" low-priced cars. If you do, we think you'll soon be driving a Plymouth.

STANDARD MODELS: 2-door sedan $465; 4-door sedan $510; rumble seat coupe $485; business coupe $445. De Luxe Models: 2-door sedan $525; 4-door sedan $575; convertible coupe $595; rumble seat coupe $545; business coupe $495. All prices F. O. B. factory, and subject to change.

"RAIN OR SHINE," says Joe Preher, "I've got to get my papers around on time! And I have to make at least 600 stops a day!"

"I WAS ALWAYS running to the garage with brake trouble on my old car. But not any more. These hydraulic brakes are great!"



"I'VE GOT TO GO PLACES in a hurry, but I've never had an accident. If I ever do have one, there's plenty of protection in that safety-steel body!"

REICHSTAG FIRE PROBE IN LONDON GIVES REDS ALIBI

"Testimony" Presented Behind Locked Doors.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Cloaked by absolute secrecy and anonymity or what appeared to be plain theatrical sham as a protection against assassins, witnesses continued to parade today before the unofficial "commission" with a recital of events in Germany at the time the German reichstag was burned Feb. 27.

The investigation is being conducted by a self-appointed body of lawyers residing in eight countries—the United States, Great Britain, Belgium, France, Switzerland, Holland, Denmark, and Sweden. They have assigned to themselves the task of finding all evidence which they claim Chancellor Hitler will not allow to be introduced when the five communists accused of setting the building on fire, are tried at Leipzig Sept. 21.

One Is Heard Privately.

It was announced today that one contributor to the mass of evidence had been heard privately in order to protect him from bodily harm. Another was interviewed openly this morning. His identity was not announced, although it was known to the investigators. This afternoon Wilhelm Koenen, secretary of the German communist party until last February, appeared as a witness behind locked doors. Koenen testified after D. N. Pritt, British chairman of the mock trial, announced that no spectators or newspaper men would be permitted to enter or leave the room, due to the danger of eavesdroppers.

Since Hitler's agent in England, Herr Thost, was busy with a pencil and pad inside the room, there appeared to be little in the explanation for the secrecy as given by Ellen Wilkinson, former Labor member of parliament and one of the commission's secretaries.

"We are trying to protect this man from assassination, that's all," she said.

The unofficial commission is trying to plumb charges that Hitlerites themselves fired the reichstag building and then passed the blame on to the communists. Half of today's business was occupied by the taking of "evidence" concerning the reported moral depravity of some of Hitler's followers, notably Capt. Ernst Roehb, leader of the Nazi storm troopers. The afternoon was devoted to Koenen's defense of Ernst Torgler, former communist member of the reichstag and one of those accused by the Nazis. Koenen offered an alibi for Torgler.

Calls Self a Journalist.

The mysterious witness heard privately dealt with Torgler's political speeches prior to the reichstag fire. The speeches, the witness said, tend to prove that Torgler never would have approved the fire.

He described himself as a journalist. He said that he had been a confidant of Dr. George Bell, assassinated Nazi confederate and one of the principals in the chervonitz (Russian money) counterfeiting trial. He declared he saw a list of young men with whom Roehm carried on a revolting association and that he made two copies of it. In this list, he continued, was the name "Marinus van der Suebbe or Luebbe." Marinus van der Luebbe is the Dutchman held by the Nazis as the confessed firebug.

Koenen was called as the next witness. He described the movements of Torgler and himself the evening of the fire.

"I was with Torgler from 6:30 o'clock until after the fire broke out at 10 o'clock," Koenen said. "After we left the reichstag building in the early evening we went to a restaurant. We had been seated about a half hour when a waiter rushed in and cried, 'Herr Koenen, the reichstag is ablaze!' I said: 'Don't be crazy. It is impossible.' Torgler exclaimed: 'We must find out what is at the back of this.'"

GERMANY TO PAY GREAT TRIBUTE TO ITS PEASANTRY

Nation to Give Thanks for Big Harvest.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—Germany will sing the praises of its peasantry on Sunday, Oct. 1. The day has been designated "Farmers' day." Thanksgiving services for the great harvest, which assures ample food supplies for the coming year, will be held.

A half million farmers and land workers will assemble on Bueckberg hill, overlooking Hameln—famed for its Pied Piper. Chancellor Adolph Hitler and Minister of Agriculture Walther Darre will address them in the presence of all the members of the government.

A battery will fire a salute marking the opening of the festivities. After dusk the surrounding hills will be ablaze with bonfires. A procession of boats, strung with lanterns, is to be held on the River Weser. The festivities include a riding tournament in which the cavalry will participate.

Hitler to Welcome Farmers.

Before leaving Berlin for Hameln, Hitler will welcome delegations of farmers. They will be carried to the capital from all parts of the reich by airplanes.

Every town and village in the land has arranged its own program. One of the features will be a radio broadcast of the speeches at Hameln. Folk dancing will conclude the day of rejoicing. A special badge will be sold, the proceeds to be used in swelling the winter relief fund for the idle.

The government's announcement of the festival declares:

"This day will mark the end of the period in which the most liberal political system compelled the farmer to play a subordinate social and economic rôle."

Minister of Agriculture Darre today announced that the government plans to obtain "a just price" for the produce of farmers, particularly grain. He warned them that the undertaking was conditioned on their producing no more than is necessary for genuine domestic demand.

Will Punish Violators.

"I am warning you especially against increasing grain acreage," the minister said. "If any agriculturist does so, I shall find ways and means of making him pay the penalty. This government price fixing plan is a special measure in the interests of Germany's food supplies."

Darre intimated that the free grain market is to be abolished.

"If in such a market the government fixed the price it would also stand ready to buy at the figure," he said. "The result would be an attempt to dump the whole crop on the state."

The alternative envisaged by the government is vague, but Darre spoke of "a new marketing organization created by the corporative consolidation of producers, middlemen, coöperatives, and millers."

New Drive Against Jewish Race.

Meanwhile, a new drive against persons of Jewish descent holding public office was announced by the government. Heretofore, the fact that one grandparent was a Jew was sufficient to cause dismissal. Declaring that "race, not religion is the decisive factor," Home Minister Wilhelm Frick today decreed that in the event a great-grandparent were baptized a Christian, but was of the Jewish race, a descendant shall be disqualified from holding an official job.

Dispatches from Berzabern, in the Palatinate, today said that authorities there have declared Jews should not be permitted rights to enjoy sports in the new Germany, and have taken action to cancel fishing privileges granted to a Jewish firm. In Goeppingen, Wüerttemberg, Nazis have ordered the exclusion of "eastern Jews" from the town market.

The new Prussian state council met privately today in the "new palace" at Potsdam, the former summer residence of the ex-kaiser. Thousands visited Potsdam to cheer the notables. The council is purely an advisory body and is directly responsible to Premier Hermann Wilhelm Goering.

Get Death for Killing Nazi.

LUEBECK, Germany, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Two former members of the republic Reichsbanner were sentenced to death in court today for the death of a Nazi. They were Herr Kachding and Herr Fick.

BELGIUM BARS PARTY OF BRITISH SCHOLARS WEARING NAZI BADGES

LONDON, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Thirty-two British schoolboys returning from a tour of Germany were stopped today and forced to dispose of Swastika emblems before they were allowed to cross the Belgian frontier. One of the party, T. Kitchen, charged that they were jailed for two hours and two of the boys were kicked by men in uniform.

The entire party was ordered from the train, Kitchen asserted, their passports were taken up, and their baggage searched for Nazi material. Then all were jailed.

Deny Harsh Treatment.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Belgian gendarmes at Merbesthal tonight denied they had used harsh methods in handling 32 British schoolboys wearing the Nazi emblem, who were forced to return to Aachen, Prussia. They acted, the gendarmes said, under general instructions issued by the state police not to admit aliens wearing the Nazi uniform or emblem.

In 1933 UP 100% Oldsmobile

DOUBLES ITS SHARE OF SALES IN ITS PRICE RANGE THIS YEAR compared with LAST

Men and women are buying more Oldsmobiles than any other car of comparable price. They are awarding Oldsmobile 27.3% of the total sales of the eleven makes of cars in its price range—more than double the 13.3% of a year ago. They have purchased more Oldsmobiles during the first eight months of 1933 than in all of 1932. And here are the reasons for this marked public preference:

Style Leadership—resulting from an entirely new and distinctive design—modern to the minute—a pleasing harmony of line, contour and color that is winning universal praise.

Performance Leadership—90 horsepower and 80 to 85 miles an hour in the Eight; 80 horsepower and 75 to 80 miles an hour in the Six; plus exceptional smoothness and flexibility.

Fisher Ventilating System—utmost comfort—fresh air without drafts—individual ventilation without discomforting others. No dangerous fogged windshield or windows. Smoke and used air go out instantly.

Time-Proved Dependability of engine, chassis and body—born of more than thirty years' experience in building sound, reliable motor cars.

Economy—the great basic economy of durable construction, which means long life—and of modern design, which means a higher resale value.

Owner Satisfaction—the good repute which stamps Oldsmobile as "the car that owners recommend to their best friends" and which is an added guarantee of satisfaction.

Price—only $745 and up for the Six, $845 and up for the Eight—bringing you value nowhere equalled in the entire Oldsmobile price range.

You will be much more pleased with an Oldsmobile. And you can easily have one on convenient G.M.A.C. terms. Why not see and drive an Oldsmobile—today?

Based on official registration figures by R. L. Polk and Co. for the first seven months of 1933. The eleven cars which comprise the Oldsmobile price group range from $765 to $1250 (prices of five-passenger 4-door Sedans).

TAKE FIRST STEP FOR FIVE POWER DANUBIAN UNION

Hungary Puts Proposal Up to France.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The first step leading toward reorganization of the economic life of the Danubian countries was suggested today in a conference of the Hungarian foreign minister, Koloman von Kanya, with Premier Edouard Daladier and Foreign Minister Paul-Boncour of France.

This step would comprise the drawing up of bilateral trade agreements among the central European powers.

Von Kanya came here after visits to Rome and Vienna, where he discussed this project.

For some time it has been known in political circles that a five power Danubian customs union, composed of Austria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, and Jugo-Slavia, has been under consideration.

Jealousies Hinder Project.

The Austro-German situation and political jealousies believed to exist among the major powers, however, have been pointed to by political observers as constituting two problems which must be met.

France and Italy recently have laid plans to assist Austria in surviving economic difficulties by granting preferential treatment for some Austrian products. Austria recently has been buoyed up only by virtue of a series of international loans.

The disposition of the latest of these, a fund of $47,400,000, was decided upon today at a meeting of Austrian, Italian, British, French, and league of nations representatives in Rome. The group decided that part of the money could be used for public works, but that the majority must be used in services on state debts.

Duce Fears Little Entente.

European political circles believe that a central European customs union would give Austria a new lease on life, although Premier Mussolini of Italy has been represented as fearing such a union might be dominated by the little entente nations, which are friends of France.

The bulk of Austrian exports go to Germany, with Czechoslovakia and Italy next in order. Although Germany is the biggest single customer with its 16 per cent absorption of Austrian goods, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, and Jugo-Slavia together take 30 per cent.

BRITISH BOMBING PLANE CRASHES; PILOT IS KILLED

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The second fatal airplane crash in two days occurred at the Brooklands airport today. A royal air force bombing plane was wrecked.

Five men were in the plane. Flying Officer Leslie Few, who was at the controls, was killed. Flight Lieutenant George Williams, Flying Officer William Le May, and Wireless Operator George Donaldson, were seriously injured. An observer sitting on the tail, escaped injury.

The plane descended too near the edge of the field, and Few vainly tried to lift the ship into the air. The plane crashed through a fence and plunged into a six foot ditch. The fuselage was broken in half as the machine nosed over. Yesterday Lady Clayton-East-Clayton, 25 years old, widow of Sir Robert Clayton-East-Clayton, young explorer, was killed by a runaway plane at the flying field. field.

FIND LAW OF 1670 FORBIDDING GIRLS TO "LURE" MEN

REGINA, Saskatchewan, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Dr. J. J. Honsberger, Saskatchewan lawyer, says he has come across an old law which should serve as a warning to modern women in applying her makeup as a snare for the male.

The law, which Dr. Honsberger says was passed by the British parliament in 1670 and never repealed, reads:

"All women of whatever age, rank, profession or degree, whether virgins, maids, or widows, that shall from the passing of this act impose upon and betray into matrimony any of his majesty's male subjects by scents, paints, cosmetics, high heeled shoes, or bolstered hips shall incur the penalty of the law now in force against witchcraft."

IRISH MAY FREE 7 PRISONERS ON HUNGER STRIKE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Sept. 16.—The governor of Mountjoy prison today refused to disclose the condition of seven prisoners who are engaged in a hunger strike there. The seven were arrested in connection with the recent series of attacks on British beer.

It is understood that the government is watching the developments and it is believed that an order for the release of the man may come at any moment. The men demand the usual treatment accorded political prisoners. According to a statement issued in their behalf, the ministry has denied this treatment.

Machine Gun Gang Gets $1,056 in Two Robberies

Five robbers, two of whom carried machine guns, entered the South Town fruit market at 7814 South Halsted street late last night and after terrorizing thirty employés and a number of customers fled with $906. One of the men fired a shot into the ceiling, Chris Marlos, manager, told police. A little later the Moonlight inn, 2430 West 59th street, was held up. Albert Elkins, the owner, and several guests surrendered a total of $150. The police believe the same gang robbed both places.

Pope Pius Names St. Louis Priest Auxiliary Bishop

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 16.—[U.P.]—The Rev. Christian Wicklemann of the Church of St. Francis de Sales, at St. Louis, was named today auxiliary bishop for the diocese of St. Louis, Mo. At the same time, he was named titular bishop of Sita.

U. S. TAXPAYER HELPS SOUTH TO CHEAPER POWER

Federal Treasury Is Out Some 43 Million.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—In order to give the hill folk of Tennessee and Alabama electric power from Muscle Shoals at nominal rates, the Tennessee valley authority is making the taxpayers of the country as a whole kiss good-by to forty-three and a half million dollars, it was learned today.

In the rate structure announced by David E. Lilienthal, director of the Tennessee experiment in charge of power, there is no provision for repaying to the federal treasury a net loss of $43,590,619 which the hydro-electric power plant at Muscle Shoals already has cost the taxpayer, investigation disclosed.

Money "Over the Dam."

Beside waiving past expenditures as money already "gone over the dam," Director Lilienthal has computed his rates, which undersell existing commercial companies by 75 per cent, on a quasi-socialistic basis, allowing no provision for operating profit above depreciation, operations, interest, and other charges, an analysis revealed.

In a burst of generosity, Director Lilienthal has determined that the taxpayers shall receive annual interest payments for money spent at Muscle Shoals, although the act does not require him to make such payments or consider them in computing the rates he will charge Tennessee residents for power from a government plant. But Mr. Lilienthal has his own method of determining the interest he will pay the taxpayers, his announcement shows.

Although the army engineer corps, which built Wilson dam and the hydro-electric plant, can tell him to a penny what it has cost the taxpayers of the country, Mr. Lilienthal has elected not to use this total in computing his annual interest payments. He is planning to construct a theoretic property value for the Muscle Shoals plant, and interest will be paid on the basis of this paper value, he declared.

"Since this is a business enterprise," Mr. Lilienthal maintains, "we have set up as a basic figure for property value, the amount which a business man would be willing to put into a plant at Muscle Shoals, based in part on the cost of similar construction work in recent times."

Valuation Is Withheld.

Although officials of the Tennessee authority refuse to give out as yet the property valuation thus arrived at, they admit that since it is based on cost of construction in recent times, it will be much lower than the the actual costs of building and maintaining the Muscle Shoals plant in the high-priced days of war time and the post-war boom. On this low theoretical cost Mr. Lilienthal offers to pay interest to the taxpayers.

What Muscle Shoals actually cost, according to the army engineers who built it, is $46,961,094. They explain that this is the money which construction of the Wilson dam and hydro-electric plant actually took out of the pocket books of the taxpayers regardless of what "cost of similar construction work in recent times" may be.

More Spent Since 1926.

Another $1,691,326 has been spent since 1926 by the army engineers in maintaining and operating the hydro-electric plant. From these operations, however, they have derived revenue amounting to approximately $5,000,000, leaving them a net operating surplus of slightly more than $3,300,000.

If this operating surplus be applied against the original cost of Muscle Shoals, it still leaves taxpayers out more than $43,500,000 on the whole venture. This is the actual net cost, according to army records, and Mr. Lilienthal has disregarded it both in making provision for capital repayments and in computing interest rates to be paid the treasury.

The rate of interest also is low, being "the rate the government would have to pay for such capital," according to Mr. Lilienthal. Although he did not reveal the exact rate and other officials refused to comment, the average interest rate on the governments borrowing is 36 per cent less than half the rate a commercial enterprise would pay for the same capital.

Paid in Paper Value.

This interest rate will be paid in paper value set on the Muscle Shoals plant and on future investments, as yet undetermined, for power lines and other improvements. Provision has also been made for amortizing or retiring new expenditures, but no such provision has been made for the 47 million dollars originally spent.

By disregarding the original investment, making no provision for profits, avoiding taxes, and computing interest at the low rate available to the government, the Muscle Shoals officials have given themselves a 75 per cent advantage in rates over commercial companies. Their power rates to consumers are one-fourth those now prevailing in Alabama and one-fifth of the rates in Chicago.

These rate schedules, set up on a quasi-socialistic basis of computation which omits profits, ordinary interest, and the bulk of taxes, are being held up as models to commercial companies which have to meet all these costs.

HUNT FOR FLYER WITH MAIL LOST NEAR SANDUSKY

Cleveland, O., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Army and civilian planes conducted an intensive search this morning for a mail plane that was long overdue here on a flight last night from Chicago. The pilot, Harold Neff, 25, former army flyer, last was reported by radio near Sandusky, O. He was flying a single seated biplane and carried 450 pounds of mail. The regular passenger plane trip was canceled because of foggy weather.

Neff took off at Chicago about midnight, officials of the United Air lines said, and landed at Toledo at 1:35 a. m. He took off from Toledo for Cleveland and reported over the radio when he had been gone twenty-four minutes that all was well. He was not heard from again. Eleven planes of the air line, seven Ohio national guard planes and some private planes assisted in the air search for signs of Neff's plane.

Series of Band Concerts Planned in Garfield Park

A series of free open air band concerts will start at 8 o'clock Wednesday night in Garfield park, it was announced yesterday. The musicians will be supplied by the Chicago Federation of Musicians, of which James Petrillo, west park commissioner, is president. There will be no expense to the park board. The concerts will take place in the bandstand court of Garfield park at West Madison street, near South Central Park boulevard. A forty piece banad will play every Wednesday night from 8 to 10 o'clock and every Sunday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock.

DERN PLEDGES EARLY ACTION ON SEAWAY TREATY

Water Route Part of Recovery Plan, He Says.

Superior, Wis., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Terming the completion of the St. Lawrence-Great Lakes waterway "an act of justice long deferred," Secretary of War George H. Dern was the principal speaker and guest of honor at a waterway conference held here today.

Other prominent speakers were Senators F. Ryan Duffy and Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin, and Thomas D. Schall of Minnesota; Charles P. Craig, executive director of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater association, and George F. Malla, secretary of the Great Lakes Harbors association.

Secretary Dern and other guests were met at the trains upon arrival and immediately taken on a two hour cruise of the Duluth-Superior harbor aboard the U. S. Cutter Sears.

300 at Luncheon.

Speaking later at a luncheon meeting attended by three hundred prominent citizens of Duluth and Superior, Secretary Dern said: "The decline of manufacturing on the interior of this country will be materially checked with the completion of the waterway now forty per cent completed.

"The waterway project is an important part of President Roosevelt's recovery program. The President favors the ratification of the treaty in its present form.

"I bring you word from the President that the treaty will be ratified and the waterway completed. I join in wishing you every success."

Duffy Sees Benefits.

Senator Duffy said: "Unfortunately there have been so many inaccurate statements about the projected waterway that the citizens of this country have the wrong impression. When they realize that with an expenditure of $24,000,000 a year for seven years the entire project can be completed considered with the great benefit it will bring to the landlocked mid-continent. I feel that there will be a decided change in sentiment.

"I firmly agree with the late Senator Tom Walsh of Montana that the very finest and most efficient farm relief would be the completion of the St. Lawrence waterway."

La Follette Discusses Cost.

"Deepening of all channels in the great lakes is not necessary to the success of the project," said Senator La Follette. "Only fifty miles of the St. Lawrence needs to be developed to give Superior and Duluth a two thousand two hundred mile route to the ocean. The cost will be only $168,266,000 after deducting the $89,000,000 to be paid by the state of New York. I am confident that the selfish spirit of sectionalism which has prevailed no longer will stand in the way and that the treaty will be ratified at the next session of congress."

Mr. Craig state that "eleven per cent of the federal government's expenditures for harbor and river improvements carry ninety-two per cent of the tonnage in the United States. It was another Roosevelt in the White House who said we'd dig the Panama canal and discuss matters afterwards."

10,000 in Parade.

Superior's celebration was marked by a gigantic parade at four o'clock in which there were more than 10,000 marchers. An informal dinner was held at six o'clock with the main speeches delivered at eight o'clock in the Palace theatre.

Mrs. Peterson Forgets All Her Other Troubles

The old gypsy "cure" yesterday caused Mrs. Hedwig Peterson, 38 years old, 3135 West 41st place, to forget whatever ailments she may have had, but she lost $610. A gypsy woman had advised Mrs. Peterson to withdraw the money from a bank to improve her health, and Mrs. Peterson took the suggestion. The gypsy returned, went through the motions of wrapping the money in paper and departed. Obediently, Mrs. Peterson waited for nine hours to elapse, then opened the package. She found newspapers.

POSTMASTER IS ARRESTED.

CZECH CABINET DEMANDS POPE RECALL ENVOY

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The cabinet, indignant over a letter written by the papal nuncio, Peter Ciriaci, to the Slovak autonomist leader, Andreas Hlinka, today decided to demand the nuncio's recall to Rome by the pope for official explanation.

The nuncio's letter praised the devotion and loyalty of the Slovaks to the church and complained bitterly of the opposite sort of treatment accorded to the papal representative by the Czechs. It charged that the Czechs had insulted the pope.

The communication was particularly objectionable to the Czech government because it was addressed to the autonomist leader, therefore seeming to encourage a revolt.

DIES WHILE AT WORK.

Grover Stewart, 59 years old, colored, of Milwaukee, porter for the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad for 34 years, died suddenly yesterday while he was cleaning a car in the yards at West Grand avenue.

Crew Paid; Suit Against Lake Steamer Dismissed

A suit against the lake steamer Isle Royale, brought by members of the crew on the basis of back wage claims, was dismissed yesterday by Federal Judge John P. Barnes. George M. Cox, owner of the boat, showed that the 120 members of the crew have been paid up since the proceedings were started. The boat, now docked in the Chicago river, will be taken to winter quarters at Manistee, Mich.

when you heat your home with Gas

To prove that every home can afford to heat with Gas . . . we will install it at our expense and remove it at our expense, if you don't like it.

GAS HEAT is clean heat. You never see or breathe dust, dirt or grime. It ends hours and days of endless house cleaning, dirt-streaked walls and curtains, grime-covered furniture and furnishings. No more are rugs and carpets tracked up with basement dirt.

When you have gas heat in your home you save days and nights of back-breaking coal shoveling . . . dirty hours of hauling ashes . . . the nuisance of chopping kindling . . . the anxiety of waiting for heat to come up . . . trying vainly to keep even heat. A single match is your kindling pile. You fire your furnace from your easy chair.

Every home can afford it

Certainly you want the luxury of automatic heat. Everyone does. And now every home can afford it. For the cost of gas heat is now one-half of what it was in the season 1930-31. But we don't ask you to purchase any equipment before you try it.

Let us install gas heat in your home. We will put the equipment in your furnace or boiler and pay every cent of the cost. During the nine heating months of the first year you pay $3.00 a month rental for the equipment in the average home. This charge will be included with your monthly gas bill. You pay nothing during the three summer months.

If at any time during the first year you decide that you don't want gas heat, you order it out. And out it comes. We replace your former equipment in good, workmanlike order. If you decide you want to keep gas heat, the rental you pay applies on the purchase price.

11 NATIONS FAIL TO ASK U. S. FOR DELAY ON DEBTS

153 Million Dollars Due on Dec. 15.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Eleven foreign nations, owing the United States about 153 million dollars in war debt installments which fall due Dec. 15, today failed to go through the formality of asking the treasury department to postpone any of the payments.

Postponement upon ninety days' notice is possible insofar as any principal repayments are concerned under the terms of the war debt funding agreements, but expiration of the ninety day notice interval today brought no request to either the state or treasury departments.

Failure of the foreign debtors to ask for postponements was not taken in official circles here as a hopeful sign. It was pointed out that attempts to revise the present intergovernment debt structure will be made before Dec. 15. England and France, the principal debtors, already are drafting alternative plans.

Can Waive Requirement.

Secretary of the Treasury Woodin, moreover, has the power to waive the 90 day notice requirement if any nation makes a later request, and those nations which defaulted in June and last December requested no postponement in advance, treasury records show. In addition, the principal payments, the only one which can be delayed under the agreements, amount to only about 50 million dollars out of the 153 million due. The remaining 103 million dollars is interest payments.

The same 11 nations which will owe the United States 153 million dollars on Dec. 15 have defaulted in whole or in part on at least one previous installment. Finland is the only exception to this rule.

Defaulted payments, if added to those due on Dec. 15, would bring the accruing indebtedness of the 11 nations to almost 309 million dollars, treasury records show. Of this sum Great Britain, which has 118 million dollars coming due and 66 million past due, owes the most.

Amounts Due from Each.

A table showing the amounts due from each nation on Dec. 15 and also these totals plus the arrears follows:

	Due Dec. 15.	Grand toal.
Belgium	$ 2,859,453	$ 11,359,453

Body in New Clothing Is Taken Out of Canal

The body of a man about 45 years old was taken from the drainage canal at Lockport early yesterday. The clothing was that of a laborer, but it was new and showed no signs of wear. The man had a full set of false teeth and four fingers on his left hand were cut off at the knuckles. Thirty-nine cents was found in his pockets, but no clews to his identity. Police said the body had been in the water about five days.

Rescue Mrs. Arlen

MRS. MICHAEL ARLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CANNES, France, Sept. 16.—Mrs. Michael Arlen, wife of the famous writer, was besieged by a mob in a garage here today when she took refuge there after Dante Faggioli, 18, an Italian motorcyclist, was killed in a collision with her car.

The accident occurred when Faggioli sped out from a side street into the Rue Commandant Vidal on which Mrs. Arlen was driving with her son. He suffered a skull fracture. A group of women nearby saw the accident, rushed forward, and threatened Mrs. Arlen. She fled into the nearby garage for safety and while a menacing crowd collected outside called her husband and the British consulate. Police soon arrived and rescued her.

Mrs. Arlen reënacted the accident carefully at the request of police, who said as far as could be learned from the preliminary investigation she was not to blame.

FRENCH SEEK U. S. AID IN ARMS PACT AIMED AT NAZIS

3 Power Parley Opens in Paris Tomorrow.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—(AP)—A firm stand against disarmament until there is a slackening in the European tension was expected tonight to be taken by France during the tripartite conversations between the United States, French, and British representatives beginning here Monday.

Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign office undersecretary, will arrive tomorrow for the talks with Premier Deladier and Joseph Paul-Boncour, French foreign minister.

Seek Four Point Objective.

The conversations will have four main objects:

1. A three power agreement to support the French proposal for a trustworthy international armament control to be created before armaments are further reduced.

2. To discuss what can be done in case Germany refuses to accept the control plan, which French opinion, stiffened as a result of the Austro-German conflict, feels is necessary before France can accept any disarmament treaty.

3. To compare notes on charges that Germany is fast rearming.

4. The limitation of arms at the present levels until the control scheme is tested.

Britain Swings to French View.

France has been heartened by reports that the United States would back the international control scheme and that British opinion is swinging behind the French point of view.

A swift change in the British attitude has been noted here since Berlin rejected the Anglo-French diplomatic request that a stop be put to the Nazi "radio bombardment" of Austria and on the Nazi campaign to win Austria over to a union with Germany.

Feeling is general in France that the disarmament conference will meet its most critical period this fall as a result of German developments. The conference soon will arrive either at definite positive results, informed quarters say, or it will be lost in European war rumors.

Pumlic Backs Stiff Attitude.

How French citizens look at the German drive into central Europe as related to disarmament is reflected by Paul-Boncour, who says that "France knows she is strong enough to resist attempted violence."

"The silent visit which Premier Daladier recently made to the defensive forts on the eastern frontier," he added, "was the reply to certain attitudes assumed in other countries. All France accompanied the head of the government on his inspection."

A control plan was one of the principal points of the last French proposal made in Geneva last November. Since then Adolf Hitler has come to power in Germany and French willingness to disarm before a control is established has changed to willingness to disarm only after such control has proved itself to be workable.

The French want to keep their war establishment intact until they are certain that Germany is not rearming and that all countries are disarming simultaneously.

500 WILL FACE COURT IN DRIVE ON HARD TIRES

Five hundred motor vehicle drivers arrested for violations of the state law which prohibits the driving of automobiles equipped wtih hard rubber tires more than ten miles an hour will be arraigned before Municipal Judge Eugene Holland in the Speedsters' court tomorrow morning.

The defendants were arrested as the result of a drive instituted by city officials against hard tired machines which damage city streets. The penalties under the new law are fines ranging from $10 to $100 and costs. The drivers also are liable for civil damages to the city for the destruction of city streets.

MEXICO BIDS FOR UNIFICATION OF LATIN REPUBLICS

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 16.—[U.P.]—Mexica made a significant move toward Central American unification today when Foreign Minister José M. Puig Casauranc offered the five Central American republics land here for the construction of a single edifice to house their legations.

The offer was made in the name of President Abelardo Rodriguez, who was unable to attend a banquet given by the ministers of Honduras and Nicaragua to Mexican government officials. President Rodriguez also urged the Central American republics to work for political, social and economic unity.

Foreign Minister Puig Casauranc, in addressing the banquet, expressed the need for discussion of the foreign debt burden at the seventh Pan-American conference which begins in Montevideo next December.

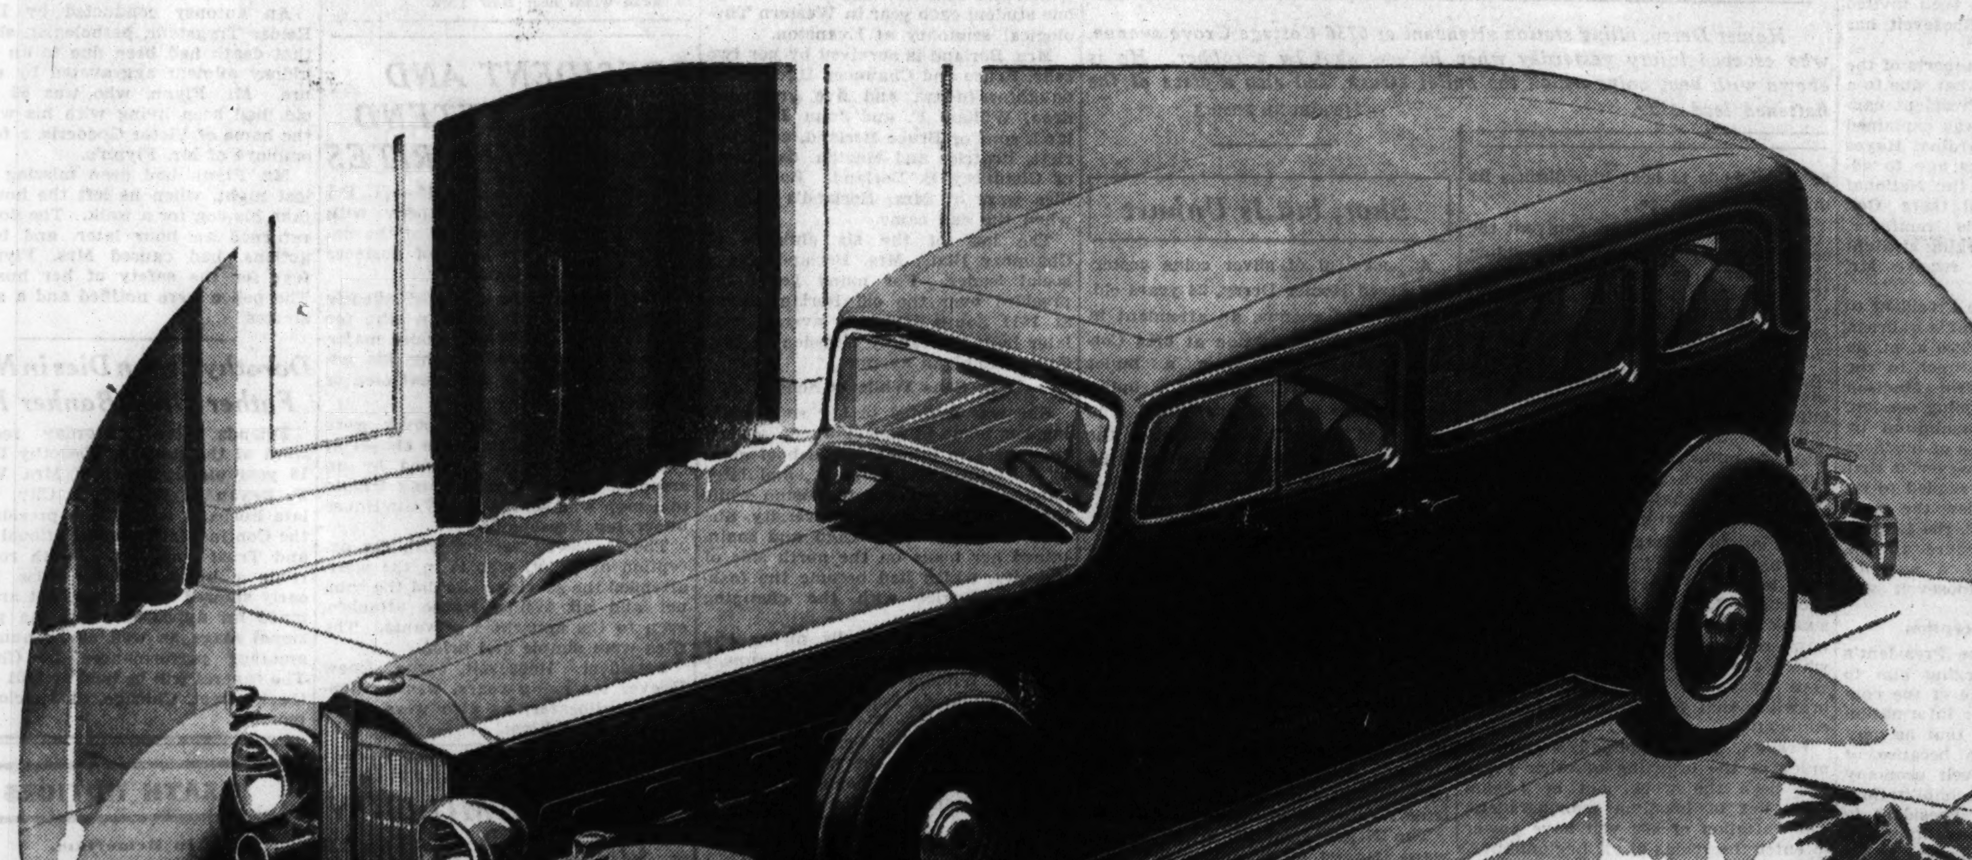
PACKARD

has a new yardstick it wants to lend you



If you are considering the purchase of a fine car, there are probably certain questions uppermost in your mind.

"Which of America's fine cars offers me the most for my dollars?" "Which is the car I will be most satisfied to own?"

Packard believes you can best answer these questions by borrowing a new yardstick of fine car value—the new 1934 Packard—a car deliberately designed to be the standard of value with which to judge all fine cars, American or European.

And perhaps never before in the history of automobiles has the fine-car buyer so needed such a yardstick.

For while you have been driving your old car, a revolution has taken place in motor car manufacturing. During every year of the depression, miracles of improvement have been built into some of America's fine cars. No longer can old standards be safely used in measuring today's automobiles.

Every fine car has been improved. But which fine car has gone farthest?

Packard believes you should know. This year, of all years, the purchase of a fine car should be influenced by neither guess nor prejudice, habit or hearsay.

Ride in every fine car America can offer you. But ride in a new 1934 Packard first.

Let this great car be your yardstick for judging all fine cars. Use the experience you get behind the wheel of a Packard as a measuring stick for every other car America can offer you.

And when you take your first, unforgettable ride, remember this. If you buy a new Packard, you can plan to keep it at least five years. For the motor in today's Packard is the most nearly ageless power plant that ever went into a motor car. And the traditional Packard lines never wear out, never cease to be smart and youthful.

So here is a suggestion. Telephone your Packard dealer and ask him to bring a new Packard to your door. Take your choice of the new Eight, the new Super-Eight and the new Twelve.

Drive it wherever your fancy dictates. Challenge every other fine car in the world to match it. Expect of it more than you have ever expected of a fine car before.

Do this—and we believe you will want a 1934 Packard as you have never wanted a motor car before.

LEGION SPEEDING FINAL PLANS FOR CONVENTION HERE

Wonder Whether Roosevelt Will Address Them.

For the first time in the history of the American Legion, the thousands of world war veterans in its membership are coming to Chicago for their national convention. The date is Oct 2 to 5, and the advance guard will soon be on the march. The town was a-bustle yesterday with final preparations for the event.

At pre-convention headquarters at 135 South Dearborn street a permanent staff of 50 worked at top speed on one of innumerable tasks—whipping the program into shape for the printers. That was a task of moment for a few hours only. So complex is the whole convention problem that the sponsors are tackling it as a corporation would. They have chartered American Legion Thirty-three, Inc., and have committees numbering 7,000 to put the job over.

Is the President Coming?

Overshadowing all other considerations yesterday, not alone at headquarters but in Legion posts throughout the country, was the question: Is President Roosevelt coming? As in every convention the Legionnaires have held since their first in 1919 the President, whom they regard as their commander in chief, has been invited to address them. Mr. Roosevelt has tentatively accepted.

Unofficial Washington reports of the last few days have been that, due to a prior engagement, the President cannot make the trip. It was explained that he had promised Cardinal Hayes of New York six months ago to address the convention of the National Catholic Welfare council there Oct. 4. Notwithstanding this reminder, local Legionnaires are forging straight ahead on their plan to receive Mr. Roosevelt here.

The program is for the President to arrive over the Pennsylvania railroad at the Union station at 9:30 a. m. on Monday, Oct. 2, speed direct to the Chicago Stadium on West Madison street to address the opening session, and then return to Washington by train or plane if the press of business demands it. The hope, however, is that the President can be persuaded to remain overnight and review the monster Legion parade Oct 3, the Legion naires promising to procure all the wire communications of a summer White House if Mr. Roosevelt will agree.

Promise Hearty Reception.

"We've heard that the President's political advisers are urging him to cancel the trip," said one of the convention spokesmen. "Our information is that the advisers fear that he may encounter hostility here because of the effect of the Roosevelt economy program on veterans' rehabilitation. If that is the case, the President is being ill-advised. This convention will give him as hearty a reception as he ever got anywhere."

Neither the half-hearted applause accorded former President Hoover at Detroit in 1931 nor the forceful boos bestowed on his secretary of war, Patrick Hurley, at Portland, Ore., last year, will be manifest this year, the Legion leaders insist. On the contrary, they promise that if the President comes he will witness the mightiest demonstration for his NRA program that has yet been evoked.

Postmaster General James A. Farley, who is here visiting the World's Fair with his family, yesterday promised a committee from the Legion, headed by Chief Justice Philip L. Sullivan of the Criminal court, and Philip Collins, executive vice president of the Legion convention committee, that upon his return to Washington he would visit President Roosevelt on behalf of the Legion and urge him to attend the convention.

Attendance estimates vary between 200,000 and 300,000 registrants, including Legionnaires, their families and friends. With no applications forwarded as yet from the Legion districts, the convention managers have no accurate means of forecasting the attendance. They are confident, however, that it will be the biggest Legion convention ever held and guarantee it will be the most colorful.

Record Attendance at Detroit.

The biggest attendance to date was 197,000, at Detroit. At Portland in 1932, due to geographical factors and the depression, it droppeu to 50,000. This year's convention managers believe sufficient urge has accumulated in two years so that, with the added attraction of A Century of Progress, the attendance will reach at least 250,000.

The plan is to have 130,000 of the visitors in line on Parade day, Oct. 3. They will march sixteen abreast, starting at the site of the John Kinzie house, near the Tribune Tower, swinging south across the Michigan avenue bridge and down Michigan avenue to Jackson boulevard, thence east to Leif Ericson drive and on south to the north gate of Soldiers' field. Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commander of the 6th corps army area, will be grand marshal in what is expected to be his last official appearance here before being transferred to command in the Philippines.

Starting at 10 a. m., the convention managers estimate that units will be moving into Soldiers' field up to 7 p. m. They hope to have President Roosevelt in the reviewing stand to witness veterans from all the states and territories marching in ranks to demonstrate their support of the NRA. Each unit will break up and disperse to the tiers of seats after passing in review.

World Famous Guests.

Whether the President is able to attend or not, the Legionnaires expect to have several world famous guests. Lieutenant General of Militia Milton J. Foreman, retired, ambassador extraordinary for the convention, is in Europe soliciting guests of honor. Reports are that the prince of Wales is eager to come, and that Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium may bring his bride, the Princess Astrid. An invitation has also been extended to Albert Le Brun, president of France.

The Legion is assured the presence of one distinguished foreign guest, Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of wireless telegraphy. The Legionnaires are greatly interested in Marconi's recent discoveries in the short wave field and hope to hear him discuss its military significance.

Two big problems now confront the convention management — providing shelter and maintaining decorum. With the loop hotels already filled by World's Fair crowds, the housing problem is intensified, but a way to work it out is being found. The Chicago Association of Commerce has communicated with 350 hotels and obtained assurance that their lounges, ballrooms and corridors will be turned into dormitories where necessary. Rooming house keepers and private householders having an extra room for rent have also been canvassed.

Plan to Maintain Decorum.

A battalion of 500 special service men has been organized to maintain decorum. Legion leaders are persuaded that the rank and file have now reached a stage of maturity where they should abjure the furniture smashing, bottle throwing and brawling that has marked some past conventions.

Besides, the Legionnaires contend, much of the brawling of other years has been the work, not of Legion men, but of hoodlum masqueraders. The battalion of 500 will have power to enter the rooms of all Legionnaires, will have entree at all public and private functions of the convention, and will deal as well with pseudo-veterans trying to bring discredit on the Legion. Having twelve Legionnaires on the Municipal bench, the organization is assured that masqueraders will be dealt with summarily.

The business of the convention itself will be "cut and dried," judging from talk at headquarters. The Chicago and Illinois delegations are supporting Edward Hayes, Decatur lawyer, for national commander, and profess to have no doubts of his election. The 1934 convention, they say, is already in the bag for Miami, Fla. The convention, they predict, will adopt Attorney Hayes' four point Legion program, designed to reconcile the needs of unrehabilitated veterans and the requirements of the overburdened taxpayers.

The convention will indorse Secretary Swanson's program for building the navy to treaty strength, urge Secretary of War Dern to start a similar program for the army, condemn pacifism and support the NRA. The program shapes up in advance, the Legion leaders explain. Mr. Collins, who is a former member of the Illinois commerce commission, is executive vice president in charge of arrangements.

Money in Pocket Stops Bullet

FEAR CONVENTION RACKETS; LEGION ISSUES WARNING

A warning that rackets are being attempted in the name of the American Legion in connection with the national convention beginning Oct. 1, was given yesterday by the American Legion Thirty-three corporation.

Solicitation of funds for the convention is in the hands of a mayor's citizens' committee and any requests for money coming from others than members of that committee are unauthorized, the warning states.

The sale of advertising in souvenir programs is unauthorized, since the convention is opposed to such programs.

A copyrighted design for decoration of show windows and in other forms is being sold by solicitors with letters of identification. Others are not authorized, according to the statement.

In the event of doubt of any solicitation, the public is urged to call Andover 5000 for information.

Thos. Rees' Will Provides for Springfield Carillon

Sara C. Clapp, Nationally Known Social Worker, Dies

New York, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Miss Sara Cleveland Clapp, nationally known social worker, died today of heart disease. She was 51 years old. She recently had been appointed by Secretary Perkins of the labor department as the only social worker to serve on committee work in investigating conditions at Ellis Island.

Shot, but Is Unhurt

A pocketful of silver coins yesterday saved Homer Derry, 24 years old, 7936 Rhodes avenue, an attendant in a gasoline filling station at 6754 Cottage Grove avenue, from a bullet wound. The silver stopped a bullet fired at him by a Negro bandit who attempted a daylight holdup of the filling station. Derry was bruised by the impact of the shot, but not otherwise hurt, and the bandit was captured by police.

The robber walked into the filling station shortly after noon. Drawing his revolver, he forced Derry into a corner and then turned his head to see that none of the passersby could see him. As he did so Derry swung a right to the bandit's jaw. The man backed away and fired two shots, one of which missed Derry, and then turned and fled. Policemen John Kustusch and Earl Cook of the Woodlawn police station were standing near the corner. They heard the shot, saw the bandit running, and captured him.

Before 18,000 spectators the 56th annual Wheatland plowing match was won yesterday by Carl Shoger of Wheatland township, the champion for the last two years. He gathered 80 points and used a two gang, 12 inch tractor driven plow. The event took place on Martin Fry's farm, three miles north of Plainfield.

Second place went to Homer Lapp of Plainfield, a former champion, who drove three horses before a single 12 inch plow. Carl Hagemann of Plainfield was one-half point behind Lapp's 71 for third place. He used a tractor.

There were also grain, vegetable, and cooking contests, and 4-H club live stock show which was won by an Aberdeen-Angus steer calf entered by Robert Weber, 14 years old, of route No. 4, Lockport. Admission was free, as was a chicken dinner cooked by steam piped from a threshing machine.

Mother of David Warfield Dies in California at 89

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Mrs. Louise Warfield, 89, mother of David Warfield, the actor, died here today at the family home, where she lived with another son, John Warfield, and a daughter, Miss Jule Warfield. David Warfield, who retired from the stage several years ago, is living in New York. Mrs. Warfield is survived also by another daughter, Mrs. Mildred Harriman.

Commodore C. H. Harlow, U. S. Navy, Retired, Dies

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Commodore Charles H. Harlow, U. S. navy, retired, who served with distinction in the naval campaigns in Cuban waters during the war with Spain, died at the Lake Placid club today as the result of a cerebral hemmorrhage. He was 75 years old.

G. R. Wales, Member U. S. Civil Service Board, Dies

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—[U.P.]—George R. Wales, 70, a member of the United States civil service commission, died here today of pneumonia. A Vermont Republican, he was appointed to the bi-partisan commission by Woodrow Wilson in 1919.

Former Governor Baker of Missouri, Long Ill, Dies

Jefferson City, Mo., Sept. 16.—[U. P.]—Sam A. Baker, former Republican governor of Missouri, died at his home here early today. He had been ill four years since a stroke of paralysis shortly after leaving office in 1929.

Fred Cole, Piatt County Democratic Leader, Dies

Champaign, Ill., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Fred Cole, 58, prominent Piatt county Democrat and state representative in 1917-'19, died in the Circuit court room today after a sudden illness. Cole was in court to take a civil service examination for postmaster.

MRS. J. J. BORLAND, SOCIETY MATRON, IS DEAD AT 85

Worker for Hospitals and Scholarship Founder.

Mrs. John Jay Borland died yesterday after a heart attack in her home at 2450 Lake View avenue. She had been severely ill for a month, and had returned to Chicago from her summer home at Camden, Me., only a week ago. Mrs. Borland was 85 years old.

The former Harriet Blair, Mrs. Borland was a daughter of Chauncey Blair, one of the city's pioneer merchants, manufacturers, and capitalists, who migrated to Chicago from the east coast about the time the first Potter Palmer settled here. Dozens of prominent Chicagoans are descendants of Mr. Blair.

Mrs. Borland was the widow of John Jay Borland, a lumber marchant, after whom the Borland building, 105 South La Salle street, was named. Mr. Borland died here half a dozen years before the turn of the century.

Active in Philanthropies.

After her husband's death, Mrs. Borland became active in many social and philanthropic affairs. The latter interest she retained until her death. For many years she was keenly interested in the Children's Memorial hospital, St. Luke's hospital, and in church work. In 1930 she established the Harriet Blair Borland scholarship, which provides for the education of one student each year in Western Theological seminary at Evanston.

Mrs. Borland is survived by her two sons, Bruce and Chauncey B., her two daughters-in-law, and five grandchildren, William F. and John Jay Borland, sons of Bruce Borland, and Harriett, Beatrice and Martha, daughters of Chauncey B. Borland. Both families were at Mrs. Borland's bedside when the end came.

The last of the six children of Chauncey Blair, Mrs. Borland was a social leader. For many years she presided over the old Borland home at 1611 South Michigan avenue, and later built the family mansion at 2612 South Michigan avenue.

Near Sons While in School.

She was devoted to her sons, making her home in New York City when they were in preparatory school nearby at Laurenceville, N. J., and later moving her residence to Boston while they attended Harvard university. She then returned to Chicago and maintained her home on the north side of the city, which had become the fashionable district with the changing years.

Among Mrs. Borland's nieces and nephews are Anita, Wolcott, Chauncey Jr. and William Mitchell Blair, and the Marquise de Ivanrey. She was a sister of the late Watson, Henry A., and Chauncey Blair Sr.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon from the home, it was announced yesterday. The complete arrangements, however, will be announced later.

W. HEPPENHEIMER, JERSEY BANKER, IS DEAD AT 73

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—William Christian Heppenheimer, one of New Jersey's outstanding bankers, who was long prominent in the public life of the state, died of heart disease today. He was 73 years old.

Mr. Heppenheimer was chairman of the board of the Trust Company of New Jersey and an officer or director in many other financial institutions. He was a member of the port of New York authority, of the New Jersey beverage commission, and of the High Point park commission.

Mr. Heppenheimer was widely acquainted—not only in financial and political circles but in sporting ranks, and more prominent people are reputed to have been entertained at his home in Jersey City than at any other private residence in the state. William Jennings Bryan addressed a crowd of 30,000 persons there from an iron balcony on the second floor in the days when silver coinage was a live political issue.

Indiana Junior Commerce Body Meets in Evansville

Evansville, Ind., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Indianapolis was chosen as the 1934 convention city today by the Indiana Junior chamber of commerce at the opening session of its annual convention. Robert B. Taylor, Evansville, was elected president, and William Shively, Fort Wayne, vice president. About fifty representatives of the various junior chambers were in attendance. Tomorrow morning's breakfast will close the convention.

Aviation Notes

Flying time between Chicago and the southwest has been shortened for the second time in a month by United Air Lines, it was announced yesterday. The daylight schedules now provide the following service, from Chicago to Kansas City, two hours and fifty minutes; to Tulsa, four hours, forty-nine minutes; to Oklahoma City, five hours and forty-one minutes; to Fort Worth, seven hours and ten minutes and to Dallas, seven hours and thirty-five minutes.

Airway beacon lights on the three transcontinental routes and the Seattle-Los Angeles airway, were restored to all night operation yesterday by the department of commerce. For economy the lights had been operated only while scheduled air liners were in flight. The all night operation was resumed for the convenience of privately owned planes.

Mail, express and passenger service of Northwest Airways between Minneapolis and Duluth was discontinued yesterday because of reduced payments for the air mail. Other services of the air line have been reorganized, but remain substantially the same.

Flying Forecast

Special flying route forecasts for the period from 11 p. m. Sept. 16 to noon, Sept. 17 [C. S. T.]:

Chicago-St. Louis, Evansville-Cincinnati—Scattered clouds.

Chicago-Detroit-Cleveland—Clear sky over west, a few scattered thundershowers followed by clearing over east portion.

Chicago-Twin Cities—Mostly clear sky.

Chicago-Omaha-Kansas City—Clear sky.

Route forecasts for 12 hours ending at noon:

Evansville-Atlanta—Clear sky or scattered clouds.

PRESIDENT AND CABINET ATTEND IKE HOOVER RITES

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—[U. P.]—Ike Hoover was buried today, with the highest representatives of the nation pausing in the press of business to pay him final honor.

President Roosevelt bowed silently before the bier of the man who for 43 years was the White House major domo and numbered among his acquaintances most of the great men of the world.

Funeral services for Hoover were held at 2 p. m. in the little chapel at Glenwood cemetery, attended by an assemblage that was a fitting tribute to a man who served the White House under ten Presidents.

The Roosevelt family, with the exception of Elliot, who is in the west, attended the services. So did the cabinet and all White House attachés, even to the household servants. The rites were simple and brief.

President Roosevelt, who knew Hoover for many years, was an honorary pallbearer, as also were members of the cabinet.

KELLY APPROVES SAVING MILLION ON NEW BRIDGE

Mayor Kelly yesterday approved a recommendation by Commissioner of Public Works Hewitt that a fixed bridge, rather than a bascule [jack knife] bridge, be constructed over the north branch of the river at Ashland avenue. Mr. Hewitt told the mayor that a fixed bridge would cost the city $1,100,000 less than a bascule type, plus an annual saving of $27,000 in operation and maintenance.

The project has been recommended to Col. W. G. Caples, United States district engineer, who is expected to call a public hearing for interested parties in the city hall on Oct. 17. The Hewitt figures disclosed that a bascule bridge would cost the city $2,250,000 and the fixed bridge $1,150,000.

J. CHANCELLOR'S WIFE DIES AFTER AN OPERATION

Mrs. Theodocia Harper Chancellor, wife of Justus Chancellor, a veteran member of the Chicago bar, died in the Edgewater hospital yesterday morning following an operation, at the age of 65. The family home is at 333 Fairview avenue, Winnetka.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow in the chapel at Rosehill cemetery.

Mrs. Chancellor was born in Point Pleasant, W. Va. She came to Chicago in 1888 and the following year married Attorney Chancellor. She was a member of the D. A. R. and past president of the Culture club. She is survived by her husband, a daughter, Mrs. Leola Gates, and a son, Justus Chancellor Jr., both of Winnetka, and twelve grandchildren. Her father was William Wylie Harper, a chaplain in the Union army during the civil war.

A. LEO FLYNN, 53, THEATRICAL MANAGER, DIES

Brentwood, L. I., N. Y., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—A. Leo Flynn, theatrical business manager, who had been associated with James K. Hackett, Otis Skinner, and many other actors and producers during the last 20 years, was found dead today in the woods of scrub oak near here.

An autopsy conducted by Dr. A Reider Trygstadt, pathologist, showed that death had been due to an acute kidney ailment aggravated by exposure. Mr. Flynn, who was 53 years old, had been living with his wife at the home of Victor Godderis, a former employé of Mr. Flynn's.

Mr. Flynn had been missing since last night, when he left the house to take his dog for a walk. The dog had returned an hour later, and by his actions, had caused Mrs. Flynn to fear for the safety of her husband. The police were notified and a search started.

Dorothy Braun Dies in N.Y.; Father Once Banker Here

Friends here yesterday received word of the death of Dorothy Braun, 19 year old daughter of Mrs. Walter F. Braun of New York City, whose late husband was a vice president of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company. Death resulted from a heart attack. Miss Braun early showed dramatic talent and had made an appearance on the professional stage as well as in numerous amateur performances in Chicago. The funeral will be held at 2701 North Clark street, Chicago, at 3 o'clock tomorrow.

ASKS LIGHT BEER AND WINE TAX TO AID TEMPERANCE

Dr. Henius Suggests Plan for Liquor Control.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

An American system of liquor control, based on a scientifically graduated tax to popularize beer and light wines and keep down the consumption of hard liquor, was suggested yesterday by Dr. Max Henius, president of the Wahl-Henius institute, who has just returned from a European trip, where he studied various systems of regulation.

The importance of a right approach to this legislative problem was emphasized by Dr. Henius, who has observed conditions in Chicago for 50 years and has been equally the foe of prohibition and of the saloon. He would have Illinois adopt a model law, liberal in its applications, with few "thou shalt not's," but designed to promote temperance and avoid the evils of bootlegging and the associations of the old time saloon.

Moderate License for Beer.

Bright, clean places where food and beer may be had are springing up like mushrooms now in Chicago, he has observed, but the saloon, the plain drinking bar, is also creeping back. Under his plan beer would be 5 cents a glass in any food place that wanted to pay a moderate license, while it would become progressively more expensive, but not expensive enough to encourage bootlegging, to sell or drink beverages with higher alcoholic content. He would adopt part of the Quebec system, but without government liquor stores. Liquor would be obtained at wholesale stores, as other goods are. Part of the Danish system is also fitted to this country, in his opinion, although the Danes have recently made the mistake of making liquor taxes too high and illicit trade has resulted.

Outside of federal taxation, control of sale at the point of production, import, labeling and interstate commerce regulations, all liquor control, Dr. Henius says, should be left to the individual states. The state laws should deal with production, sale and distribution, and should be made as liberal as possible.

Makes Suggestions for Control.

"In establishing liquor control," he said, "two salient points are taxes and license fees and the method of distribution. It is a sound principle to place a very low tax on the nonintoxicating beverages and a high tax, increasing with the alcohol content, on intoxicating beverages. A limit must, however, be fixed, as otherwise the results would be decreased sales and the flourishing of illicit brewing, distilling, bootlegging and smuggling. We do not deal with theories now; we know.

"As few restrictions as possible should be placed on distribution. If too many restrictions are part of the laws to be passed, the law will be circumvented in the same manner as the prohibition law. It is furthermore essential that no drinking bars should be permitted.

"The nonintoxicating beverages should be sold under the same license as now and in all places where soft drinks are sold. Extra license must of course be paid where intoxicating beverages are sold. Two licenses could be stipulated, one for beverages up to 15 per cent of alcohol and another for those above 15 per cent. In the latter case the beverage must be sold with food. It should be permissible to drink such beverages on the premises where they are sold. Liquor stores should exist, but the beverages bought should not be consumed there."

Dr. Henius has divided alcoholic beverages into two groups, nonintoxicating, those containing 3.2 per cent alcohol by weight, and intoxicating, those that contain more than 3.2 per cent.

Three Classes Intoxicating.

The group of intoxicating beverages he divides into three classifications. The first group is beverages from 3.2 to 15 per cent of alcohol, the stronger beers and wines. The second group is composed of beverages from 15 to 24 per cent of alcohol, the fortified wines. The third group is of beverages of 24 per cent or more of alcohol by weight.

Dr. Henius has worked out a table of taxation, both federal and state, beginning with 10 cents a gallon, federal, and 1½ cents, state, on the stronger beers and wines, bringing in $3.50 a barrel. This goes up progressively. The fortified wines would be taxed $7 a barrel, or 5 cents a bottle. The still stronger drinks would be taxed as high as 35 cents a bottle.

"The solving of the liquor problem," said Dr. Henius, "is principally a psychological question. It is true that many factors are involved, such as health, economics, and trade, but experience has proven conclusively that if proper attention is not given to the psychology of the people any solution will fail miserably in its purpose. The 18th amendment is a typical example. Prohibition was in direct opposition to the American people's love of freedom and common sense and was, therefore doomed to failure. This is the first time the people have had a real chance to express themselves on this question.

Urges "Sensible Control."

"A system based on freedom and openness, with sensible control, has by far the best chance of success. No dispensing license should be issued to any person who has been in conflict with the laws of the country, nor to persons who have been deprived of the right to handle their own private affairs. Hard and fast rules must be laid down regarding restaurant premises. Large and airy rooms will do more than anything else to further the progress of temperance.

"Overtaxation, which will act as a disguised and not especially democratic prohibition for the poorer classes, should be avoided. In the Scandanavian countries taxes on intoxicating beverages vary considerable and for this reason the consumption of the various kinds of beverages is unequally divided. In these three countries the government has an approximate annual income from the sale of intoxicating beverages of $5 to $6 per inhabitant.

"In the United States, where the price level is somewhat higher, it should be possible through a sensible taxation to figure on a similar or higher income, or a total tax income of between 600 and 800 million dollars."

NEW YORK EXCHANGE FOR RUM FUTURES STARTS PRICE QUOTING

New York, Sept. 16.—[U. P.]—The American Liquor exchange at 247 Park avenue opened today for business.

Trading in "futures"—those warehouse receipts that represent stocks of rye, bourbon, and perhaps a spot or two of gin—went on apace with prices posted on a big board that made many an old timer's eyes pop out.

The quotation board listed the stocks by names, year of distillation, and price per case. The exchange makes a modest charge of 25 cents a gallon, both to buyer and seller, in the transfer of warehouse paper.

Among the quotations were:

Old Timer, 1917, $38.50 per case.
Old Barbara, 1912, $36.
Schenley, 1912, $46.
Old Taylor, 1916, $40.
Old Grandad, 1917, $40.

71 MEN JAILED FOR KILLING TWO WOMEN 'WITCHES'

DAR-ES-SALAAM, Tanganyika, East Africa, Sept. 16.—(AP)—A mass "witchcraft" trial, in which all of the 75 male inhabitants of an isolated Tanganyika village were involved, resulted today in the conviction of 71 assailants of two women believed by villagers to be witches. The women, a mother and her daughter, were killed.

Sentences ranging from six months' imprisonment upward were imposed. The original charge of manslaughter was reduced to one of rioting. This district is British mandated territory.

The witchcraft superstition constitutes one of the most acute problems of the white administration in these sections. At Nairobi, last January, 60 natives of the Wakamba tribe were sentenced to death for killing an old woman they believed had cast a spell over a man's wife. The sentences were later commuted.

Convention of Druggists to Meet Here Tomorrow

The sale of whiskey at drug stores when prohibition is repealed is expected to provide one of the main subjects for discussion and action at the five day convention of the National Association of Retail Druggists which opens tomorrow night at the Hotel Sherman. Among the speakers will be James M. Doran, federal commissioner of industrial alcohol, and H. J. Anslinger, commissioner of narcotics, both of whom will speak Tuesday afternoon. Five thousand delegates are expected to attend the convention.

Brew Institute Graduates Plan 60th Annual Reunion

The sixtieth annual reunion of graduates of the Siebel Institute of Technology, baking and brewing school, 950 Montana street, will be held in Chicago next Thursday. More than 500 graduates of the institution, which was founded in a small wooden school house just after the great Chicago fire of 1871, will attend the celebration. The first graduating class of 61 years ago consisted of half a dozen young men.

Elliott Roosevelt, Bride on Visit in Fort Worth

NEW MEXICO AND IDAHO VOTE ON REPEAL TUESDAY

Both States Are Expected to Join Wet Column.

Albuquerque, N. M., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Two more states, New Mexico and Idaho, vote on prohibition repeal next Tuesday and impartial observers are predicting that both will go into the wet column by substantial majorities.

Here in New Mexico the leaders of the Democratic, Republican and Progressive parties have joined in appeals to the electorate to go to the polls and add their ballots to the nation-wide tide being rolled up against the eighteenth amendment. Repealists predict a 3 to 1 "or better" victory for their cause.

A letter from Postmaster General James A. Farley, national Democratic chairman, asking the voters to make the wet victory big and impressive has been widely circulated and is counted upon to help get out the wet vote.

Governor Adds Appeal.

Gov. Arthur Seligman and Ed Swope, state Democratic chairman, added their appeals to those of the party's national chairman.

Three delegates to be elected to a state constitutional convention on Oct. 19 will formally record the state's stand on the prohibition issue. Incidentally Tuesday's ballots in addition to determining the state's stand on the amendment will decide the fate of article 23 of the state constitution which relegated New Mexico into the prohibition column in 1918. If the article is rejected the state's enforcement machinery will go by the board.

Local option elections will also be held in all but eight of the thirty-one counties and the localities going wet on this question will go on record with a triple-plated "nay" on the issue.

Idaho Dry 18 Years.

Idaho has been "dry" for eighteen years and newspaper dispatches indicate that the drys are banking some hope of holding the state in line in Tuesday's election in spite of the confident claims being made by the repeal leaders.

Twenty-one delegates will be chosen in that state and they will meet in convention on Oct. 17.

One of the tickets to be voted on will be pledged to repeal and the other against repeal.

The last legislature legalized 3.2 per cent beer in the state.

Asher B. Wilson of Twin Falls, head of the repeal organization, has so far refrained from any attempt to estimate the majority which he predicts will move Idaho into the repeal column, but statements emanating from his headquarters indicate little doubt about the outcome.

Today's Idaho newspapers give a good play to the debate on repeal held at Twin Falls last night between Representative Thomas C. Coffin, who was elected to congress last fall on a repeal platform, and the Rev. W. E. Anderson, pastor of the Christian church of that city.

3 RISK LIVES TRYING TO HALT SLEEP SICKNESS

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Three scientists are risking the dangers of sleeping sickness in an effort to control the disease which has gripped St. Louis and surrounding areas.

Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming was told today that the scientists—members of the St. Louis Public Health service staff fighting the disease—had allowed mosquitos which had bitten victims of the malady to bite them and thus determine whether sleeping sickness is being spread by those insects.

Names of the three doctors who volunteered in the experiments were not divulged. Cumming said each was one who would not seek public honor and that virtually every man working in the St. Louis area had taken equal risks.

Dr. W. T. Harrison of the St. Louis staff, reported to Cumming that the experiments had started yesterday and that it would require from 10 to 14 days to see whether the disease was transmitted by mosquitoes.

FIND GIRL'S BODY IN GRAVE; FARMER HELD AS SLAYER

St. Cloud, Minn., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Missing since last Sunday, the body of Rose Tauber, 29, was found early today buried in a shallow grave.

Sheriff E. B. Shoener said John Gill, 31, a farmer, signed a confession that he choked the girl to death because she refused to marry him. Gill was charged with first degree murder.

The sheriff said Gill confessed he took Miss Tauber to his farm home last Sunday while his parents were absent, trying to persuade her to keep her promise to marry him. When she evaded the question, the sheriff quoted Gill as telling him, and threatened to go home alone, he backed her against the wall and grabbed her throat. She fell to the floor when he released his hold. The body was found in a grave on the Gill farm.

Miss Tauber, a maid in a home here, had been the object of a police search since she left her place of employment in response to a telephone call Sunday.

Why drive with HOT FEET?

YOU know that pocket of hot air that centers around the clutch and brake pedals when you drive? Sure, everybody does.

All right, you don't have to suffer hot feet there any longer. Fisher No Draft Ventilation fixes that.

It draws in fresh cool air to displace the stale heated air and gently vacuums out that ovenlike temperature even on scorching days.

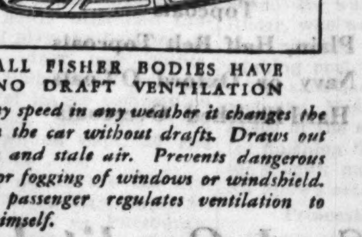
It does this without wind-in-the-face or drafts-on-the-neck of the person beside you or behind you, because Fisher Ventilation is individually controlled.

It does a lot of other things, too—like bringing you unblown and undisheveled to the party, keeping interior of windshield and windows unfogged in cold or rain, giving the back-seat riders a break for once in their lives in draftless comfort.

That's probably why people using No Draft Ventilation say we ought to point out that it takes this newest Fisher feature to make a car really modern.

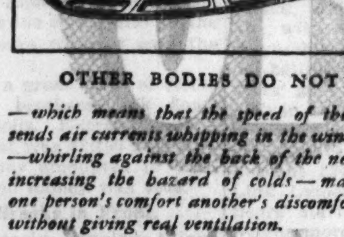
We're proud of it, of course, just as we're proud of all the numerous other features that make folks call the Fisher Body the strongest, safest, smartest body.

It's easy for you to try out Fisher No Draft Ventilation for yourself at any Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick, La Salle or Cadillac dealer's—and remember only General Motors cars have Bodies by Fisher.



ALL FISHER BODIES HAVE NO DRAFT VENTILATION

At any speed in any weather it changes the air in the car without drafts. Draws out smoke and stale air. Prevents dangerous interior fogging of windows or windshield. Each passenger regulates ventilation to suit himself.



OTHER BODIES DO NOT

—which means that the speed of the car sends air currents whipping in the windows—whirling against the back of the neck—increasing the hazard of colds—making one person's comfort another's discomfort—without giving real ventilation.

DUNLAP BEATS MARSTON FOR U. S. GOLF TITLE

GIANTS WHIP CUBS TWICE; NEED ONLY 3 VICTORIES

2 TO 1 AND 6 TO 3 TRIUMPHS PUT THEM NEAR FLAG

Mistakes Defeat Nelson, Bush.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The Giants marched right up to the championship doorstep yesterday and it won't be long now until they break through. They smacked down the lamented Cubs, 2 to 1, in the first half of a double header. Then the Cubs, not seeming to care much about what happened, did the best they could to make it easy for the budding champions to triumph 6 to 3 in the second game. One more Giant victory will shake the Cubs loose from their last mathematical chance. Three more for the New Yorkers and the present second place Pirates will be definitely out.

The failure of 25,000, almost half of them women guests, to find the first game a source of pleasure can be attributed to the fact that Carl Hubbell, the prize among present day southpaws, was laboring against the Cubs. The Cubs hit him hard enough, but he bore down sufficiently in the pinches to record the 28th game in which the Giants have held the enemy to one run. However, the Cubs also aided him in this particular. They were guilty of dizzy base running that made three successive hits of no value.

Blunders Decide Issue.

The one fellow who more than held up his end in the fight against the famed Hubbell was Lynn Nelson. So far as hits were concerned he clearly shaded his famous opponent and he made himself doubly conspicuous by driving in the only Cub run. But Nelson made a couple of mistakes. He happened to let loose a wild pitch after an extra base hit, which promoted a run. He also happened to walk a man after an intentional pass had filled the bases and that proved the deciding factor. Nelson could have made good use of the run his pals threw away by their carelessness.

The Giants, after winning the first game, apparently weren't greatly concerned about losing the second. Bill Terry benched a couple of his regular infielders and entrusted the pitching job to a second stringer named Bill Shores. The Cubs slapped him fairly hard, two of their smacks being homers, but they were remiss in other duties. They dropped two errors into the proceedings which the gallant Guy Bush was trying to conduct with his usual skill. One started three runs in the third inning. The other let two score in the eighth. Without the blunders Bush might have staged another of his old Giant killing feats.

FIRST GAME

The Cubs devoted the first inning of the first game to proving that scoring can be avoided despite hits. Koenig opened with a single past Jackson. Billy Herman doubled to right, Koenig halting at third. Cuyler hammered a high bounder toward second and Ryan finally captured it, but his throw to first was too late to catch Cuyler. Koenig should have walked home while this was going on, but he didn't start until Ryan's throw was almost in Terry's hands. It was a simple matter to run him down. There still was hope until Stephenson tapped into a double play.

Davis, who concluded his Friday's work with a healthy punch to Pat Malone's chin, let loose another good wallop in the second inning. It was a sound hit into left center for a double. Nelson helped him to third with a wild pitch, whence he scored on Jackson's fly to Demaree.

Cubs Tie Score.

The Cubs went through some more futile scoring motions in the third. Jurges started with a single to center and Nelson sacrificed. Koenig fanned. W. Herman singled to right, but Jurges went only as far as third. This put the matter squarely up to Cuyler, but he struck out on one of Mr. Hubbell's choicest curves.

The tying rally staged by the Cubs in the fifth began with Hartnett's single to center. Jurges' infield out put him on second. Nelson singled into center and Hartnett scored. Koenig fanned for the second time and W. Herman hit safely for the third time, but Cuyler grounded into a force play.

Walk Decides Game.

Hubbell beat out a single back of second to open the eighth and it wasn't long before Nelson was in serious trouble. Moore singled to right and the two runners advanced on Critz's sacrifice. The bases were filled on an intentional pass to Terry, the idea being that Ott might ground into a double play. Nelson, however, walked him, thus forcing in Hubbell with the deciding run. Then Davis popped to Koenig and Camilli took in Jackson's high foul.

SECOND GAME

The Cubs didn't hesitate about going to work on Shores in the second game. The trouble was that it didn't do them much good. Koenig walked to open the Cubs' first inning and Billy Herman beat out a bunt to Terry. Koenig took third on Cuyler's long fly and scored while Stephenson was forcing W. Herman. A single by

Singing Wood Wins Futurity and $81,000

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Singing Wood beat off the challenge of Sir Thomas by a head today to win the $103,300 Futurity at Belmont Park, richest race in the world. The winner was a 12 to 1 shot in a field of 16 juveniles and bore the colors of Mrs. John Hay Whitney. A crowd estimated at 20,000 saw the race. Roustabout finished third.

C. V. Whitney's Equipoise, handicap champion of America, was beaten in the 2 miles of the Jockey club Gold Cup by the Wheatley stable's Dark Secret. It was the first defeat this year for the famous son of Pennant and Swinging, which had won seven in a row.

Equipoise was third in a field of four, Gusto leading him to the wire by eight lengths. Dark Secret, which defeated Gusto in the Manhattan handicap, won by four lengths. All three carried level weight of 125 pounds. The only other starter was the 3 year old Keep Out, which never was a threat.

Winner Earns $81,400.

Singing Wood earned $81,400 by his drive over a muddy racing strip. There was no questioning his courage today when he took up the challenge of Sir Thomas along the fence. Driving on along the rail, this 50 to 1 outsider ran the best race of his career.

Tony Pascuma plied whip and heel in a furious drive that sent Sir Thomas skimming past Hadagal. Jockey Jones worked on Singing Wood with his whip, but Singing Wood and Sir Thomas swept past the judges only a head apart.

A length and a half to the rear, after holding a trailing position, came C. V. Whitney's Roustabout. He and Singing Wood carried 122 pounds each. Sir Thomas, still a maiden, got in with 117. Sir Thomas' second place prize of $9,400 was more than he had gained in all his previous races combined. Roustabout's purse for third was $3,000, while High Glee, stablemate of Roustabout, was fourth and earned $1,000. There also were awards to the breeders of the placed horses.

Hadagal Takes the Lead.

The start of the Futurity was good one, although six minutes were spent at the post. After a furlong had been run Hadagal, the western threat, got to the front. He was closely attended by Spoilt Beauty and Roustabout. High Quest, favorite at 5 to 1, broke none too smartly, but got to contention within the first quarter. Thereafter he was out of the running.

Singing Wood had to come up around Hadagal to forge into the lead. At this time High Glee was right with the pace, and the victory seemed to lie between them. Then, two furlongs from the finish, Sir Thomas began his sensational charge along the rail.

John Sanford made one of the most satisfactory purchases of his career when he bought Best Play from Joseph E. Widener just before the running of the Grand National steeplechase.

Best Play won the Grand National by six lengths. Second to the wire was Mr. Widener's Arc Light.

DAN SABATH WINS

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Dan Sabath, fleet gelded son of Monk's Way, came home in front of a bunched field today to win the Juvenile handicap, $2,500 feature, from a classy field of 2 year olds.

Norman W. Church's Ima Count, son of Reigh Count, was beaten by a nose, with Wacoche, Audley Farm entry, a head behind. The six furlongs were covered in 1:13 4-5, and Dan Sabath paid $31.60 for a $2 ticket.

The race netted Albert Sabath, Chicago owner of the winner, $2,635.

GEORGE GORE, 81, DIES; BASEBALL'S FIRST HOLDOUT

Nutley, N. J., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Word was received here today of the death of George Gore, "baseball's first hold out," at the Masonic home in Utica, N. Y. He had lived in Nutley 13 years and was 81. While with the Fall River, Mass., team in 1878 he was offered $1,200 for a season with the Chicago National League team. He demanded $2,500 and a compromise was finally effected at $1,900. In 1879 he led the league with a batting average of .365.

Gore, a star center fielder in the days when no gloves were used, established three records which no player in organized baseball has ever beaten.

He was the only outfielder ever to make five assists in one game.

LOU MAGNOLIA, NEW YORK RING REFEREE, DIES

New York, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Louis F. Magnolia, referee in some of the boxing ring's most famous matches, died tonight in the Rockaway Beach hospital, Queens, from a throat ailment. He was 54 years old.

It was Magnolia—a prize fighter in his youth—who raised the right arm of Jack Sharkey in victory in the Boston sailor's fight with Young Stribling in Miami in February, 1929. Magnolia was the sole arbiter in the fight.

A year later, also at Miami, Magnolia disqualified Phil Scott in the third round of the British heavyweight's fight with Sharkey—bringing loud protests from British fight fans and newspapers.

THIS IS PROOF FOOTBALL SEASON'S HERE

Mike Koken of the Notre Dame All Stars makes a gain against Chicago Bears in fourth quarter of yesterday's game at Soldiers' field. The Bears, National professional champions, won, 14 to 0. Hewitt and Doehring scored the touchdowns, but Bronko Nagurski, Bears' full back, was the star of the contest.

PRO FOOTBALL TO OPEN TODAY WITH 2 GAMES

Columbus, O., Sept. 16.—(AP)—The National Professional Football league, boasting three additional clubs, will open its 1933 season tomorrow with games at Green Bay, Wis., and at Portsmouth, O.

The Boston Red Skins meet Green Bay while the newly organized Cincinnati Reds will play the Portsmouth Spartans. The other new outfits, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, will get their first taste of league competition in games against the New York Giants, Pittsburgh on Sept. 20 and Philadelphia on Oct. 15.

Other opening games are the Chicago Bears vs. Breen Bay, Sept. 24; the Chicago Cardinals vs. Pittsburgh, Sept. 27, and Brooklyn vs. the Chicago Bears, Oct. 8.

The league will be divided into eastern and western divisions. The division winners will meet in a football world series when the regular season ends.

Rochester Beats Newark, 9-7; to Meet Buffalo

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 16.—[U.P.]—The Rochester Red Wings today won the right to meet Buffalo in the final play off for the International league pennant when their 9 to 7 victory today over Newark in the fourth game of their preliminary play off gave Rochester the series, three games to one.

EVERGOLD WINS CRETE HANDICAP IN STICKY GOING

After waiting all summer long to win a stake race, the Nash brothers—Dick and Pat, of Chicago—finally watched their Shandon Farm stable's white and green jacket carried to victory in the Crete handicap at Lincoln Fields yesterday afternoon.

Racing out in the middle of the track Evergold plowed through the heavy going, made up much ground, and rallied gamely enough to beat the favorite, No More, by a length. Evergold's stable companion, Minton, which had forced the early pace, hung on to be third.

Winner Pays $8.14.

The Crete handicap was a dash at six furlongs. It was decided over one of the most difficult tracks of the year in Chicago. Nearly everybody in the crowd of 12,000 cheered when Evergold went galloping home, for the Nash entry had been stoutly backed and just barely missed crowding No More out of the position of favorite. Evergold paid $8.14 to win.

Over the rough, heavy track Evergold stepped the six furlongs in 1:16 3-5, much faster than any other race that was run during the afternoon. He was ridden by Jockey Lou Ruder, who was the riding star of the day, piloting three winners past the winning post.

The race had a gross value of $3,105 and the Nash brothers took down $2,400 of the spoils. Evergold's share for finishing first was $2,150 and Minton's third money amounted to $250. No More's second money was $500.

Princess Breaks in Front.

During the early running things didn't appear any too bright for the Nash brothers' color bearers. Princess Camelia, owned by Mrs. John Marsch, was the early leader, and when her strides began to shorten Pancho Lopez raced out into a lead of two lengths and held it until the field was heading into the stretch.

Evergold, which was away last and had been gaining steadily, then began to show some real speed. Jockey Ruder guided him out into the middle of the track where the going seemed to be much better and Evergold took the lead. No More put on his usual game rally. He drew up within a few inches of the lead, but Evergold rallied right with him. Pancho Lopez

Bears Use Weight to Whip Notre Dame All Stars, 14 to 0

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Chicago's Bears, champions of professional football, overpowered a select team of former Notre Dame players yesterday afternoon at Soldiers' field, 14 to 0. Eighty-eight hundred chanced the threatening weather to watch the nearest approach to a test of college and professional football.

Whatever hope of victory the boys from Notre Dame may have had vanished early in the first period, during which the low gray clouds released a deluge which drenched all who could not escape to shelter under the concrete stands. The rain turned the gridiron into a sodden morass. The disparity of weight, both in and behind the lines, predicted victory for the Bears. After the rain storm, although the field dried rapidly in the second half under a blazing sun, the Notre Dame alumni never had a chance.

Only once did the Irish veterans have possession of the ball within the Bears' 30 yard line, and that was made possible by a fumble. At no time did the All Stars threaten to score, but favored by penalties and misplays, they did hold the pro champions scoreless until the final play of the third quarter.

Weather Spoils Stars' Plans.

The Stars' offensive was intended to center around a forward passing and end running attack. Both were impossible because of the weather. The heavy going also affected the Bears' attack, but superior weight in the line, with such line busters as Bronko Nagurski and Jack Manders to carry the ball, finally advanced it to the All-Stars' goal line.

Even so, the All-Stars had the first real scoring opportunity when Al Culver, the heaviest man in the Irish line, a scant 220 pounds as compared to Link Lyman and George Musso, the Bears' starting tackles, each of whom weighs more than 250, recovered John Doehring's fumble on the Bears' 15-yard line in the second quarter. Unable to gain by running, the Irish shifted to the air but Red Grange intercepted Sheeketski's forward pass and carried the ball out to the Bears' 35-yard line.

The tabulation of first downs, Notre Dame, 3; Bears, 19, is a better indication of the game than is the score.

Hewitt Scores Touchdown.

The Bears swung into stride in the closing minutes of the first half with Nagurski hitting the Irish forwards for long gains. The first assault was halted by a penalty for clipping, but with only seconds to go, the Bears advanced to Notre Dame's 9-yard line, at which point the half ended.

A penalty for offside also checked the Bears' initial drive in the third period, but they came back a second time, and scored from the five yard line when Bill Hewitt went wide around the Irish left end on an end around play. Nagurski, who had fought for the yardage to reach the scoring zone, place kicked the seventh point.

Nagurski also set the stage for the second score when, shortly after the fourth period opened, he broke away inside tackle and raced 40 yards. Bronko bowled over four would-be tacklers before he fell on the Stars' 24 yard line. The Bears smashed to the 11 yard line and then were set back 15 yards for illegal use of the hands. Cliff Hansen, a newcomer from Luther college, saved the drive, however, when he gained 20 yards after he had dropped back for a pass and found no receiver open.

Two more thrusts accomplished a first down one yard from the scoring zone. Hansen failed to gain on the next play, but Bull Doehring shot through a wide gap inside of the Irish left tackle for the touchdown. Tackwell place kicked the extra point.

Bears' Passes Just Miss.

With luck on receiving forward passes, the Bears might have counted on two other occasions. On the first, in the third period, Carl Brumbaugh dropped Gene Ronzani's short running

Jack Sharkey and King Levinsky, having stirred up front page notices on the theory they would fight Friday night, now are putting on their training act again to get the proper financial consideration tomorrow night at Comiskey park, the weather man being willing. The boys might have turned in their ten rounds Friday night [Chicago's Golden Gloves team whipped France two years ago under worse conditions], but the promoter, Sammy Wolff, after counting the receipts in the morning, was willing to wait for the showdown until tomorrow night.

Messrs. Sharkey and Levinsky should put up a grand battle, but it remains to be proved that Chicago will spend $40,000 to see it. There's an old axiom in the fight business that the best you can expect at the box office is to double advance receipts. This being so, and granted fair and warmer weather, Wolff may make a few thousand on the fight.

Sharkey Gets $25,000.

Sharkey will receive $25,000 [which comes within $8,000 of equalling Barney Ross' take for defending his title in New York] and Levinsky is in for 20 per cent.

Both Sharkey and Levinsky engaged in their second series of final workouts yesterday at their respective loop gymnasia. Today, as they did last Thursday, the boys will rest, in theory at least, storing up energy for suppositional knockouts.

All that has been written of the fight can be said again. Levinsky, who has as much of a répertoire of punches as a one way street has direction, will depend on his free wheeling swings. Granted good eye sight, there is no reason why Jack should linger in front of them. But, as has been said many times, the Lithuanian ex-sailor lacks mental poise. His tantrums have become ring history and the Kingfish and his sister manager, Mrs. Lena Levy, are hoping he becomes enraged and opens up a spot where the King's sledge hammer blows may land.

Jack on Comeback Trial.

Jack, or else Manager Johnny Buckley, figured Levinsky is a soft touch in preparation for a comeback against the heavyweight champion, Primo Carnera. Even if Levinsky were a better boxer, $25,000 would be a neat sum for 30 minutes endeavor. There's nothing wrong with Sharkey's management.

NEW YORKER IS 2 UNDER PAR IN 6 AND 5 VICTORY

Takes Big Lead with 68 in Morning.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 16.—Twenty-four year old George T. Dunlap Jr., a freckled, taffy thatched lightweight from New York who plays, eats, sleeps, and talks golf, today won the thirty-seventh national amateur championship by defeating 41 year old Max Marston of Philadelphia, the champion of 1923, in the thirty-six hole final at the Kenwood Country club, 6 and 5.

Playing golf the like of which has not been seen since Bobby Jones punished fairways and greens in the national amateur, Dunlap assured himself of the championship trophy before the eighteenth hole of the morning round. He was 7 up on Marston after the fifteenth, and retained that advantage through the eighteenth.

Medal Score Is 68.

At the conclusion of the morning round, a startled gallery of nearly 8,000 discovered that the little New Yorker had finished with a medal card of 68, 3 under par. It was the second lowest final round score in the history of the tournament, Jess Sweetser having shot a 67 in winning the 1922 title at Brookline and Bobby Jones doing likewise at Minikhada in 1927. Dunlap's 68 also lowered the competitive course record of 68, set in the qualifying round Tuesday.

Dunlap's game went slightly askew in the afternoon, particularly off the tee, and this, coupled with a tardy rally by the dour and dogged Marston, brought the match to the thirty-first green, where the Philadelphian, with an opportunity to prolong it, fell short by an inch with a 7 foot putt for a birdie, which would have given him the hole. Dunlap played the thirty-one holes of the match in 2 under par.

The huge Marston, who hadn't smiled since the two came to the first tee in the morning, when Dunlap joshed him into doing so for a troup of photographers, allowed an honest grin to wrinkle his broad face as he walked over to congratulate Dunlap. The latter, who had been playing with his chest bared to the sun, buttoned up his shirt, grinned, and was swallowed up by a file of doughboys, who escorted him to the clubhouse.

The Dunlap-Marston match was one of the most unusual amateur finals on record, not only because it brought together a 41 year old ex-champion against a consistent contender of 24, but also because it was the first time in the history of the event that two golfers who had been forced to play off for their positions in the match play bracket reached the championship match.

Both Dunlap and Marston finished their qualifying rounds with scores of 150, tied with ten others for the last eight places in the match play. They were out on the first tee in the rain of Wednesday morning, and both came through, after it seemed that either of both must be eliminated.

Dunlap won the title by defeating W. B. McCullough of Abingdon, Pa., 6 and 5, in the first round; Gus Moreland of Dallas, Tex., 4 and 3, in the second round, Eddie Held of Jamesburg, N. Y., 6 and 5, in the quarter finals, Lawson Little of San Francisco, the final conqueror of Ross Somerville, 1932 champion, in the semi-finals, 4 and 3, and Marston today.

Magic in Dunlap's Irons.

In the morning round Dunlap was off the fairway only once. His short game was so perfect that every time he selected an iron within 100 yards of the green, the gallery following the match expected him to hole out, so close had he been with his pitches and chip shots on the early holes.

An ace on one of the shorter holes would have been no surprise, and he came near satisfying the crowd by making his prettiest shot of the day on the twelfth, the prettiest hole at Kenwood, a 166 yard carry over a ravine to a green set among trees. George sent his mashie shot straight for the pin and within another 10 inches of roll might have scored a hole in 1. The shot was too much for Marston, who dispatched his drive into the grass above a trap near the green and finally conceded the hole.

Dunlap's putting was uncanny on several greens, but peculiarly enough it was a job of collaboration. George did not make a putt over 12 feet throughout the tournament without calling over his caddy, Buddy Deeters, to survey the roll and rise of the green between him and the hole. Incidentally, as far as surveying the line of a putt was concerned, Deeters didn't miss one green all week.

Marston's Putter Fails.

Marston's defeat can be attributed not only to his propensity for overshooting greens and hooking tee shots, but also to the failure of the same faithful putter which helped him to beat Jones, Ouimet, and Sweetser when he won the 1923 title at Flossmoor. His putter had helped him to spank such youths as Sid Noyes and Jack Munger during the current tournament, but it did him wrong no less than six times today. Probably the best example of its fickleness occurred at the 29th hole, just when it appeared that the old boy might yet catch Dunlap.

The grizzled Philadelphian smacked

Boston, Mass., Sept. 16.—Baseball fans like to bust into reminiscence whenever there is provocation, and now that the Washington Senators and New York Giants soon are to engage in a world series the reminiscence bugs seem to be picking a lot on the game which decided the Senators-Giants series in 1924.

Though the game was played only nine years ago and was one of the most dramatic world series games ever contested, we have heard enough of the boys discussing it to suspect that many fans are a bit confused in their recollections.

Senators Win, 4 to 3.

And, just to help our smoke shop, beer store, and other followings, if any, we have plunged into the dusty tomes and have come out with a box score to back up certain details which we are about to set down.

The seventh and deciding game of the 1924 series was played in Washington and won by the Senators, 4 to 3, in 12 innings. Walter Johnson, the fourth Senator pitcher, was the winning pitcher, and Jack Bentley, fourth Giant pitcher, was the loser.

Ogden was the starting pitcher for Washington, though his appearance was a ruse to get McGraw to start the batting order he used against right handers. Ogden was withdrawn after fanning and walking a batsman. Barnes started for the Giants.

Harris Hits Homer.

Neither side scored a run until one was out in the Washington half of the fourth. Then Bucky Harris clicked a homer for a 1 to 0 lead, which prevailed until the Giants' sixth.

In the sixth Mogridge walked Young and Kelly singled, putting Young on third, whereupon Marberry went in to pitch. Meusel's sacrifice fly scored Young with the tying run. Hack Wilson followed with a single. Errors by Judge on Jackson and Bluege on Gowdy gave the Giants two more runs and a 3 to 1 lead.

In the eighth the Senators tied the score with a pair of runs. After Bluege had fouled out Leibold, batting for Taylor, lined a double to left. Ruel, who hadn't made a hit in the series, was next up. He moved up Leibold with a single. Tate batted for Marberry and walked, filling the bases. McNeely supplied the second out, but Harris nicked Barnes for a single which hopped over Lindstrom's head, Leibold and Ruel running home to tie the score. Nehf relieved Barnes and the inning ended with Rice's infield out.

Walter Johnson, who had been a failure in his two earlier games in the series, took over the pitching job at the start of the ninth. With one out in the ninth Frisch tripled. Johnson passed Young and then fanned Kelly on three pitches. Frisch died on third when Meusel grounded out.

In the Washington half the Senators had runners on third and first with one down, but Miller hit into a double play.

Johnson had to bear down again in the eleventh. Groh, batting for McQuillan, led off with a single and Southworth ran for him. Lindstrom advanced Southworth to second. Frisch fanned and Young again was given an intentional pass. Kelly again fanned. In the first of the twelfth Meusel led off with a single, but Hack Wilson, trying to sacrifice, fanned. Jackson and Gowdy supplied the other two outs.

With one out in the Washington twelfth Ruel lifted a foul which would have been easy for Gowdy had he not stepped in his mask. Given life by this usual break, Ruel responded with a double, his second hit of the game and series. Johnson was safe on Jackson's fumble. McNeely shot a hot grounder to Lindstrom, and just as Freddy was fixing to seize the ball it took a hop over his head and Ruel dashed home with the deciding run of the series.

National Pro Tennis Meet to Open at Rye Sept. 26

New York, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The seventh annual United States professional tennis tournament will open Sept. 26 on the courts of the Westchester Country club, Rye, N. Y., it was announced today. Karel Kozeluh will defend the title he won last year at Chicago.

LEADING INTO THE HOME STRETCH

More Rain, and Sox Continue Doing Nothing

Boston, Mass., Sept. 16.—The White Sox's revised schedule, which called for four double headers in four days, beginning this afternoon against the Red Sox, became less awesome this morning when the day's business was called off on account of rain. There is much doubt about the possibility of playing the farewell bargain bill here tomorrow.

Eddie Collins of the Red Sox called up Manager Lew Fonseca at noon and said he doubted very much that Fenway park could be put in shape for games tomorrow, even if the weather cleared immediately. It kept right on raining and the Bostonese have been urged to tie on their bonnets and brace for a hurricane which may hit this port.

Zeke Wires Fonseca.

The "Seek Zeke" cry in connection with the joining up of First Baseman Zeke Bonura eased up today for two reasons, one being that he couldn't do anything but sit and sit were he here, and the other being that Fonseca actually heard from the young man. Zeke wired that his split finger nail was pretty sore and that he wanted to stay close to a finger nail specialist in New Orleans.

The Sox manager urged Bonura to join the team in New York, where there are also fingernail specialists to consult, with the Sox trainer, Ad Schacht, himself a nail specialist of no mean ability.

Layoff Suits Simmons.

Al Simmons, who suffered minor injuries in beating out a hit in the last game at Philadelphia, welcomed the further layoff here. Al hasn't missed a game in two seasons, and while he is not shooting at Lou Gehrig's record or anything like that, he is eager to extend his durability record. He expects to play in the double header in New York Monday.

In case the improbable should happen and games are played tomorrow, Ted Lyons and Joe Heving will oppose Gordon Rhodes and Bob Weiland.

POLO COMMITTEE ABANDONS OPEN PLAY FOR WEEK

Westburg, N. Y., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The tournament committee of the United States Polo association today inspected the damage done to Meadow Brook fields by the unprecedented rains of the last few days and decided to put off until next week the adjustment of the disrupted open polo championship schedule.

It was impossible to judge when the fields would be ready for play again and there was the possibility that more rain would fall.

"Any play in the immediate future is, of course, out of the question," said F. S. O'Reilly, secretary-treasurer of the association, "and we can not make a new schedule until we learn when we may be able to play."

Only one new date definitely has been set for any of the postponed events. The pony show of the National Polo Pony society, postponed from yesterday, will be held next Friday.

Old Man Ott, 24, Veteran of Nine Years with Giants

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

MELVIN T. OTT, one of the Giants' fly chasers, is what you might call the oldest young man the major leagues ever have known. Here it is almost nine seasons now since the lad first crawled, somewhat timidly, into a big time uniform. And even with all this service behind him he's still at the age when most fellows break into the majors. He was only 24 last March. Another thing that makes his career unusual is that he never played with any other club in professional baseball.

Ott was another one of those accidents so common in baseball. At least it was accidental so far as the Giants were concerned. They were down in New Orleans one spring and somebody happened to tell John McGraw "There's a kid hanging around here trying to get himself a job in baseball."

Ott Checks In and Sticks Around.

McGraw happened to be feeling pretty good at the moment so told his informant to have the youngster call at the ball park. Ott put on a uniform and for some reason or another never was asked to discard it, even temporarily. There wasn't anything he could do especially well at the time, but McGraw had a sort of hunch. It panned out pretty well.

All that Ott cost the Giants was the price of an interurban car ride from some place near New Orleans. And after Ott had produced as a major leaguer you can imagine the embarrassment of the New Orleans club, which had chased the kid away because he looked as if he should be at home hanging to his ma's apron strings.

Ott started out with the idea that he was going to be a great catcher. He might have been if he had had his way, but he never had a chance to prove it and probably never will have it now. McGraw just kept him around without giving him a chance of any kind for one year, and then decided that so long as there was a prospective vacancy in the outfield the job might as well be handed to Ott.

He's Bad Customer for Rival Pitchers.

He took the job and since then has successfully fought off all challengers for his position. He's not much bigger than when he first showed up at the age of 16, but he can do things in a man's sized way. He gets around the outfield like a jack rabbit and seldom blunders. He can throw with the best of them. But it's while batting that he causes real alarm—to the other team. He's a long ball, pull hitter, and in a park with a short right field has a fondness for dumping the ball over the wall.

In only two of his seasons with the Giants has Ott finished below the coveted .300 batting mark. One was 1927 and the other 1931. In 1930 he compiled an average of .349. In 1929 he boasted an average of .328; that was the season he hit 42 home runs.

Mooseheart Eleven Beats La Salle, 14-0

La Salle, Ill., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Mooseheart's football team opened its 1933 season here by defeating La Salle-Peru High, 14 to 0.

Giants Whip Cubs Twice, 2-1 and 6-3

Davis and a double by Mancuso let the Giants tie the score immediately, but in the second Campbell moved the Cubs in front for a few minutes by poking a homer into the right field bleachers.

Fumble Starts Trouble.

Jurges fumbled James' roller to open the third inning and this blunder put Bush on skids. Terry bounded into a force out, but Ott slapped a single to right and Davis walked to load the bases. Dressen singled to center, scoring Terry and Ott. Davis counted and Dressen went to third on Mancuso's single to right. Ryan gave Bush a deserved break by hitting into a double play.

The next piece of excitement was a triple with which Terry led off in the fifth. Bush amused himself for the next few minutes, setting down the next three batters, one on strikes, one on a roller to W. Herman, and the third on a pop foul. Then the show was pretty dull until Camilli stirred up some action by lifting his homer over the right field wall with no one on in the seventh. That reduced the Giants' lead to one run.

Bush Goes Away.

Dressen and Mancuso singled to open the eighth and moved up on Ryan's sacrifice. Shores was disposed of on strikes. Moore next hoisted a popup halfway between third and home. Koenig came in to get it, closed his hands around the ball and let it drop. Dressen scored on the error. Bush then walked James and was yanked in favor of Lefty Henshaw, who proceeded to show that he too could pass 'em. He walked Terry, forcing in Mancuso. Koenig held Ott's pop foul.

The Cubs' pennant hopes are about gone, but not the double headers. There'll be another this afternoon at Wrigley field with the Brooklyn Dodgers the opposition. Charley Root and Bud Tinning will make up the Cubs' pitching committee. The Dodgers may start Ray Benge and Owen Carroll.

The fractured right forearm suffered by Stanley Hack, the Cubs' third baseman when hit by one of Bud Parmelee's pitches Friday, is more serious than revealed by the first examination. The fracture occurred in the wrist joint and must be reset by a bone specialist.

If the Cubs lose one game today they will be mathematically out of the pennant race. The same result can be promoted by the Giants if they win a game from the Cardinals. If the Giants win three of their remaining 12, the Pirates can't tie them by winning all their games.

Gordon Phelps, the Cubs' new catcher from Albany, made his debut yesterday. He batted for Jurges in the ninth inning of the second game. The bulky lad was officially in the league as soon as Shores slipped over a third strike.

Guy Bush was greatly concerned over his work yesterday because it would have been his 19th victory of the year, leaving him one shy of the mark he had set for himself. He still has a chance to make it 20, however. He has been whipped 12 times.

BRAVES DEFEAT PIRATES, 6 TO 4; THEN LOSE, 10-0

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 16.—(AP)—After losing the first game of a double header to Boston, 6 to 4, chiefly because of lax play afield, the Pirates came back today behind Birkofer's four hit pitching and shut out the Braves, 10 to 0, in the second contest.

The Pirates won the second game in the first inning. After doubling, Jensen moved to third on Lindstrom's long fly to Mowry and scored on Paul Waner's hit to the same spot. Zachary was driven from the mound in the fifth and Mangum, who succeeded him, also was ineffective. Scores:

CARDS, 14; DODGERS, 13.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 16.—(AP)—The Cardinals struggled through three hours and 28 minutes of slipshod baseball to defeat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 14 to 13, in the ten inning first game of a double header today. The second game went into the fifth inning and then was called because of darkness before it had gone far enough to become an official contest. The Dodgers were leading, 4 to 2, after a big fourth inning. Score:

Senators Beat Tigers Twice, 11-4 and 4-3

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—(AP)—The Senators swept today's double header with Detroit, taking the first game, 11 to 4, and winning the second, the nightcap, 4 to 3, in ten innings.

Washington's lead in the American league was boosted to ten full games over the New York Yankees, who were kept idle by rain.

SHANDON FARM STABLE'S COLORS ARE CARRIED TO VICTORY IN CRETE HANDICAP, FIRST STAKE TRIUMPH OF THE SUMMER FOR NASH BROTHERS.
Evergold, fancying the heavy going, plows through the mud to beat the favorite, No More, by a length in six furlong duel for $2,500 purse at Lincoln Fields. Minton, a stablemate of Evergold, is third. A crowd of 12,000 witnessed the victory of Evergold, which was a popular one, for the Nash entry was almost an equal choice with No More, one of the most consistent winners of sprint stake races this year. The time of 1:16 3-5 was much faster than that of any other race on yesterday's program. (Story on page 1, Sports.)

MAROONS SPEND SIX HOURS ON NEW OFFENSIVE

Abandon Huddle; 3 Men Moved Up to Varsity.

With practice already assuming the character of a midseason routine, the Maroon squad yesterday duplicated first day's work by charging through six hours of running plays. Coach Shaughnessy expressed pleasure at the squad's enthusiasm.

Three men were moved up yesterday to the first-string group. They are Barton Smith, a promising end last year until his leg was broken in the Yale game, who is now being alternated with Wally Nyquist at full back; Bob Perretz, a sophomore guard and John Rice, 220 pound tackle from Dallas, Tex., also a sophomore.

Zimmer, Smith, Berwanger and Sahlin comprised the first back field. The huddle has apparently been abandoned. Sahlin called signals aloud from the pre-shift formation.

GOPHERS WILL SCRIMMAGE.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Coach Bernie Bierman found the University of Minnesota football squad in such good condition that he declared scrimmage would be on the program either Monday or Tuesday of next week. Seventy-five players reported for the two practice sessions today.

Today, Bierman selected a temporary first team with Lund and Rennix, half backs, Levoir at quarter back Heise at mull back, Ronning and Larson at ends, Bengston and Svendsen at tackles, Bill Bevans and Bruhn at guards, and Capt. Oen at center.

ILLINI IN SCRIMMAGE.

Champaign, Ill., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—An hour and a half scrimmage during the morning drill today gave Illinois' football squad a thorough review of the new offensive which Coach Bob Zuppke introduced yesterday. In the afternoon a kicking drill was added to the scrimmage with Jack Beynon, Johnny Snook, and Less Lindberg doing the punting.

Fifty freshmen reported to Coach Weenie Wilson for practice. Among them were Cook of Springfield, Wilkaitis of Spring Valley, and Berutti of Benld, among the outstanding prep players in the state last year.

SCRIMMAGE FOR BADGERS.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Scrimmage was ordered by Coach Clarence W. Spears today for two teams of Wisconsin's most promising football players. Spears directed the offensive team in a series of line plunges. To avoid injuries, plays were stopped before the runners reached the secondary defense.

MICHIGAN SEEKS PASSER.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The search for a forward passer by University of Michigan's coaches was in full swing on South Ferry field today. Both morning and afternoon drills featured the overhead game. Each session wound up with a dummy scrimmage in which only passing plays were used. Bill Renner was used in the rôle of passer, but John Regeczi, star punter, did enough of it to indicate that Coach Harry Kipke figures on using him.

Twenty-two backs were used in a short passing drill this morning and a punting workout this afternoon. Regeczi and Heston looked specially strong as kickers, with Everhardus a close third.

BUCKEYE PLAYER HURT.

Columbus, O., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Ohio State suffered its first casualty of the year today when Tom Georgepopous, sophomore end from Cleveland, suffered a broken collar bone during a light scrimmage. He is the only Greek candidate on the Buckeye roster.

With the thermometer registering in the 90s the Buckeyes went through a light workout, many of the players donning only track suits. Several combinations were tried out during the afternoon with Cramer at quarter, Wetzel at full back, and Oliphant and Keefe getting the first string call. Twelve lettermen have returned for practice.

IRISH STUDY BLOCKING.

Notre Dame, Ind., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Blocking, the paramount fundamental in the Notre Dame system, occupied the Irish squad today. Assistant Coach Tom Conley, captain of the 1930 team, had charge of the squad of 100 in the absence of Coach Heartly Anderson. A downpour ended the drill after less than an hour's work. Conley also ordered a long drill on calisthenics. "You may think you're in condition," he said, "but long years of experience have proved the need of these exercises to toughen your muscles."

LIGHTWEIGHT.
Geneva, 0; West Chicago, 0.

Proviso heavyweights defeated York 13 to 0 in a practice football game at the Proviso yesterday. Pearson, a half back, scored for York in the second quarter and Mizen, left end, intercepted a 15 yard pass for the other touchdown in the last quarter.

LA GRANGE LOSES, 13-0.

Oak Park defeated La Grange yesterday at La Grange, 13 to 0. Grandinetti plunged two yards for the first score in the second period and in the third quarter Anderson blocked a punt and Banks fell on it over the line.

GENEVA WINS, 26-0.

IRELAND BEATS SCOTLAND.

GLASGOW, Scotland, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Ireland today defeated Scotland, 2 goals to 1, in the first international soccer game of the season.

N. U. FINDS NEW QUARTER BACK; HE'S AUGUSTSON

Northwestern's search for a quarter back to replace George Potter, who turned up ineligible, apparently ended yesterday on the second day of practice. The new signal caller will be, from all indications, Roy Augustson, a senior, who has two years of service as a reserve full back to his credit.

Augustson, who hails from Homewood, Ill., has appeared so effective in the workouts to date that his promotion to a regular job is just about a certainty. Augustson not only is a good ball carrier but can kick and pass as well.

The squad appeared in such fine physical condition that Coach Dick Hanley picked four teams yesterday for a kicking drill.

The first string lineup consisted of Leeper and Cruice, half backs; Olson, full back; Augustson, quarter back; Jens and Kostbade, ends; Riley and Heuses, tackles; Kawal and Whalen, guards, and Hajek, center. Cruice and Hajek were the only sophomores in this group.

Johnny Sabo, former assistant football and basketball coach at Illinois, has been added to the Northwestern coaching staff, it was announced yesterday. He was dropped from the Illini staff this spring in an economy move.

It is probable that Sabo will coach the Wildcats' B team, which will play games with Wheaton college, Jordon college of Menominee, Mich., and Lake Forest college.

IOWA USES SOPHOMORES.

Dick Crayne, full back, made several spectacular runs against the freshmen, while another recruit, Russ Fisher, turned in a good blocking performance.

PARDONNER BOOTS A FEW.

Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Paul Pardonner, Purdue's drop kicking quarter back, who has made 21 out of 23 attempts for points after touchdown in two seasons, engaged in a long drill today, kicking with both feet.

The coaches devoted most of the afternoon to the development of line candidates. An extended line scrimmage was ordered followed by a dummy scrimmage in which backs participated.

In the Wake of the News

SPORTS RULE BOOKS.

BASEBALL is so firmly entrenched in public opinion as our leading sport that it doubtless will be a surprise to many of its followers to know that it ranks third in annual sale of rule books and records. Purchasers of basketball code books and football annuals exceed those of the national pastime. The respective figures are 95,000 for basketball, 65,000 for football, and 63,000 for baseball.

These figures were acquired by The Wake on a recent visit to New York, where we encountered our old friend John T. Doyle, president of the American Sports Publishing company, who has guided this subsidiary of the Spalding organization for many years; in fact, most of the 40 years or more he has been with the firm.

Most of the publications supervised by Mr. Doyle are the official handbooks of such sports, authorized by the governing bodies, which receive a royalty on each guide sold in return for their official stamp. Their editor in chief, although he seldom claims the title, is meticulous in his proofreading of the copy submitted to him.

These handbooks have a style. We are familiar only with some of the football requirements, for which style in the guide is two words, foot ball, instead of the usual newspaper football. When we turned in our first copy of a review of middle western football, in which we had referred to Wolverines, Boilermakers, Wildcats, etc., to vary the phraseology, we received a kindly note saying the official guide did not recognize such nomenclature. It was Michigan, Purdue, Northwestern, etc., if we had no objections, and, of course, we could have none under the circumstances. Neither are all-American references to teams or players permitted.

In explanation of why baseball ranked third to basketball and football, Mr. Doyle agreed with our opinion, that newspaper publication of averages and data probably reduced the number of guides sold. Nearly all fans, too, know the baseball rules pretty well, while changes have been frequent of late years in the floor game and gridiron sport.

Another thing that intrigued us in the figure of 95,000 for basketball handbooks was the fact that 30,000 of this number were for women's basketball. Growth of sport for women has been an athletic development of the last decade. Mr. Doyle estimated that more than 50,000 guides of different kinds were bought by women in a year, with basketball leading, field hockey next, and the remainder scattered among baseball, soccer, intramural sports, speed ball, and field ball.

In booklets giving instruction, it was perhaps notable that 8,000 books on "How to Pitch" were sold and only 5,000 on "How to Bat."

Basketball, men's	65,000	Playground ball	10,000
Basketball, women's	30,000	Field hockey	9,000
Football	65,000	Volley ball	5,000
Baseball, Spalding	40,000	Ice hockey	4,000
Baseball, Reach	20,000	Athletic Almanac	4,000
Baseball, women	3,000	A.A.U. Records	4,000
Tennis	20,000	Intramural	4,000
Golf	10,000	Soccer	3,000
		Soccer, women	3,000
		Swimming, water polo	3,000
		N. C. A. A.	3,000

An official golf guide was not published in 1933, nor was the "Red Book" of baseball, mostly records. Both probably will be revived in 1934.

Chile Soccer Team to Play Sparta Today

BY OFFSIDE.

The Audux Italiano soccer team of Santiago, Chile, will meet Sparta, Chicago professional champion, at Sparta stadium, 21st street and Kostner avenue, this afternoon. In a preliminary game at 1:30 o'clock Wieboldt's Wonderbolts, formerly the Bricklayers, will play the Ravenswood Scots.

Isaac Aserman, goalie, is one of the stars of the Chilean team, which is on an around the world tour. The full backs, Max Fischer and Conrad Welsh, are excellent kickers and tacklers. It appears that Goalie Baer of the Sparta team is in for a busy afternoon.

There are twenty-two players on the roster of the Chilean team. They have been away from home six months and are not due back in Santiago for six more. They have played forty games in Peru, Central America, Mexico, and Cuba, winning thirty-six while losing four.

Manager Billy Alexander, in announcing the change in name for the Brickies, said that the old management will be retained, but that a number of new players will be obtained in an effort to capture the national championship, won last year by the Stix, Baer and Fuller club of St. Louis.

LOGANS TO PLAY MILLS; FLORALS FACE DAVENPORT

Valley League Champions in Chicago Today.

Games Today

Mills vs. Logan Squares, Mills stadium, [2].
Duffy Florals vs. Davenport, Shewbridge field, [2].
Colored All-Stars vs. House of David, Logan Square park, [2].

The Chicago Mills this afternoon will meet the Logan Squares in a double-header at Mills stadium, Lake street and Kilpatrick avenue.

The contests, along with the twin bill between the Duffy Florals and Davenport, Mississippi Valley league champions, feature today's schedule. The Florals meet Davenport at Shewbridge field, 74th and Aberdeen streets.

The Mills will depend on Gordon McNaughton and John [Lefty] Sullivan. McNaughton, young right hander, who was obtained by the Mills after his release from the Boston Red Sox several weeks ago, will pitch the first game, which will start at 1:30 o'clock.

Sullivan, who is nearing his 40th birthday and ready to climax another successful year in the semi-pro ranks, will oppose another veteran, Jim Vaughn, former star of the Chicago Cubs, in the second game. The Squares probably will use Malcolm Moss in the opener.

In the absence of the Logan Squares from their home park, the Colored All-Stars will use the field to play the House of David in a double header.

With the Al Cress Boosters leading in the Midwest league championship series against the Oscar F. Nelsons as a result of a 4 to 0 victory in the opening game, titular play will be suspended a week while nine other games are played today. The schedule:

Minor League All Stars at Chicago Heights.
Al Cress Boosters vs. Murray's Evanstons at Boltwood park.
Elmwoods at Niles Center.
Logan Orioles vs. Cragin Merchants at Long and Fullerton.
Tabola Boosters vs. Forest Park Merchants at Harrison and Harlem.
Berwyn A. C. vs. Zoubek's Cracker Jacks at 31st and Keeler.

New Orleans Wins, 3-0; Leads in Playoff Series

New Orleans, La., Sept. 16.—(AP)—New Orleans made the count two to one in the Southern association playoff here today as Dennis Galehouse blanked the Memphis Chicks, 3 to 0. A victory tomorrow will give New Orleans the pennant.

Iowa City, Ia., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Although football success at most of the Western conference schools has been cyclical, Michigan has been a consistent championship contender for more than 40 years, a survey by Frederick S. Beebe of the University of Iowa athletic department shows.

The record since 1892 compiled by Beebe, which reveals Michigan as the all-time conference leader, is believed to be the first complete standing ever figured.

With a percentage rating of .761, the Wolverines have won or shared the title 12 times. The Wolverines have played fewer games than most of the schools, having been out of the conference from 1912 to 1917. Since 1920, however, they have always been at or near the top, the record including seven championships in the past 13 years.

Chicago Ranks Second.

Despite consistent losses in recent years Chicago ranks second in the standing with a percentage of .592. Back in the early 1900s the Maroons, under Coach A. A. Stagg, were one of the Big Ten's most potent teams, winning undisputed championships in 1907, 1908, and 1913. Their record shows six conference titles.

Chicago has played more games than any of its rivals, a total of 226 since the conference began functioning.

Northwestern and Purdue, prominent contenders in recent years, are in the second division, having failed to make much of a showing before 1926. Northwestern shared the championship with Michigan for the first time in 1926, while the first Boilermaker title came in 1929.

Illinois football stock has been the most fluctuating on the list, the Illini having bobbed in and out of conference championship races. Since 1909 Illinois has won seven championships, but the team ranks fifth, behind Minnesota and Wisconsin. The latter has won or shared only four championships.

Iowa Has One Splurge.

Iowa's only splurge to Big Ten fame was in the early '20s under Howard Jones, when the Hawkeyes were undefeated for two successive seasons. In 1921 Iowa won the title, and shared it with Michigan the following year.

Indiana is the only Big Ten team which has not won a championship in the history of the conference.

Cardinals at Freeport for Game Today

The Chicago Cardinal football squad, which is to play a practice game at Freeport, Ill., this afternoon, numbers 34 men. They represent 27 colleges and universities. The Big Ten schools and players are Illinois with Kassel and Gordon; Indiana with Chuck Bennett; Iowa with Rogge; Northwestern with Holmer; and Ohio with Graham.

Eighteen have been with the Cardinals one season or more, the oldest in point of service being Herb Blumer, who has been with the club seven years.

Kiesling Is Heaviest.

Walt Kiesling is starting his fifth season with the Redbirds as is Kassel. Kiesling played two years with Duluth and one with Portsmouth previous to signing with the Cards, while Kassel put in three seasons with Philadelphia.

Kiesling carries the most beef, having steamed off a few pounds to get down to 235, his normal playing weight. Lou Gordon is next with 225. The featherweight of the squad is Roy Lamb, who weighs 160 pounds. Roy is also the shortest, standing only 5 feet 6 inches, as against Gordon's 6 feet 4 inches.

Open at Pittsburgh.

The five men who are new on the club but who have played professional football are: Bennett, who was with Portsmouth and Cincinnati; Joe Schein, who played with Providence last year; Herschie Martin, who put in a season with Stapleton; Chet Johnson, with Green Bay, and Otto Vokaty, who spent a season each with Cleveland and the New York Giants.

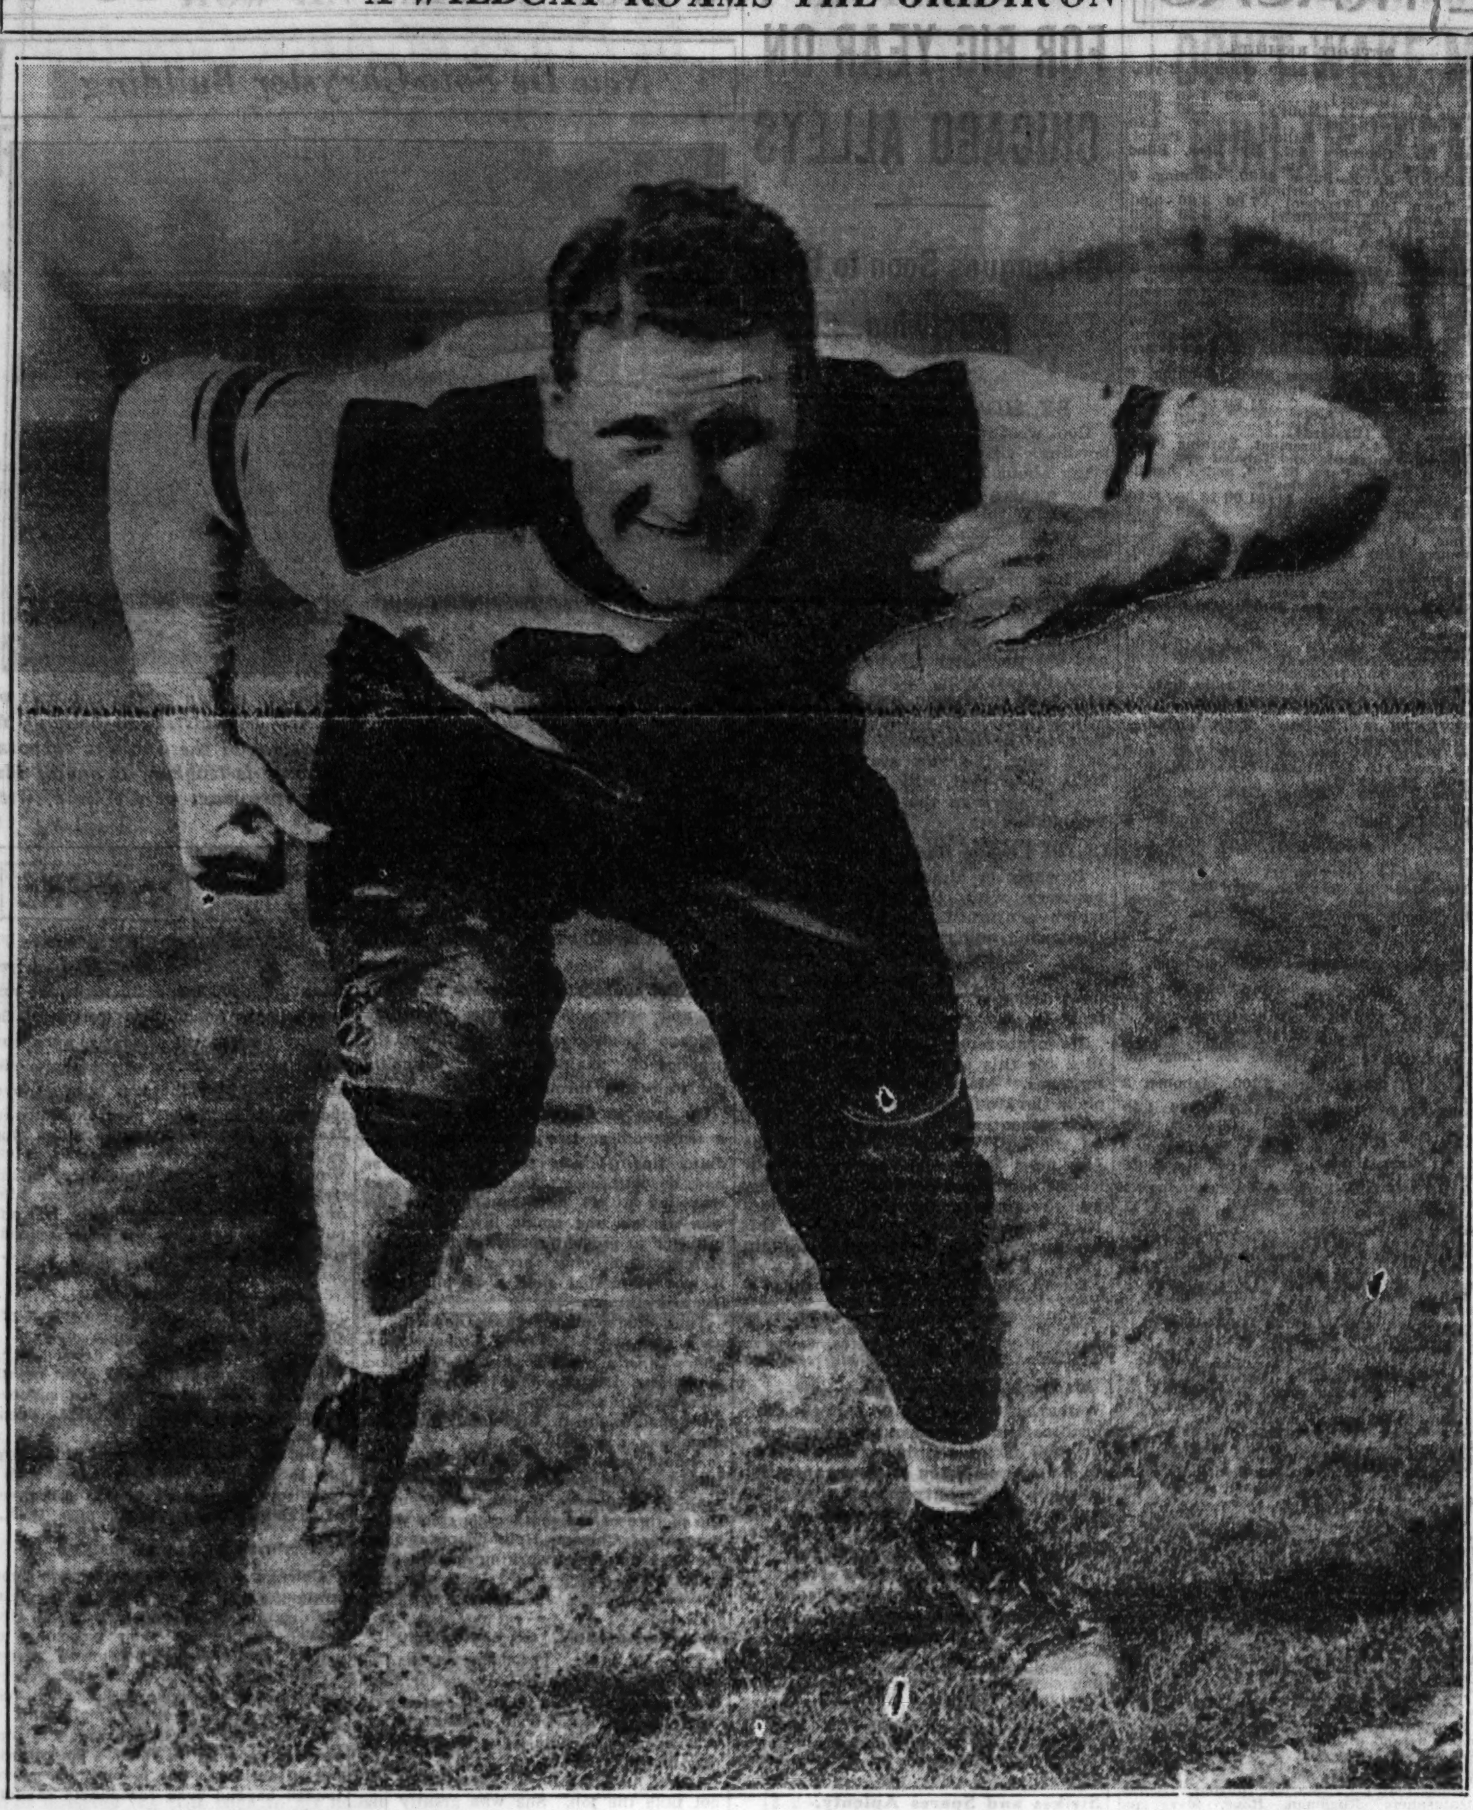
The Cardinals open the National league season at Pittsburgh, one of the new members of the circuit, Sept. 27, and will play at home for the first time Oct. 15 against the Bears.

ARMY ENTERS JUMPING TEAM IN HORSE SHOW

The United States army team will compete in the international military jumping classes at the World's Fair horse show to be held in the 124th Field Artillery armory, 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue, Oct. 21 to Oct. 29. The entry of the United States army team was announced by Secretary of War George H. Dern in a letter received at headquarters of the horse show Friday.

Secretary Dern's acceptance in behalf of the war department followed closely upon cables from the Swedish and Irish Free State governments, which also entered their famous teams. It also is announced that Gen. John J. Pershing, commander of the A. E. F., has accepted the invitation to officiate as a judge of the show.

A WILDCAT ROAMS THE GRIDIRON



How would you like to have this fellow charging at you? That's what Northwestern university's football opponents will have to put up with this fall. His name is Paul Tangora and he's a sophomore guard, built to live up the name of "Wildcat," Northwestern's nom de gridiron.

NEGRO DRIVERS RACE TODAY AT ROBY SPEEDWAY

Star colored drvers will compete in the 100 mile national championship race today at the Roby speedway, 108th street and Indianapolis boulevard. There will be three shorter races carded, with the first at 2:30 p. m.

Heading the colored pilots will be Bob Sallise, Cleveland, O., who will be defending the title he won last year.

Among those who will try to beat Sallise are Fred Wilson and Spencer Fairman of Detroit, Homer Cloud of Cleveland and Laurence Dawson, Bill James, Bill Buckner, and Paul Davis, all of Indianapolis. Chicagoans are Leonard Powell, Bill Carson, Gill Cunningham, Cliff Jackson, and Bill Walthall.

One of the supporting races will be for women drivers.

CHICAGO YACHT CLUB WILL RACE DETROIT TODAY

For the first time in four years Chicago yacht racing fans will have the opportunity to see an intercity race between the Detroit Yacht club and the Chicago Yacht club off Belmont harbor today. Races will be in the R and eagle classes.

Last year Mal Vail and Bill Faurot invaded Detroit waters with their craft and won the Gardner trophy and Gardner bowl, but as these trophies must remain in Detroit the Gardner Shadow trophy has been substituted and will be the stake.

Horse Show at Fort Sheridan to Honor Gen. Parker

The eighth annual Fort Sheridan horse show to be held Friday and Saturday at Fort Sheridan will be dedicated this year to Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commanding general of the Sixth corps area. Gen. Parker, who has done much to advance horsemanship activities in this section is leaving the Sixth corps area the latter part of this year.

The prize lists all classes from children's to jumping classes. Three and five-gaited saddle horse events also are included.

Lutheran Nines Open Title Series Today

Trinity, leader in the south division, and St. Marks, central division winner, will meet this afternoon at St. Rita field, 64th street and Claremont avenue, in the first game of a series to determine the senior champions of the Evangelical Lutheran A. A. Baseball league. In a preliminary at 1 o'clock Hope and Bethlehem [Evanston] will begin a series for the junior championship.

DETROIT MEETS CHICAGO POLISH BALL NINE TODAY

Detroit will make its third attempt in as many years to take the Polish Roman Catholic Union baseball championship from Chicago when the St. Hedwig Y. M. S. club meets Circuit 122 at Fullertion and Long avenues at 12:15 p. m. today in the annual national championship game.

Detroit has won all 15 of its starts this year. Circuit 122 has lost only 2 games in 15.

Chicago has held the title since 1930, when Circuit 47 won from Wheeling, W. Va., 5 to 2. The following year St. Adalberts traveled to Detroit to blank St. Stanislaus, 15 to 0. Last season St. Anthony handed a 5 to 2 victory to the Detroit Y. M. S. Boosters.

Today's finalists are the pick of more than 70 teams comprising nine leagues in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, New York, and Massachusetts.

Girls Try Out Tomorrow for Larrabee "Y" Five

Tryouts for the girls' basketball team sponsored by the North avenue-Larrabee Y. M. C. A. will be held tomorrow evening at 7:30 at the "Y," 1508 North Larrabee street. The tryouts will be in charge of Maxine Reinhard. Another opportunity to try out for the squad will be offered a week from Monday evening at the same time.

The other possibility also developed from a forward pass, the longest of the game. With a minute to play, Doehring, famous for his long distance tosses, drifted wide and threw 40 yards to George Corbett. Corbett was behind the Irish secondary. He juggled the ball four times, finally dropping it in the end zone.

Red Grange got away for one jaunt of 30 yards in the few minutes he played while Ronzani, Manders, and Hansen, all first year men, were effective. The Bears apparently are much stronger at tackle than they were a year ago and for the first time in two seasons they have reliable replacements at end.

Tommy Yarr and Tim Moynihan, both playing with the Chicago Cardinals, did exceptional work in the All-Stars line.

OAK BROOK FOUR AND BLACK HORSE TROOP VIE TODAY

The Black Horse polo four will play an Oak Brook quartet at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Oak Brook stadium, York and Cermak roads. The lineups:

OAK BROOK.		BLACK HORSE TR'P.
Winston, Bowers	No. 1	Lieut. Wetmore, Lieut. Kirby
Bates	No. 2	Capt. Stockton
Maj. Hunter	No. 3	Capt. Butler

BOLANDS TO PLAY IRELANDS TODAY FOR GAELIC TITLE

The Harry Boland Gaelic fifteen will meet the Young Irelands for the Gaelic football championship of the middle west at Normal Park stadium, 61st street and Racine avenue, today at 4:30 p. m. The Bolands will be after their sixth title.

The Banner Blues and Kickhams will meet in the opening game.

BERWYN PLAYS RIVERSIDE.

C. Y. O. BOXING TOURNEY FINALS SET FOR DEC. 1

Announce Districts for Preliminaries.

Finals in the third annual amateur boxing tournament of the Catholic Youth organization will be held at the Chicago Stadium Friday, Dec. 1, according to an announcement by the Rev. G. P. Scanlan, director of the C. Y. O., last night.

Three thousand applications to amateurs were mailed yesterday. It is expected more than 2,000 boys will participate in the early rounds of the tournament, which will be held in four Chicago districts.

The boxing committee of the C. Y. O. has decided against permitting former champions to compete, and in this way will crown new champions in each weight division each year.

The entry list will be closed Oct. 15 and the first round bouts will take place from Nov. 10 to Nov. 20. Quarter-finals will be staged at the C. Y. O. center about Nov. 25, and the semifinals and finals at the Stadium, Dec. 1.

NORTH DISTRICT—Fullerton avenue north to Waukegan and from the lake west to Barrington. Training quarters to be either at Loyola gymnasium or St. Ignatius gymnasium.

SOUTH DISTRICT—26th street south to city limits and from the lake west to Summit-Argo. Training quarters probably at St. Leo High school gymnasium.

Classification of boys in the tournament will be such that all boys who went to the quarter-finals last year as "novice" boxers will go into class A this year, while class A boys last year who did not win championships will be in the same division.

Police Baseball Teams Meet at Sox Park Today

The Chicago police department's championship baseball series will begin today at Comiskey park. The game starts at 2:30 p. m. and the gates open at 1 p. m.

The series will consist of the best two games out of three. Capt. Patrick Harding will head the north side nine and Capt. John Hogan will manage the south side bluecoats.

Ray Gutcher will pitch for the south side and Michael Delaney, star athlete of the traffic division, will do the hurling for the north side. Gold watches will be awarded the player making the most home runs in the series and also to the batsman with the best average.

The entire proceeds of the police games will go to the fund of widows and orphans of policemen killed in the line of duty. The concluding games of the series will be played at Comiskey park Sept. 24 and at Wrigley field Sept. 30.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—I have a remarkably roomy memory, which is cluttered with the most varied assortment of débris that is to be found anywhere outside the standard handy compendiums of 1,001 useless facts. Among other old trunks, fish poles, curly handled mashies, and broken legged chairs in this attic of mine is a distinct recollection of the pious, wounded, and deserving mood in which the members of the prize fight profession, at that time an outlaw crowd in all but a few narrow jurisdictions, appealed to the people and the legislatures within a year or two after the war for permission to follow their trade openly and with the sanction of the law.

JIMMY WALKER.

Prize fighting, after several paroles and reversions to its felonious habits, had been forbidden in the city of New York and throughout the state with the exception of a few small cities where local politicians permitted favored promoters to conduct bouts. From the proceeds of these fights they, the politicians, naturally received their share of graft. There was bootleg fighting in Chicago, but it was a petty business, conducted in hideaways and subject to raids and other inconveniences.

New Orleans and Milwaukee Were Fight Centers.

In California the status of the business was not uniform. Some communities tolerated short fights. Others forbade the ennobling sport entirely and the campaign to emancipate pugilism was seriously embarrassed for a time, when there occurred an outrage upon some young women whose assailants, being caught and lynched, were identified with the prize-fight profession.

New Orleans and Milwaukee were the centers of pugilism. Fights were allowed also in Minneapolis and St. Paul and in Philadelphia. In Philadelphia tolerance was limited to six rounds, without decisions, and the game was not profitable.

Jimmy Walker, then a member of the New York legislature, led the boys back from their exile. He was a prize fight fan, himself. Before he could put his law through the New York legislature, however, New Jersey had beaten him to the punch with an 8 round, no decision law. This limit was raised by degrees to 10 and 12 and, finally, I believe, to 15 rounds with decisions.

In New York the movement enlisted the support of a lot of publicity loving best people who liked to read of themselves as dashing sportsmen. One such group formed a pretentious sporting club on paper and went as far as to dig a hole for the foundations of their clubhouse. The club promotion racket was in its infancy just then. This one went broke after paying large sums to Georges Carpentier for small favors, mostly social, which served to ballyhoo the club promotion and attract dashing sportsmen to the subscription lists. Tex Rickard then took over Carpentier and used him to make a new fortune.

On the day the club went broke and the promoter left for Europe, Mr. Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, one of the most dashing of the member sportsmen, took charge of the office. He was vexed. He was very vexed when an ignoramus from the press asked him, "But, Mr. Borglum, are you a prize fight promoter?"

"No, you fool," Mr. Borglum said. "Everybody knows I'm a sculptor."

"Well, in that case," said the reporter, with a trace of anger, "why the hell don't you sculp?"

Mr. Borglum soon returned to his sculping and no more was heard of the great sporting club.

However, the big names which had been subscribed to the movement helped to obtain another pardon for the rogue of sports. Prize fighting was restored to citizenship and, after a discreet and mannerly year, the boys whipped out their chisels and returned to normalcy. There was larceny in the high places as well as in the slums of pugilism. They had whined and pleaded for a liberal law. They were given a 15 round limit and decisions, but within a few years they were refusing to fight 15 rounds and nowadays only a few bouts, involving championships, are of that length.

The Boys Can't Stand Prosperity.

Promoters, using stockholders' money, including the savings of small investors, built luxurious temples to pugilism in New York, Chicago, Detroit, Boston, and other cities. The prize fight racket, with no investment and no responsibility, soon was spoiled and, forgetting the smelly dinginess of its natural habitat, began to find fault and show temperament.

Fighters and managers who weren't worth 50 cents an hour in any business began to make fantastic demands and to sulk and pout over small grievances. The best fighters fought less and less often for fear of being licked. There was considerable fakery and slugging and intimidation of referees, but that was to be expected. The result of the spoiling of the boys with luxury and high pay may be observed now.

Nowadays the heavyweight champion fights once a year and invariably selects for his opponent in that annual fight some big lump who seems least likely to give him inconvenience, ignoring the current so-called logical contender. The heavyweight title became a political prize within the gift of the New York commission, a political body.

How Come? Lightweights Still Fight.

The other championships, with the exception of the lightweight, which somehow has remained competitive, for years have gone by default or passed into the hands of fakers or nonfighting champions. At the present time, for the first time in several years, the featherweight, welterweight, and middleweight titles are in able hands, but upon winning these titles the new owners promptly went into virtual retirement to await sufficient large inducements to fight sufficiently weak opponents.

The big arenas are dark most of the time or would be if the owners relied on the fighters to fill them.

In the natural course of events the prize fight racket will be outlawed again. It has always been that way and the racket does not change. Then, after a spell, it will come around again with its ragged cap on its hand, twitching its dried apple ears and snuffling through its crumpled nose to plead for another chance and promise everything.

I would not advocate the repeal of the prize fight laws. But inasmuch as the boys do not seem to wish to fight any more it could be argued that they have no further use for their laws.

A Revolutionary New Car YOU SHOULD CONSIDER

The new Air-cooled FRANKLIN Airman

BEAUTY STREAMLINING—style leader of its class

PRESSURE AIR-COOLING—for trouble-free motoring

AIRPLANE ENGINE—performance of the skies

SUPERCHARGER—no more starved cylinders

● Rebelling against the failures caused by water-cooling trouble, air pilots long ago demanded air-cooled engines for their planes. Many motorists all over the world are rebelling against the totally unnecessary water and cooling machinery in the ordinary car.

In answer, Franklin announces a new air-cooled Airman which challenges the interest of every American considering the purchase of a car. This car is powered with a real supercharged airplane engine. Step on the gas and you realize for the first time what modern power should be like.

Styled in modern dress that correctly streamlines the entire car, appointed in rich cloths and fitments, the car gives a feeling of unobtrusive luxury not obtainable in any other car. Exclusive full-elliptic springs provide the easiest ride known—you get out at the end of a full day's run as fresh as when you started.

Imagine the luxury of never having to worry about leaking, boiling or freezing radiators. Imagine yourself behind the supercharged engine, surrounded with every luxury in motor cars. Then call for a trial of one of these most modern cars.

HEAVY DEMAND FOR YEARLINGS BY GALLANT FOX

Average Price $4,820 at Saratoga Sales.

BY FRENCH LANE.

If average prices at the Saratoga auctions mean anything, then the sons and daughters of Gallant Fox, American champion in 1930, are in greatest demand among the racing people of America this year.

Two sons and three daughters of Gallant Fox went under the hammer at Saratoga and they brought a total of $24,100, an average of $4,820, which was the high average for the produce of any one sire at the sales.

Yet in total money for the produce of one sire at the auctions Sir Gallahad III., daddy of Gallant Fox, was the leader. Nine sons and six daughters of this noted stallion were sold for a total of $51,950, but the average price for them was $3,463.

Both at Hancock Farm.

Sir Gallahad III. and Gallant Fox are both standing at Arthur B. Hancock's Claiborne stud near Paris, Ky. Gallant Fox is owned by William Woodward, New York banker, who maintains the extensive Belair stud in Maryland. Sir Gallahad III. is owned by Mr. Hancock and associates, one of whom is Mr. Woodward.

According to statistics compiled by Thomas B. Cromwell, publisher of the Blood Horse, a journal devoted to affairs of the turf, 117 stallions were represented in the Saratoga sales this year. Last year there were 132 and the year before 129.

The leaders this year, according to the best average prices, were.

Sire.	Average.	No. sold.
Gallant Fox	$4,820	5
Twink	4,167	3
Apprehension	4,000	1
Mad Hatter	3,617	3
Chicle	3,550	4
Sir Gallahad III	3,463	15
Man o' War	3,000	2
John P. Grier	2,967	12
Pompey	2,590	15

Sire.	Average.	No. sold.
Sir Gallahad III	$51,950	15
Pompey	38,850	15
John P. Grier	35,600	12
Sun Briar	19,650	8

Many times the Saratoga sales are not a true barometer of which is the outstanding sire in the country. The reason for this is that the owner of the sire usually keeps the best yearlings each year, to be raced in his own silks, and sends the undesirables to the sales.

Bradley Keeps Good Ones.

Missing from the list of leaders this year are such noted producers as Blue Larkspur, Bubbling Over, and Black Servant. The best sons and daughters of these sires will be carrying the green jacket of Col. Edward R. Bradley next season, because Col. Bradley is the owner of the sires and markets but few yearlings.

The same is true of the Whitneys, who keep the best youngsters bred on their farms for their own racing stables. Joseph E. Widener does the same thing, and Mrs. John Hertz reserved all the better looking Reigh Counts to sport her yellow and black jacket next season.

Brookmeade stable	$34,110
Calumet stable [Warren Wright]	30,600
H. Giddings	24,700
Mrs. John Hay Whitney	19,000
Sagamore stable	21,600

One of the high priced yearlings sold, and which was purchased by Mr. Wright, was a son of Gallant Fox out of Martha Snow.

Major Loses Last Horse in Claiming Race

E. E. Major for the first time in many years found himself an owner without any horses at Lincoln fields yesterday. When L. L. Walker claimed Bill Orange from Major on Friday he took away the only horse Major possessed. Only a few seasons back Major had 20 or more in his barn.

Cloudet, from Audley farm in Virginia, and Mrs. Let, owned by L. D. Odham of Chicago, won the second and third races at Lincoln fields yesterday and completed a daily double which paid $68.02.

Trainer Clyde Van Dusen is pointing the sensational filly Esseff for the Marquette handicap, which will be the feature race on the closing day of the Lincoln fields season next Saturday.

Jockey L. Ruder was in his best form yesterday, winning on Mrs. Let in the third race and on La Salle in the fourth.

Fred A. Burton, owner of Wise Daughter and the others in the Everglade stable, was at Lincoln fields during the afternoon. Singing Wood's victory in the Futurity didn't excite him for his great filly, Wise Daughter, gave Singing Wood a handy beating over a fast track at Saratoga last month.

Mose Goldblatt has wired track Supt. Tom Young that he will have the Western division of the C. V. Whitney stable at Washington park tomorrow. He may van some of the horses over to Lincoln fields to fill engagements during the week. His horses were in fine fettle and won many races at Coney Island.

JESSE OWENS WINS 2 EVENTS IN CANADIAN MEET

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Jesse Owens, Cleveland Negro schoolboy sprinter, won two of the three events he competed in today in the Hamilton Olympic club's track and field meet.

He captured the 100 yard dash in 9.9, coming from behind at 75 yards to edge out Bert Pearson, Canadian sprint champion, at the tape, but lost to Pearson by two yards in a 220 run in 22.1. Owens won the broad jump with a leap of 24 feet 7¾ inches.

Evergold Wins Over No More in Crete Dash

also hung on like a bulldog. Yet Evergold would not stop running. He galloped all the faster in the late stages, and was slowly drawing away when it ended.

Early Pace Too Fast.

The first quarter had been run in :24 2-5, and the half mile in :49 3-5. This fast pace was cut out by Princess Camelia and Pancho Lopez. It was too fast for a horse to carry such speed over a distance. That was the reason both dropped out of the money.

The big disappointment in the race was Miss Bunting, a daughter of Bunting, which in many previous starts had demonstrated she liked this sort of going. Yet she couldn't get up a gallop and finished last in the nine horse field.

Evergold is one of the largest horses in training. He is a son of Ladkin-Golden Lassie, and, while showing great bursts of speed at times, has never been able to accomplish what was expected of him in muddy or heavy going. His stable companion, Minton, has never been able to show exceptional speed except over a lightning fast track, although his breeding lines indicate he should revel in the mud.

No Excuses for No More.

No More had no excuses to offer. He was in a contending position most of the way and saved ground by hugging the rail entering the stretch. Then he weakened before the determined drive of Evergold. No More has been one of the most consistent winners of sprint stake races around Chicago this year, but apparently can't match strides with Evergold when the track is muddy.

WATROUS, IN COMA 40 DAYS, TO COME HOME TONIGHT

Lieut. Gordon Watrous, former University of Chicago polo player, who was injured in a polo game at Green Bay, Wis., two months ago, will be brought home from Green Bay tonight, according to his brother, George Watrous, a member of the Maroon football squad.

Lieut. Watrous, sustained a fractured skull which was followed by hemorrhage. He was unconscious for forty days. He recovered consciousness ten days ago and has improved sufficiently to be moved, according to his brother.

IRVING PARK LUTHERAN TEAM WINS GOLF MEET

The Irving Park Lutheran church four man team won the Big Oaks trophy for 18 holes with a low gross total of 314, at Big Oaks Country club yesterday. O. Sandquist with a gross score of 75 led the winning team.

Second place went to the Ebenezar Lutheran church with T. Johnson having a score of 84. A. Ricketts with an 84 was low man on the third place Edgewater Presbyterian team.

MATCH RACE TO HEAD EVANSTON RACE CARD TODAY

A three car match race for the fastest racers at the track will top the program of auto racing today at the Evanston Motor speedway, Lincoln and Devon avenues. Four events will be held, with the first starting at 2:30 p. m.

The three winners in the regular events will compete in the match race. Orl Anderson, Emil Andres, Jimmy Schneider, Verne Franke and Gordon Chard are among the entrants.

BOWLERS READY FOR BIG YEAR ON CHICAGO ALLEYS

All Leagues Soon to Be in Full Swing.

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

Cool weather is turning thoughts to bowling. Officers of leagues are scurrying about lining up their men and alley owners are preparing to receive them. Within a week nearly every league in Chicago will be in operation.

While preparations are being made for a busy season, many bowlers are taking loosening up exercises to determine if they can pick off spares and get their strike balls working as they did last year. Alley owners predict that more men and women will seek recreation by bowling than at any time in the last two years and embark upon the new season under a NRA code that will put more persons to work in the various bowling establishments.

Classic League Busy.

Bowling is almost a year around business with the Classic league, which continued competition late in the spring and resumed work after a short vacation. This organization of Chicago's leading strike getters who bowl twice a week was the first to start the ten pin sport.

Its next series of games is scheduled for this evening, with five more matches. Math Luecker, secretary, picks the Moulding Brownell-Edelweiss engagement at the Harding alleys to be the best of the skirmishes. The Moulding Brownells relinquished the league lead to Edelweiss Wednesday and are making no secret of the fact they intend to get back on top this evening. The other matches tonight are:

Lorenz Knitting vs. Old Manhattan at Harry Kaad's; Baby Ruth Candy vs. Olive Can at Madison-Kedzie; A. J. Cermaks vs. Arlington Bowlers' Aid at Peterson's 35th street alleys, and Budweiser vs. Stevenson Heating at Stevenson and Schalk recreation.

Randolph League Ready.

Charles Collier, captain of the Mineralites and long an outstanding bowler, will be at the helm of the Randolph league when that organization launches its twenty-second annual assault on the pins Thursday at the Randolph alleys. Other officers are S. J. Owens, first vice president; Jule V. Leilinger, second vice president; Peter P. Howley, treasurer, and Al Lea, sergeant at arms.

Thursday's pairings will be:

First squad, 7 p. m.—Live Stock Press vs. Mineralites; Birk Brothers vs. Wagner; Burlington Route vs. Ault & Weborg; Curtis Buy Jiminy vs. Sunkist Pies.

Second squad, 9 p. m.—Greyhound Lines vs. Anheuser-Busch; Bowlers' Journal vs. Chuckles Bowl; Mell-O Ice Creams vs. Von Thenin Cafe; Litzingers vs. Noble & Peterson.

Strikes and Spares Aplenty.

J. C. Brown, captain of the Moulding Brownells, claims the first 300 game of the season. He's polishing off the pins at a 205 clip in the Classic league. . . . Three game totals of 715 are no every day occurrence—just ask R. Johnson, who would not mind repeating that performance this week in the Classic.

High scores for the week: J. Wilman, 662; S. Watson, 660; A. Carlson, 649, and L. Bunning, 648, of the Classic league. . . August [Hickey] Bronder, 637, and Wally Greifelt, 600, in the Schuenemann Logan Square league, which opened its seventeenth annual barrage.

Birks Undefeated.

The job of stopping the unbeaten Birk Brothers' quintet is the assignment for Ernie Schanz's third place Idle Hour team as the North End Traveling league goes into its third week tomorrow night. They will meet at the Idle Hour alleys. Topping the individual averages are Miller, 210; Krisch, 206; Buschold, 205; Schuster, 202; Gratz, 201; Kraft, 201; Traubinik, 201, and Pecaro, 200.

Tomorrow's North End schedule:

Edelweiss vs. Fox De Luxe at Kaadland.
Harry Kaads vs. Michelob at North Town.
P. J. Westers at Gold Coast.
Birk Brothers at Idle Hour.

Bigger and Better.

George Apfel, president of the Chicago Rapid Transit Company league, was jubilant when the "L" season opened Thursday. Eighteen teams went into action, an increase of eight over last year, and a big crowd was on hand to give them a sendoff. . . . The Wabash Recreation alleys also were the scene of grand openings of the 16 team Chicago Traffic Club league and the Chicago Rotary Club league, with 18 squads occupying the drives.

Eight teams of the Procter & Gamble league will start their bombardment Tuesday, Sept. 26, at Schuenemann's Logan Square alleys. It will be a lively session, asserts John Colbeck, president.

Twelve leagues are scheduled to open this week and thus keep the Harding Majors company at the Harding alleys. Opening competition in the Harding Major league was featured by the three victories of the Harding Billiards and the 214 average hung up by Carol Hoag of Patsy's Grills. Eddie Hermann, Frank Andrews, and Sam Hoffman all averaged more than 200, while Hoffman registered high game of 264.

South Side Leagues.

Another fast league billed for action this week is the 18 team Bruck Major, which will open Wednesday. Bud Wright, with a 225 average, was last season's individual champion, while the Kruse Undertakers were the winning team, members of which were J. Garvey, L. Sadjak, H. Swanson, H. Klugfe, and A. Plunge. . . Bruck Women's league will get under way tomorrow, with Bee Hochstater again expected to be the best pin getter.

The Junior league, which bowls on Wednesday, was the first to start at the Woodlawn Recreation. Tomorrow the Major league, one of the south side's best, will get under way, and on Tuesday the women will start the ball rolling. The champion T. J. Courtneys will attempt to repeat in the Major league with a lineup of Howard Darling, Burt Plant, S. Bernhardt, W. Cooksey, and J. Lenzen if the latter can find time. Eli Marcich's 212 average won last year's individual title.

At Louis P. Petersen's alleys forty-eight five man teams will begin the Metropolitan league season Tuesday and Wednesday.

New De Soto-Chrysler Building

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

INVESTIGATION NEEDED.

Ames, Ia., Sept. 10.—I would suggest that you make some endeavor to check up and overcome the police racket in Chicago Heights, where they follow the practice of "shaking down" visitors to the Fair and through travelers.

On July 25 I was "shook down" by a traffic officer two miles from the Indiana line. I was traveling alone, so had no witnesses. He claimed I was traveling at 45 miles an hour, which was against the traffic law. However, in order to prevent returning to Chicago Heights and going through the trouble it was suggested that a $5 bill would fix everything.

That was a plain "shake down" and as I was traveling from Chicago east, and was in a hurry I paid it. This was a mistake, I admit, but I did not want to return to Chicago Heights, as I had an appointment in Cleveland that evening.

Should you want to go further into this I would be able to identify the man by a picture if you could submit the picture of the motorcycle cops working out of Chicago Heights, or at least the ones that were working on that date.

GARAGES LACK SERVICE.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—Today I had a telephone call from a lady visitor from Michigan. She had a dead battery in her car and wanted it picked up and charged so she could leave in the morning for home.

I told her that I was alone and could not take the job. She was greatly disappointed that she had called so many garages and could not find one to give her any service.

Dear visitors, the garage men are more than willing and glad to give you service and help you out, but if you knew the predicament of their business you can't be a bit surprised.

They can't afford to keep any extra men to give you or anybody else service anywhere and at any time because their garages are empty and it is nobody but the people's own fault, the fault of our mayor and corporation counsel.

D. R. GARAGE MAN.

WATCH YOUR REFLEXES.

Jemez Canyon, N. M., Sept. 9.—THE TRIBUNE, which is delivered way out here in the mountains, recently contained a report of an all too common automobile fatality at a railroad crossing. The engineer mentioned that the driver of the car was trying to beat the train to the crossing.

It reminds me of a phenomenon when driving along the desert roads at night. The headlights illuminate the shapes of rabbits, standing as if frozen beside the road. They will stand still until the car is close enough for them to jump in front of the machine to be killed. Ground squirrels do the same thing—and perhaps that's what humans are doing.

Why? Here's an explanation. The motor nerves under tension act suddenly, independent of the sensory nerves, which include what we call will power. This reflex is little understood; if it were, there would be fewer crossing accidents.

VINCENT V. COLBY.

INADEQUATE TAXI LIGHTS.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—I would like to call your attention to the type of lights on some taxicabs in Chicago. The lights are no more than enlarged parking lamps and with the emblem or design on them, some of the cabs cannot be seen at a distance of thirty to forty feet and they are a hazard to night driving.

DUSTY WISCONSIN ROAD.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—We have driven many miles on Wisconsin highways and have always found them worthy of the highest praise; consequently were surprised at the condition of the approaches at both ends of the long viaduct over the tracks on No. 41 near the Milwaukee end. Clouds of white stone dust make it almost necessary to close the windows of the car when there is any traffic at all on it. If it were oiled or even sprinkled occasionally it would put it on a par with the other splendid roads in Wisconsin.

J.

1932 LICENSE.

Lombard, Ill., Sept. 14.—How is it possible for some automobile drivers to flaunt law and justice by driving a car with 1932 license plates for eight months after the time when they are supposed to have obtained their 1933 license plates?

This question was brought quite forcibly to my mind recently when such a car drove up and parked at the corner of Crawford and North avenues.

Q. X.

OVERLOADED BUSES.

Chicago, Sept. 12.—The Chicago buses, antiquated as they are, are a veritable disgrace to transportation, and, when loaded far beyond their passenger capacity could easily become a menace to life. The Fifth Avenue Coach company buses in New York, which have a conductor as well as motorman, do not stop for further passengers once seating capacity is filled. The blowing out of a tire on one of our buses, when loaded beyond even reasonable capacity, might result seriously.

BOTH HANDS ARE NEEDED TO DRIVE AUTO IN SAFETY

BY HAL FOUST.

Automobile manufacturers with each year's new models have reduced the duties and effort of driving, but the motor car is still a vehicle demanding more personal attention than the old family mare, which would find her way home with the reins wrapped around the whip socket.

"The cars have become so easy to control," said Sidney J. Williams of the National Safety council, "that there are too many who neglect to use both hands to steer. The fellow who rides with an arm around a girl is a serious offender in this respect, but he is not the only offender. There are many who drive down the boulevards with a hand holding a cigaret or cigar hanging out of a window.

Two Hands Needed.

"Today's automobile, traveling over smooth pavement without turns, can be held to its course with the tips of two fingers and a thumb. But for the emergency—a blown tire or the quick turn or stop to avoid an accident—two firm hands on the wheels are demanded.

"Most certainly in city traffic a driver should use both hands on the wheel. It's necessary for his own safety and for the safety of others. He must be prepared for the unexpected. He must be ready to dodge or to stop on a moment's notice. The time lost by the one hand driver in recovering a firm grip on the wheel may be fatal.

"It probably would not be reasonable to try to legislate motorists into the use of both hands. But car owners should be warned that in the event of an accident a factor in determining liability would be whether two hands were used in the driving."

Easier to Pull than Push.

Two hands on the wheel are more than twice as effective as one, for physiological and mechanical reasons. It is easier to pull on the wheel than it is to push. In using the right hand only on the rim to the right of the steering post a push is necessary to turn left.

Motor clubs have occasionally made specific recommendations for the positions of the hands on the wheel. Mr. Williams, who is director of public safety for the National Safety council, believes that each driver can select the position most suited to his comfort and that the position properly is changed frequently so as to relieve fatigue.

"As long as both hands are on the wheel," he concluded the interview, "the driver should be able to meet the emergencies that are always arising. Motorists should be warned that the automobile demands all of the driver's faculties to operate it with safety; a car is not like a docile buggy horse."

NEWS AND VIEWS

A new administration building for the De Soto and Chrysler divisions of the Chrysler corporation is under construction in Detroit as the first major building project to be undertaken by private industry in the motor city under the industrial recovery act.

The structure will be two stories high and 501 feet long, with a display salon and reception rooms as well as executive offices. The cost is estimated at $350,000. With its completion, about Dec. 15, more space for manufacturing will be available in the automobile factories now housing the executive offices. . . .

The new building will be modern in architectural design. Plate glass will extend seventeen feet from the floor. Stainless steel will be used in moldings and parts of the outer walls. The entire building will be air conditioned.

Elmer H. Benz, president of the Chicago Service Stations Operators' association, reports an increase of more than 30 per cent in the business of member filling stations for the current summer as compared with the same period last year. He attributes the gain almost entirely to the influx of World's Fair visitors.

"Our records show that August was a better business month than July and July exceeded June," said Mr. Benz. "It is reasonable to expect that September and October will show even greater gains by comparison with the same months last year than the three preceding months."

O. A. Ohland has been named district manager in Chicago for the Continental Automobile company. Henry Krohn, vice president in charge of sales, said the appointment is part of the company's development of a national distribution organization. In the last two months, according to Mr. Krohn, an average of three dealers a day has been added to this organization.

Approximately 900 sales representatives of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company will arrive in Chicago today en route to Akron, O., for the rubber company's homecoming, according to F. W. McConky Jr., manager of Goodyear's Chicago territory.

The tire men, representing every state and section of the United States, will spend the day at A Century of Progress before going on to the parent company's general offices in Akron. The homecoming, which is under the direction of R. S. Wilson, Goodyear sales manager, is the first meeting of its kind sponsored by the rubber company since 1928 and is a direct reflection of a general improvement in the tire business which has been evidenced during the last few months.

"Business in general throughout the country continues good, with many places far above expectations," H. J. Klingler, vice president and general sales manager of Chevrolet, said last week. "In Chicago there is an unusually optimistic attitude, with business records to warrant the same.

"In the central west states the flood tide of sales continues. Wisconsin shows increases. In Davenport, Ia., our business has doubled over last year and in Des Moines, Ia., a dealer is 150 per cent over his August, 1932, sales."

Dual ratio makes it possible for an Auburn salon model automobile to be driven from Los Angeles to New York on practically no more engine revolutions than would be required to drive any other car from Los Angeles to St. Louis, according to W. H. Beal, president of Auburn.

"Dual ratio in low affords unusually fast acceleration when desired, and relieves the engine of strain and permits greater speed on steep grades," said Mr. Beal. "High ratio, used on level or rolling streets and highways or under a majority of all driving conditions, reduces engine revolutions one-third at no sacrifice in car speed. This saving of one-third in engine revolutions means that the Auburn power plant, in any given distance, makes only about two-thirds as many revolutions as the engine in any other car while covering the same distance."

Ravisloe Country club yesterday held its fifteenth annual Round Up, most of the members and guests playing thirty-six holes. Members did the bulk of the low shooting over the long route, A. M. Loeb leading with 84—83—167. Herbie Fried and C. S. Lederer tied at 171; Jim Archer, unattached, had 173, and Jim McAlvin of Kildeer, 175.

The low net winners for the double round were Herbert Levy, Idlewild, 185—40—145, and Chester Hamilton, Beverly, 181—32—149.

H. A. Loeb Jr. of Lake Shore had 37—37—74 to win first gross at eighteen holes, George Newman of Northmoor took second with 37—40—77, and Fred A. Gariepy of Edgewood, formerly champion of the Chicago Bar association, was third with 38—41—79.

Low net prizes for 18 holes went to S. J. Rothschild, Idlewild, 98—30—68, and Robert Leopold, Ravisloe, 94—22—72.

Members of the low net foursome with a score of 640 for 36 holes were C. S. Lederer, Ravisloe, 171—16—155; A. H. Loeb, Ravisloe, 167—4—163; W. M. Heymann, Ravisloe, 189—24—165, and H. D. Fried, Ravisloe, 171—14—157.

CAMERON'S 148 LEADS FIELD IN EVANSTON GOLF

Shooting consistent rounds of 74—74—148, R. D. Cameron, a member, topped the field in the annual golf rodeo at Evanston Golf club yesterday. H. Elton Pease captured second prize with 80—78—158; Leon Kranz, formerly golf coach, was third with 77—84—161, and J. A. Anderson Jr., fourth, with 79—84—163.

Low net winners in the first flight were: Don Heinly, 164—14—150; H. J. Combs, 170—20—150; M. J. Ward, 171—20—151, and F. A. Brown, 175—24—151.

Winners in the third flight were: C. J. Martin, 96—95—191, gross, and M. E. Guthrie, 210—52—158, net.

The low foursome was composed of Figge, 176—28—148; Cameron, 148—8—140; F. A. Brown, 175—24—151, and Anderson, 163—8—155. Their total was 594.

JOHNNY LEHMAN WINS GLEN VIEW TWA DAYS GOLF

Shoots 76 to Take Low Gross Trophy.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

The Glen View club compressed its traditional Twa Days into a single afternoon yesterday, 160 golfers faring forth in quest of such time honored trophies as the Auchtermuchty, the Cairngorm, and the Laigh and Lang.

John Lehman of Olympia Fields took the latter trophy, emblematic of low gross, by shooting a 76, one stroke better than the score of Jesse Sweetser, veteran international player.

The Auchtermuchty trophy, awarded for low net, went to Hubert Howard, who turned in a card of 82—11—71. M. C. Meigs was close behind, winning the Ben Mac Dhui trophy with 84—10—74.

296 Wins Low Net.

While a band of Scottish pipers made lively music, C. P. Cobb, H. Bartholomay, Anthony Haines, and Hubert Howard marched off the last green to claim the "Fearsome Foursome" prize, which went to the foursome with the lowest net score. Their cards totaled 296.

The "Feckful Foursome" trophy, awarded to the players with the lowest best ball score, was taken by the quartet composed of John Lehman, Paul Curtis, W. A. Callison, and Alan Howard. Their best ball score was 70.

The prize list follows:

MORNING.
[Nine Holes.]

Tam O'Shanter Trophies [low net first nine]—Cairngorm, J. E. Warner, 41—7—34; Balgonie, Ernest Heitkamp, 42—6—36; Skelmorlie, Anthony Haines, 40—4—36.

Rob Roy Trophies [low net second nine]—Auchterarder, F. J. Hoffman, 42—7—35; Auld Licht, Cameron Eddy, 39—4—35; Gillie, A. D. Watson, 43—8—35.

AFTERNOON.
[18 Holes.]

Twa Days' Trophies [low net]—Auchtermuchty, Hubert Howard, 82—11—71; Ben Mac Dhui, M. C. Meigs, 84—10—74; Bannockburn, Ben Cooper, 91—17—74; Drumtochty, David Fall, 80—6—74; Ecclefechan, E. P. Cobb 83—8—75; Foggylone, H. Bartholomay, 79—4—75.

Laigh and Lang Trophy [low gross]—John Lehman, 38—38—76.

Hubert Howard, Indian Hill	82	11	71
B. R. Cooper	91	17	74
M. C. Meigs	84	10	74

HOW AN EXPERT GETS OUT OF TRAP

the greatest drive of the tournament off the 29th tee, hooking his ball around the trees to the corner of the green, out of sight and 315 yards away. It was the first and only time during the big show that the 29th had been driven. Dunlap was short with his second, and it appeared that if Marston could sink his putt or even run it up, he would win the hole and be only five down with seven still to go. He putted eight feet past the cup, however, and wound up with a par 4, when he missed coming back.

After sharing the first two holes of the morning round with Marston, Dunlap let the gallery know his intentions of bringing the title back to his home club—Pomonok of Flushing, N. Y.—by taking the next four, two of them with birdies. His third shot to the 562 yard third hole was a foot from the cup. He took the fourth when Marston journeyed through the rough on route to the green, and the fifth when an 18 foot putt for a deuce around a half stymie.

Dunlap Goes Four Up.

A par 5 was sufficient to give Dunlap the sixth and send him four up. Marston won the seventh, where Dunlap had his only three putt green of the day, and took the eighth with a birdie from 12 feet. Marston was three down after the ninth, however, going wide of the green with his second shot. Dunlap was four up after the 10th, halved the 11th, and then came through with his near ace to take the 12th. Max was in trouble at the 13th, bunkering his drive and dubbing his second shot. They halved the 14th and Dunlap went seven up at the 15th with his fourth birdie of the morning, on an eight foot downhill putt.

They halved the remaining three holes of the round, Dunlap going to luncheon seven up on the former title-holder. It appeared early in the afternoon battle that the match would become a rout, when Marston overshot the 19th green to be eight down. He halved the next two, but lost the 22d when he missed a five foot putt, and he was nine down, with fourteen to go.

Max Bags Two Birdies.

Marston then rallied to trim Dunlap's lead by two holes, taking the 23d and 24th with birdies. He sank a seven foot putt on the former and won the 28th with a half stymie, Dunlap knocking his ball into the cup. Marston was then seven down. He halved the 25th, and too, the 26th with a par, Dunlap's two foot putt for a half bounding out of the cup. That was the last hole Marston was able to win.

The hole by hole description follows:

First hole [404 yards, par 4]—Dunlap hit two fine shots, the second to within 3 feet of the pin, and was down in 2 for his par. Marston's drive was only half hit, but bounced out of the rough into the fairway. He pulled his second shot with a No. 2 iron, the ball going 30 yards over the left corner of the green. He chipped back to within 12 feet and sank the putt for a half. Dunlap, 4; Marston, 4; match even.

Second hole [176 yards, par 3]—Dunlap drove 16 feet from the pin, while Marston's tee shot was 25 feet away. Each took two putts for a half. Dunlap, 3; Marston, 3; match even.

Third hole [562 yards, par 5]—Marston drove into a trap and his brassie shot from there turned up in the rough. A spade to the green left him with two putts. Dunlap was straight with both of his first two shots, and his third fell a foot and a half from the pin for a birdie. Dunlap, 4; Marston, 5; Dunlap, 1 up.

Fourth hole [428 yards, par 4]—Dunlap sent his drive into the rough at the left, but his second was 30 feet from the pin, and he putted dead for a par. Marston drove a trap at the right, and played his recovery sidewise into the fairway. His third wound up in the left corner of the green and he needed two to get down. Dunlap, 4; Marston, 5; Dunlap, 2 up.

Fifth hole [134 yards, par 3]—Both were on with their drives. Marston laid Dunlap a half stymie with his first putt, only to have him curl one around it from 18 feet for a deuce. Dunlap, 2; Marston, 3; Dunlap, 3 up.

Sixth hole [594 yards, par 5]—Marston was trapped at the left with his drive and was short coming out. A full wood brought him to the edge of the green, but he took three from there. Dunlap's brassie shot landed in front of the green, and he pitched to 15 feet for two putts. Dunlap, 5; Marston, 6; Dunlap, 4 up.

Seventh hole [369 yards, par 4]—Marston drove 200 yards, and a spade left him 25 feet from the pin for two putts. Dunlap outdistanced him off the tee by 30 yards, but his approach was over the pin and barely on the putting surface, 40 feet from the cup. He took three putts from there to lose the hole, the second hitting the cup. Marston, 4; Dunlap, 5; Dunlap, 3 up.

Eighth hole [395 yards, par 4]—Marston scored his first and only birdie of the morning round here. His tee shot went 235 yards down the center and he pitched to 15 feet, sinking the putt for a 3. Dunlap drove 230 yards and was on with his second. He then needed two putts from 40 feet. Marston, 3; Dunlap, 4; Dunlap, 2 up.

Ninth hole [445 yards, par 4]—Marston's drive again went 235 yards, but a wild brassie left him far to the right of the green. He dubbed his runup shot and took two to get down. Dunlap drove 200 yards and was on with his brassie for a par and the hole. Dunlap, 4; Marston, 5; Dunlap, 3 up.

Tenth hole [370 yards, par 4]—Marston's drive went 250 yards and landed at the bottom of the gully splitting the fairway. His spade shot was short and after chipping to within ten feet he missed his putt. Dunlap's drive was a trifle hooked, but he used a niblick which left him eight feet from the cup. He missed the putt for the birdie. Dunlap, 4; Marston, 5; Dunlap, 4 up.

Eleventh hole [315 yards, par 4]—Marston's spade shot, after a 235 yard drive, was six feet from the pin, but Dunlap, reaching the green in two, left a quarter stymie which Marston could not negotiate. The hole was halved in pars. Dunlap, 4; Marston, 4; Dunlap, 4 up.

Twelfth hole [166 yards, par 3]—Dunlap made a great mashie shot, probably his best of the day, the ball falling 15 inches from the pin. Marston's spade off the tee fell in the heavy grass above a trap at the left of the green, and after taking two to get out, he conceded the hole. Dunlap, 2; Marston, 5; Dunlap, 5 up.

Thirteenth hole [444 yards, par 4]—Marston hooked his drive into the rough at the left and his iron shot out was short of the green. He chipped to within 25 feet of the cup and took two putts. Dunlap had a fine drive, of 245 yards. He was on in two and sank his putt. Dunlap, 4; Marston, 5; Dunlap, 6 up.

Fourteenth hole [373 yards, par 4]—Marston drove 250 yards, only to find his ball buried in the turf. He sent his spade shot to within eight feet and took two putts. Dunlap drove 230 yards and took two putts from seven feet after pitching on. Dunlap, 4; Marston, 4; Dunlap, 6 up.

Fifteenth hole [407 yards, par 4]—Marston sliced his tee shot into the heavy rough of the pear orchard at the left and was partially stymied by a tree. His No. 3 iron left him short of the green and he needed two from there. Dunlap drove 240 yards and sent his mashie eight feet from the cup, holing out for a birdie. Dunlap, 3; Marston, 4; Dunlap, 7 up.

Sixteenth hole [241 yards, par 3]—Marston made a great drive, the ball falling less than five feet to the left of the cup, but he missed the putt. Dunlap was short of the green, but chipped to three feet and sank it. Dunlap, 3; Marston, 3; Dunlap, 7 up.

Seventeenth hole [573 yards, par 5]—Marston drove 245 yards and was 75 yards short of the green with his brassie. His pitch was 22 feet to the right of the pin and he took two putts. Dunlap drove 230 yards, and his brassie was on the right edge of the fairway. His third shot fell six feet from the pin but he needed two putts. Dunlap, 5; Marston, 5; Dunlap, 7 up.

Eighteenth hole [371 yards, par 4]—Marston drove 230 yards to the left edge of the fairway. He sent his next shot 20 feet from the pin and rimmed the cup as he missed a birdie. Dunlap's drive went 250 yards on the opposite side of the fairway and his approach fell 20 feet to the left of the pin. He looked up on his first putt, the ball falling four feet short, but he sank his next one for a half. Dunlap, 4; Marston, 4; Dunlap, 7 up.

Nineteenth hole [404 yards, par 4]—Marston hooked his drive and sent his second over the green into a trap. He exploded out within ten feet of the cup, but missed the putt. Dunlap drove 230 yards, and his iron shot was 20 feet to the right of the cup for a four. Dunlap, 4; Marston, 5; Dunlap, 8 up.

Twentieth hole [176 yards, par 3]—Both drove the green and were down in two. Dunlap, 3; Marston, 3; Dunlap, 8 up.

Twenty-first hole [562 yards, par 5]—Marston's drive went 240 yards, carrying the trap at the left, but his brassie was in the rough. A mashie niblick effort left him 35 feet from the pin and he putted dead for a five. Dunlap was straight with his two wood shots, 75 yards short. He pitched to within 13 feet and took two putts. Dunlap, 5; Marston, 5; Dunlap, 8 up.

Twenty-second hole [[illegible] yards, par 4]—Marston's drive was 240 yards down hill. He was short of the green with his second, and after pitching to within four feet missed the putt. Dunlap was short with his second, but ran his next effort up to within six feet and sank the putt. Dunlap, 4; Marston, 5. Dunlap, 9 up.

Twenty-third hole [134 yards, par 3]—Marston's iron shot was seven feet from the pin, and he holed the putt for a deuce. Dunlap was 12 feet from the pin and putted three inches short. Marston, 2; Dunlap, 3. Dunlap, 8 up.

Twenty-fourth hole [594 yards, par 5]—Dunlap drove into a trap and sent his ball only 40 yards ahead coming out. His spoon was short of the green. Marston had two straight shots and was 15 feet away with his pitch shot. He then was short with his putt. Dunlap pitched to 12 feet of the cup with his fourth, but knocked Marston's ball into the hole. Marston, 4; Dunlap, 6. Dunlap, 7 up.

Twenty-fifth hole [360 yards, par 4]—Marston drove 240 yards and was 40 feet short of the pin with his second. He was down in two putts for a 4. Dunlap outdrove his opponent by ten yards, and was 30 feet from the cup on his next. He also took two putts. Dunlap, 4; Marston, 4; Dunlap, 7 up.

Twenty-sixth hole [395 yards, par 4]—Marston sent a wild one off the tee into the pear orchard, being partially stymied by a pair of trees. He sent a low iron shot to the right corner of the green, and chipped to three feet, a great shot, for a four. Dunlap was straight with his drive but fell short with an iron. He dropped his chip two feet from the pin, but the putt rimmed the cup. Marston, 4; Dunlap, 5; Dunlap, 6 up.

Twenty-seventh hole [445 yards, par 4]—Marston drove 220 yarsd and put his spoon shot 18 feet from the pin. He holed out in two putts. Dunlap drove 225 yards, and his spoon shot stopped nine feet from the cup, which he missed with his attempt for a birdie. Dunlap, 4; Marston, 4; Dunlap, 6 up.

Twenty-eighth hole [370 yards, par 4]—Dunlap drove 225 yards and after dropping his iron shot 15 feet from the cup, sank the putt from a side hill lie for a birdie. Marston outdrove Dunlap by 20 yards and sent his pitch shot six feet from the pin for a birdie. Dunlap, 3; Marston, 3. Dunlap, 6 up.

Twenty-ninth hole [395 yards, par 4]—Marston made the greatest drive of the tournament when his tee shot landed on the short left corner of the green. He putted eight feet past the pin, however, and missed coming back. Dunlap was 65 yards short of the green with his drive, but pitched on and got down in two. Dunlap, 4; Marston, 4. Dunlap, 6 up.

Thirtieth hole [166 yards, par 3]—Both were on the green with their drives, Dunlap being 30 feet from the pin and Marston 35. Each took two putts. Dunlap, 3; Marston, 3. Dunlap, 6 up.

Thirty-first hole [444 yards, par 4]—Marston drove 245 yards and made a fine second shot, the ball rolling up to within seven feet of the cup. His putt for a birdie and the hole was an inch short. Dunlap drove 240 yards, but was 30 feet to the left of the pin with his iron. Dunlap, 4; Marston, 4. Dunlap wins, 6 and 5.

IF IT'S DREAM, DON'T WAKE ME, DUNLAP PLEADS

Wanted to Grow Up to Be Golf Champion, and Does.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 16.—Some kids want to grow up to be policemen, and others street car conductors, but it's seldom one is found who from the first wanted to grow up to be amateur golf champion of his country. That's the case with George Dunlap Jr. of New York, who realized his ambition today when he defeated Max Marston of Philadelphia, for the title, 6 and 5. That was just about all George had to say when he came out of the clubhouse at Kenwood to receive the big championship trophy and the gold medal from Herbert Jacques of Boston, president of the United States Golf association.

The slender New Yorker smiled as he tried to get the trophy and medal under one arm and in one hand so that he might shake hands with President Jacques, and said: "Ever since I was a little kid, I've dreamed of winning this championship and now that it's finally happened I still think it's a dream."

Waits for Alarm Clock.

When a friend asked him at the end of the first 18 holes how it felt to be seven up in a national championship match, George said he was waiting for the alarm clock to ring any minute, since he still couldn't seem to figure it out as anything but a pleasant dream.

It is now a matter of record that Dunlap was not content with dreaming about being a golf champion. He began playing quite young, doing well at Pinehurst. It was after he had entered Princeton that he attracted real attention, winning the National Intercollegiate championship in 1930 and 1931. He has sought the prize which he won today six times, qualifying for the match play four times, but never going beyond the second round until the current tournament.

Last year he was chosen a member of the American Walker cup team and justified his selection by defeating Eric McRuvie of the British team, 10 and 9, with an amazing 66. The victory today also evens up his failure to qualify for the match play at Five Farms in the 1932 national amateur tournament.

Best Since Jones.

Dunlap this year made the finest record any American has hung up in the British Amateur since Bobby Jones by going to the semi-finals before losing to Michael Scott, the ultimate winner. He defeated Ross Somerville in the fifth round of the tournament to reach the semi-finals.

Dunlap will be 25 years old in December. He is employed by a New York investment house. He married recently. He is the son of George T. Dunlap, senior member of the firm of Grosset and Dunlap, New York publishing house.

HUNTERS TO GET FIRST FALL TEST WITH JACKSNIPE

Food Shortage Likely for These Birds.

BY BOB BECKER.

Sportsmen in the central west will have an opportunity to tune up their shooting eyes before the opening of the waterfowl season by tossing small sized shot at the jacksnipe. This tricky flyer among the smaller game birds usually provides a sort of curtain raiser to the big show that opens in the marshes in October with the waterfowl the main attraction.

The season on jacksnipe in the middle west invariably starts ahead of the duck season and sportsmen thus have an opportunity to plunge their hip boots into the marshes and crack down on the birds when the first snappy days of autumn appear on the calendar.

Shortage of Food Likely.

Unless heavy fall rains literally drench the lowlands for several days prior to the first fall flights of jacksnipe, the birds are going to have trouble in finding feeding grounds. The hot, dry summer has taken thousands of acres of wet mucky marshes which in a normal season are just soft enough for the jacksnipe's long probing bill to be thrust into the mud to find food. Throughout Wisconsin and also in Illinois the jacks have [in spite of drainage projects] sufficient feeding grounds to scatter them out provided the season has the normal rainfall.

Year after year these night migrants can come down from the north and scatter over the country, a fairly large number of birds to each slough. But this fall the jacks may have to crowd together in the few water areas which have managed to survive the extended drought. The broad beaches around the shores of lakes undoubtedly will attract many of them.

Avoid Heavy Gun in Mud.

Last fall when we were hunting jacks with Jay Graham of Long Lake, Ill., both of us used 20 gauge guns. A light twenty is about all the weight that we want to carry around on a warm October day when the mud is applying about 500 pounds pull on each bootleg. When you hunt snipe in a thicky, oozy bog the mud gives you enough exercise without going into any extra setting up exercises with your arms and a shotgun. Many shooters use either a 20 or a 16 gauge on jacks.

However, this fall undoubtedly will see many sportsmen toting that new, lightweight .410 repeating shotgun which shoots the long, 3 inch shells loaded with three-quarters of an ounce of shot. Inasmuch as this shell virtually gives one a 20 gauge load in a gun lighter than a 20, and at the same time patterns just about as well as the 20, a sportsman can shoot this .410 and get his birds while reducing gun weight in the marsh.

This "leading character" in "Wings of a Century" is an International Model A-8 tractor-truck with sleeper cab and semi-trailer with a gleaming red 22-foot van-type body. VISIT THE FAIR and see the beautiful array of Internationals in the International Harvester Exhibit in the Agricultural Building. All models displayed, from ½-ton to 7½-ton.

A FLOURISH of trumpets nightly heralds the final scene in the Chicago World's Fair epic spectacle, "Wings of a Century." Out to the center of a vast open-air stage rolls the last word in transport aeroplanes. From the left wing moves the most modern passenger locomotive. And from the right comes the King of the Highway—a giant International Truck—to typify the century's progress in highway transportation.

In capacity, durability and economy of operation, International Trucks have progressively anticipated the needs of a growing nation. Today, in every industry, you will find these dependable carriers, powered and bodied to the exact requirements of each particular job.

The full line of International Trucks is at your service, and so is our modern service organization. Come in and see these modern trucks and arrange for a demonstration of any model on your own job.

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The listed bond market showed fairly wide irregularity of prices during the two hour trading period today. Domestic corporation bonds moved lower, on the average; foregn loans were higher, and United States government long term issues closed 7-32s up to 2-32s off. Dealings were active for a Saturday, amounting to $5,460,000.

In the corporation issues, utility bonds continued lower, as did the rails, while the industrials showed fair resistance to the downward trend. The principal losses ranged from 1 to more than 4 points on the day, although, as usual, the more active issues generally showed the smallest price variations. In the utilities the obligations of a number of companies doing business in New York City were subjected to considerable pressure.

The rapid bidding up of prices of French government and municipal loans was a feature of the foreign group. French government 7½s jumped 4 points to 149; City of Bordeaux 6s, 6 points to 144; City of Lyons 6s, 7¼ points to 143¼, and City of Marseilles 6s, 2 points to 144. All of these prices represented the highest levels at which these bonds have sold since issuance.

Dutch East Indies loans continued fractionally higher, and Kingdom of Belgium issues closed up ¾ of a point to down a point for the day. United Kingdom issues and Italian government 7s rose fractionally. Fluctuations in prices of German issues, however, were generally of a minor character. Latin American loans finished irregular.

The trend of bond prices on the curb exchange approximated that of the big board. Domestic issues traveled generally lower and foreign loans higher.

Inflation.

The rise in the price of gold—which is merely another way of describing the decline in the value of the dollar—to date has reflected the anticipation of inflation by speculators rather than the actual degree of inflation experienced.

But there has been some inflation. It began last year, long before the United States abandoned the gold standard, and caused quite a drain on the nation's gold supply. There was a lull and then this summer there was another mild dose of inflation, lately becoming a little stronger.

The President has the power to inflate the currency in three ways. He may authorize the treasury to print up to 3 billions of greenbacks; authorize the reserve banks to buy up to 3 billions of government bonds; and he may reduce the gold content of the dollar as much as 50 per cent.

Up to the present the small amount of inflation that has occurred has been effected by causing the reserve banks to buy a few hundred millions of government bonds. That is not drastic. At the rate at which the reserve banks have been buying it would take two years for them to purchase 3 billion dollars' worth.

The important question to the investor is how much further will the treasury go. If the reserve banks materially increase the amount of their purchases the dollar will probably depreciate still further.

Much depends upon the continuance of a good market for new government bond offerings. The Aug. 15 issue was greatly oversubscribed. The Sept. 15 issue was limited to the amount of maturing treasury paper offered in exchange.

In addition to 640 millions of ninety day bills maturing between now and Nov. 8 the treasury has 727 millions of longer term paper maturing Dec. 15. Also more than 6¼ billions of the fourth Liberty loan bonds become callable this year and mature in 1938.

During 1934 the treasury has more big maturities to meet. In addition the sum total of potential demands upon the treasury created by the terms of the various relief acts runs up toward 10 billions over the next two years, although all this may not be spent.

To do all this financing the treasury must sell many billions of new bonds. The floating debt is about as large as it can safely be. Therefore a market for long term bonds must be found among investors other than banks and other financial institutions.

The bonds can be absorbed in large quantities by the reserve banks if necessary, the reserve banks paying for them with asset money. This, however, is inflationary and would probably impair the ordinary markets for government bonds.

The question of whether there is to be drastic inflation, therefore, depends largely upon the public attitude toward government bonds and the way in which they are marketed.

TRUSTEES NOTE PROSPECTS ARE STILL UNCERTAIN

Operating Profit Before Depression Shown.

The probable salvage of the holders of the unsecured "gold notes" and the 6 per cent preferred stock of the Trustees System Discount Company of Chicago is still a matter of speculation. This is the inference to be drawn from the report of the receivers filed yesterday with the United States District court.

The report covering the period from Dec. 16, 1932, to June 30, this year, was filed by Robert F. Golding, counsel for Frank O. Birney and R. L. Stewart, receivers.

The company and its five subsidiaries had an operating profit of approximately $68,000 for the period before provision for depreciation, the report showed.

Building Shows Profit.

The receivers said that the company's building at 201 North Wells street showed an operation profit of $20,000 for the period before depreciation charges. The building is carried at a book value of $2,531,121 and constitutes the principal asset of the company. It is encumbered by a $1,500,000 mortgage.

The receivers reported that they have effected economies of $20,000 on an annual basis in the operation of the building. With the permission of the court the management of the building has been placed with the firm of Hall & Ellis. Prior to receivership, 50 per cent of the building's rent revenue came from affiliated companies. This source of revenue has dried up, but other tenants have been obtained.

Income Pays For Operation.

The present monthly cash income of the building is more than adequate to finance operation, the receivers said. It is not sufficient, however, to provide for proper depreciation reserves.

Operation of the building resulted in a profit of $20,000 before depreciation. The balance of the realized income came from the subsidiaries. The loan department of the parent company operated at a loss of $6,399.

On June 30, there were outstanding approximately 6,000 loans of the parent company and its subsidiary, the Trusco company, amounting to $1,339,603. These loans represent the principal assets besides the building.

Loan Values Not Indicated.

Collections on the parent company's loans were $173,730 in the 6½ months period. Trusco company collections amounted to $121,838. The receivers do not attempt to indicate the probable value of these loans.

As a result of collections on loans and building rentals the receivers had a cash balance of $458,000 on hand on June 30.

Of the five subsidiares, the Trusco company is the only active company. Receivers are making aggressive attempts to collect this company's loans. The other four concerns are inactive. They are the Trustees System company of Chicago, Library Real Estate Improvement corporation, Urban Realty Mortgage company, and Individual Office and Secretarial Service, Inc.

Stock Widely Held Here.

The public holds $2,800,000 of the unsecured "gold notes" and $2,547,000 of the preferred stock of the parent company. This stock was distributed widely in the Chicago area. The company carried on a high pressure sales campaign until receivers were appointed late in 1932.

Trustees System Discount of Chicago was controlled by the Trustees System Service corporation which now is in separate receivership. Negotiations for a reorganization of the whole system have been under way for several months.

It is reported that the reorganization committee, headed by Burt A. Massee of Chicago, will make public its plan of reorganization next week. The receivers are said to be opposed to the plan, which, they charge, is an attempt to restore the companies to the old management.

NRA Oil Code Means Rise in Prices of Auto Gasoline

With the petroleum industry operating under its code, increased prices of gasoline at the filling station are inevitable and justified, according to Andrew W. Rowley, writing in the Oil and Gas Journal.

Oil companies will need about 3½ cents a gallon additional at the filling station to permit operation of the business at a reasonable profit and pay out the $300,000,000 additional each year in wages for newly hired employés in accordance with the national recovery program, Mr. Rowley says.

The average retail price of gasoline, exclusive of taxes, in fifty representative cities on July 1 of this year was estimated at 13.06 cents. Including state and federal taxes of 5.64 cents a gallon, the price was 18.70 cents.

Average to Motorist, 22.2 Cents.

Added to the price on July 1, the increase of 3½ cents a gallon would make the net gasoline price to retailers average 16.56 cents a gallon, and the average price to the motorist 22.2 cents a gallon, including 5.64 cents for taxes.

"This net price of 16.56 cents a gallon to the oil companies or retailers of gasoline is less than the motorist paid for gasoline in 1913, and is 2.88 cents a gallon less than the average price paid by motorists during the last twenty years," argues Mr. Rowley.

"Automobile owners certainly cannot claim that such a price is not justified, especially when it is so much lower than the average of past years and in view of the fact the oil industry is under obligation to expend $300,000,000 additional each year for wages for the thousands of employés it has hired to conform to the provisions of the code."

Twenty Year Average 21.5 Cents.

The total price of 22.2 cents, inclusive of the tax, compares with a total price of 21.5 cents shown as the average for twenty years, or from 1913 to the first of this year.

"The retail price of gasoline, exclusive of taxes, averages 19.38 cents a gallon for the last 20 years," observes Mr. Rowley. "The average price now, exclusive of taxes, is approximately 14 cents.

"The big increase in cost to the motorists has been due to state and federal gasoline taxes, which have risen from an average of one-tenth of one cent a gallon in 1920 to 5.64 cents a gallon at this time."

Mr. Rowley declares that the oil business has been losing money in recent years because of low prices attributable to overproduction in "flush fields," gasoline tax evasion, and the sale of illegally produced crude oil at prices under regularly posted quotations.

SIX MUNICIPAL BOND ISSUES ARE SOLD IN WEEK

Total Is $5,588,617; Demand Good.

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Formal offering of six new issues of municipal bonds aggregating $5,588,617 comprised the week's new financing. Last week, new municipal issues in the amount of $3,503,000 were marketed and in addition, an issue of $30,000,000 federal intermediate credit bank debentures.

The new financing this week ranged from an issue of $2,000,000 of six months' notes to one of $138,617 of bonds. In most instances, the bankers reported ready buying responses. Virtually all of the new issues offered were the obligations of communities enjoying high or reasonably high credit ratings.

The irregularly higher trend of prices this week in the general bond market following last week's distinctly lower movement did not result in any new corporation financing. However, the federal trade commission reported this week a long list of corporations seeking authority to issue new securities. Included in the list were bond issues of corporations whose bonds have usually sold at high prices in the past.

TEXTILE FIELD REPORTS BIG GAIN IN EMPLOYMENT

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—Employment in the cotton textile industry from March to September is reported by George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile institute, to have increased by 145,515 workers.

In presenting the statistics to Administrator Hugh S. Johnson, Sloan said they were the result of a carefully compiled report.

The figures showed that the first industry under an NRA code had an average of 320,400 employés in March, 356,000 in May and 465,915 on Sept. 1, carrying the number 20,000 beyond the 1926 average. The cotton textile code became effective July 17.

Monthly pay rolls in the industry, Sloan reported, increased from March to September by $13,200,000. The monthly pay roll for March was $12,800,000, for May $15,300,000, and was estimated on Sept. 1 at $26,000,000.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—An increase of slightly less than one per cent in wholesale commodity prices during August, as compared with July, was reported today by the bureau of labor statistics of the department of labor on the basis of a tabulation of 784 commodities. This was the sixth consecutive monthly advance in the general level.

Based on an index number of 100 for the year 1926, the average for August was 69.5, as compared with 68.9 for July. As compared with the low point reached in February, when the index was 59.8, August prices rose nearly 16 per cent. Corresponding indexes for March, April, May and June, 1933, were 60.2, 60.4, 62.7, and 65.0, respectively. As compared with August, 1932, with an index number of 65.2, the August, 1933, wholesale price level showed an increase of more than 6½ per cent.

Between July and August increases were reported in 369 instances, and decreases in 141 instances. In 274 instances no change in price was shown.

For the third consecutive time in the last three years prices for August averaged higher than in the corresponding month of the year before. The all commodities index, which indicates the trend in the general level of wholesale prices, showed that prices in August were about 27 per cent below the level of June, 1929, when the index stood at 95.2.

The largest price advance was in the textile products groups, which increased by almost 10 per cent over the preceding month.

FRENCH LEADERS PLAN DEFLATION TO SAVE BUDGET

PARIS, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Deflation to salvage the budget and protect the franc was reliably asserted tonight to be the goal of the French government.

The ministers of finance and commerce were said to be putting pressure on corporations controlling gas, electricity and coal in France to reduce wages and prices simultaneously. This was viewed as a starter to strengthen Premier Daladier's hand in demanding that parliament cut the pensions pay of functionaries and military men, which is nearly half of the budget.

Fear was expressed that strikes might eventuate, but it was hoped these might be prevented by a wave of popular approval at the beginning of a movement for a reduction in the cost of living.

STEEL PRICES MAY BE RAISED IN 4TH QUARTER

Action Is Forced by Drop in Operations.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 16.—An effort is expected to be made by steel producers to raise prices during the fourth quarter, unless the volume of business shows improvement before then, according to steel authorities. If the industry unites in a program looking toward higher prices it will be the first time that such an effort has been successful following a decline in the industry's operating rate.

The anomalous situation of a sharply lower operating rate than a month ago, coupled with a movement toward higher prices, has its origin in the industry's NRA code, which has fixed the industry's costs at a level above that prevailing in the early summer.

Wages Are Increased.

In July, before the code was adopted, the steel companies increased wages and salaries 15 per cent, and the higher rates were approved in the code. Shortly after the new pay scales were established the industry's operations began to recede and declined from 58 per cent in the third week in July to 42 per cent of capacity at present.

Many steel executives are opposed to an increase in prices if the volume of business can be expanded. They believe that a healthier situation would exist if production increased first and prices were marked up later. If business is slow coming in, however, they feel that they would be justified in asking for higher prices because of the increased costs resulting from the steel code.

Companies Lose Money.

With one or two exceptions, the steel companies have been losing money since the beginning of the depression. At the present rate of operations many are still losing money, owing to the higher costs that were saddled on the industry by the code. In July, however, when operations were close to 60 per cent of capacity, the industry was operating at a profit.

152 SECURITY ISSUES LISTED UNDER NEW RULE

One hundred fifty-two issues of securities totaling $168,713,677 were registered by Sept. 1 with the federal trade commission under the new truth-in-securities act, according to the Standard Statistics company.

Prospective large scale industrial and utility financing is almost entirely absent. Of the 152 registrations, 39 to a permissible total of $131,923,591 involved individual sums of one million dollars or more.

Of these 39, 32 to a total of $104,209,303 were of investment trusts. The remaining seven issues to a total of $27,714,288 were divided as follows: One insurance company, $2,000,000; two mortgage companies, $14,241,125; two public utilities, $6,979,063, and two industrials, $4,494,100.

Of 113 issues of less than one million dollars each, totaling $36,790,086, 43 to a total of $16,266,036 were of investment trusts.

Altogether 75 out of a total of 152 issues and $120,475,339 of a total of $168,713,677, or more than 71 per cent, were registrations of investment trusts.

N. Y. Central Rail Orders for Week Total 17,530 Tons

The order placed last week by New York Central for 8,230 tons of steel rails brought to 17,530 tons the total ordered this year. It was distributed among four companies, Bethlehem, Illinois, Inland and Algoma Steel companies.

GRAIN TRADERS

Ainsworth's Financial Service has correctly forecast the trend of every major movement in grain since November of last year. We had our clients' long wheat and corn in March for a major advance and short in July for a major decline. In our bulletin of July 17 we claimed wheat would decline forty cents a bushel and switched from the long to the short side of Chicago May Wheat at 89⅞ cents. Winnipeg May was purchased at 84¼ cents.

Our bulletins of September 11 and 18 giving the short swing trend of grain prices are free for the asking. Bulletin of Sept. 25 giving a forecast of every major move to November 6 will be sent to clients only.

MUSTER BANKS FOR INSURANCE OF DEPOSITS

Instructions Sent by Cummings.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—The first step to muster banks into line on the federal guaranty of deposits was taken today when the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation started sending letters of instruction, application blanks and condition forms to the 8,300 banks in the country which are not members of the federal reserve system.

W. J. CUMMINGS. [Maurice Seymour Photo.]

Nonmember banks were given full instructions on preparation of their report and of their files pending the arrival of the examiner for the corporation, who will check up on the bank's eligibility for membership in the insurance fund. The 5,700 banks which are members of the federal reserve enter the insurance corporation automatically.

Drafted by Chicagoan.

Instructions, which were drafted by Walter J. Cummings of Chicago, chairman of the board of the corporation, permit applicant banks to prepare their own condition statements on forms similar to national bank examination forms now in use. Reports prepared by the banks will then be checked over by examiners.

In the application for membership, which must be authorized by the directors of the bank and executed by the president and cashier, the bank must accept "all requirements of the banking act of 1933 imposed upon members of the temporary Federal Deposit Insurance fund or imposed by reason of regulations of the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation."

Letter of Instructions.

To those banks which elect to join the insurance fund Chairman Cummings in his accompanying letter gave the following instructions on compiling their reports:

"Your report should be completed as early as possible and presented to the examiner for the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation immediately upon his arrival at the bank. You should be prepared to furnish the examiner full information regarding the bank and to answer all questions as listed in the report, but the front page of the report and the spaces provided throughout the report for answers to questions should be left blank until the examiner arrives.

"You should make a complete schedule of loans and discounts in alphabetical order on plain sheets of paper corresponding in size to the report and append to page 5 of the report. Only the total amount of each line of credit should be shown on the left margin of sheet opposite the name of maker.

Names of Endorsers.

"The names of the endorsers and a full description of the collateral or security should appear immediately under the name of the maker. Sufficient space on the right margin should be left blank that will enable the examiner to make his classification of the line of credit and you will also leave a space of three to four inches between each line of credit listed for examiner's comment.

"In addition to giving full description of collateral or security held you should have on file available to the examiner current financial statements supporting all unsecured lines of credit in excess of $500; also complete information relative to loans secured by real estate, including a description of the property, title papers, and a recent appraisal and whether or not the mortgage was taken for debts previously contracted.

Listing of Securities.

"Bonds and securities should be listed showing par value on left margin of page, followed by name of issuing corporation and character of the mortgage, rate of interest, and maturity; also show amount at which carried on books but do not show the market value.

"Bonds should be grouped as to classes showing, first, all United States government bonds, municipal bonds, railroad bonds, public utilities, and industrials. Miscellaneous and other bonds which are in default should be listed in one group. Indicate on the right margin bonds which are pledged and if any are borrowed so state. With respect to any securities owned which are not listed on exchanges and which are not readily marketable you should obtain all information possible regarding the security and obtain financial and earnings statements of the issuing company in order that the examiner may determine as nearly as possible actual value of such securities."

Number of Favorable Dividend Changes Gains

New York, Sept. 16.—The ratio of favorable dividend changes far outnumbered unfavorable revisions during the last week, Standard Statistics, Inc., reports. Favorable changes totaled 21 and unfavorable 4. Last week favorable changes were 17 and unfavorable 2.

New York Curb Prices Rise in Active Session

New York, Sept. 16.—[U.P.]—Renewed buying inspired by further inflation gossip sent curb stocks up fractions to 3 points in an active two hour session today. Turnover was 176,000 shares.

Car Loading Total Reduced by Labor Day

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—Due to observance of the Labor day holiday, the American Railway association announced today, freight carloadings in the week ended Sept. 9 declined by 95,265 cars from the total of the preceding week.

Cars loaded during the week totaled 571,387, the association said, which represented an increase of 69,850 over the total for the same week of last year, but a decrease of 96,363 cars from the level of the corresponding week two years ago.

Miscellaneous freight loadings for the week of Sept. 9 totaled 204,555 cars, a decrease of 25,841 cars below the preceding week, but 21,250 cars above the corresponding week in 1932.

Grain Loadings Decline.

Grain and grain products loadings for the week totaled 26,804 cars, a decrease of 5,603 cars under the preceding week and 9,066 cars below the corresponding week last year. In the western districts alone, grain and grain products loadings for the week ended Sept. 9 totaled 17,657 cars, a decrease of 7,436 cars below the same week last year.

Forest products loadings totaled 22,260 cars, 3,196, cars below the preceding week, but 6,704 cars above the same week in 1932.

Ore loadings amounted to 34,696 cars, a decrease of 5,549 cars below the preceding week, but 28,571 cars above the corresponding week in 1932 and 4,431 cars above the same week in 1931.

Coke loadings amounted to 6,838 cars, 527 cars below the preceding week, but 3,698 cars above the same week last year and 2,180 cars above the same week two years ago.

Live stock loadings amounted to 18,736 cars, an increase of 150 cars above the preceding week, and 586 cars above the same week last year. In the western districts alone, loadings of live stock for the week ended Sept. 9 totaled 14,589 cars, an increase of 637 cars compared with the same week last year.

All districts, except the southern, reported increases in the total loadings of all commodities compared with the same week in 1932, but all districts reported decreases compared with the corresponding week in 1931.

CRAWFORD FIRM RECEIVER NAMED BY GOTHAM JUDGE

New York, Sept. 16.—(AP)—A receiver was appointed today for E. A. Crawford & Co., dealers in securities and investment brokers, of 60 Beaver street.

E. A. Crawford, head of the firm, was active in the Chicago grain market before he opened the New York offices. Recently he has been active in planning a comeback by arranging a settlement with creditors.

The appointment today was made by Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe upon motion of creditors, and the receiver was directed to file a $25,000 bond. The petition was filed some weeks ago, but a temporary injunction granted by Judge John M. Woolsey prevented the appointment of a temporary receiver.

Cuneo Eastern Press, Inc., Debenture Plan Effective

Holders of debentures of the Cuneo Eastern Press, Inc., subsidiary of the Cuneo Press, Inc., have been notified that the plan for extension of the debentures has been declared effective. Under the plan holders will receive $250 in cash for each $1,000 debenture and the maturity of the remainder will be extended five years.

COMMODITY PRICES SHOW SHARP GAINS; GRAIN AND SILVER LEAD

Without exception commodity prices advanced in a most drastic manner during the last week with grains, provisions and silver in the lead. Wheat at the close yesterday showed a net gain of 10½ cents for the week, with corn up 5⅝ cents; rye, 7¼ cents, and barley 4⅜ cents. Provisions were up nearly ½ cent per pound, while cotton gained over one cent, equal to $5 per bale. Silver led the upturn and showed over 2½ cents per ounce over the finish of the preceding week. Closing prices on leading commodities for the last two weeks, as compared with the lowest levels of the season, follow:

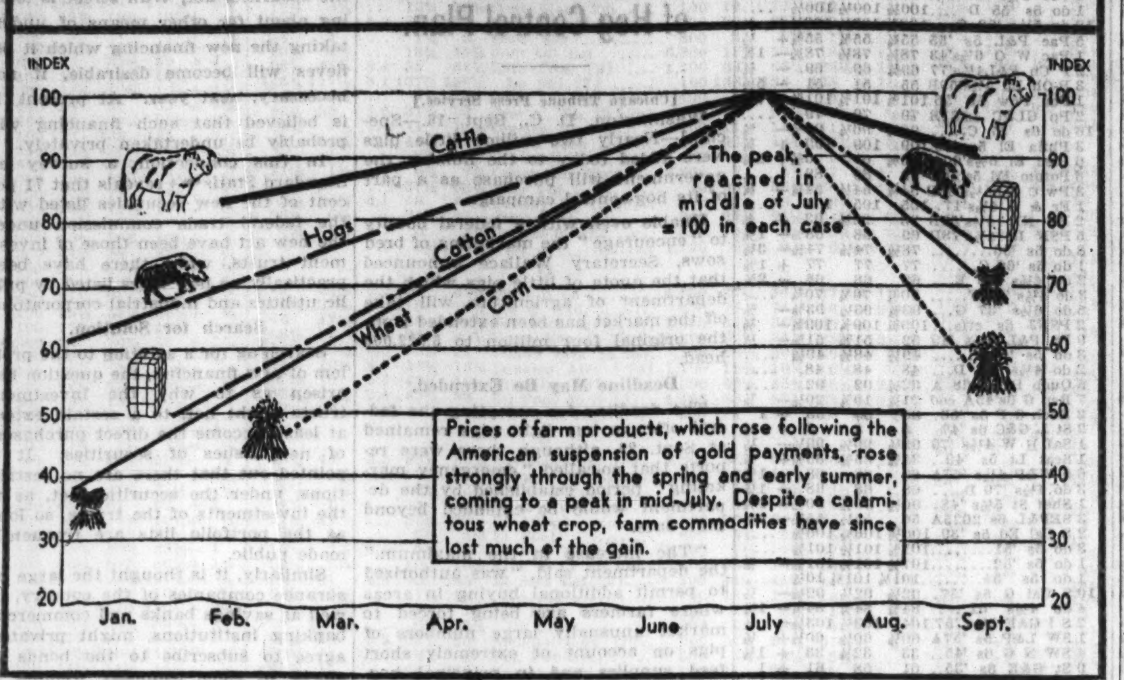
The Rise and Fall in Prices of Five Farm Commodities in 1933

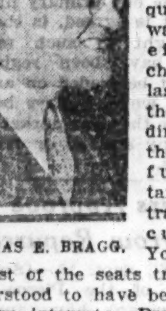


Prices of farm products, which rose following the American suspension of gold payments, rose strongly through the spring and early summer, coming to a peak in mid-July. Despite a calamitous wheat crop, farm commodities have since lost much of the gain.

N. Y. Operator Buys Chicago Market Seat

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Thomas E. Bragg, one of the best known operators in Wall street, has purchased a membership on the Chicago Stock exchange, according to reports from New York last night.



THOMAS E. BRAGG.

The seat acquired by Bragg was one of the eight which changed hands last week during the spirited bidding that followed the imposition of further heavy taxes on stock transactions executed in New York.

Most of the seats transferred were understood to have been acquired by eastern interests. Bragg is the first of the eastern purchasers to be identified.

Raskob Pool Manager.

Bragg's name figured prominently in the headlines last year during the United States senate's investigation of stock market practices. He was identified in the testimony as one of the managers of the famous Raskob pool which was reputed to have cleaned up $5,000,000 in the common stock of the Radio Corporation of America in one week in March, 1929.

His name has been linked with various big pool operations in Wall street in the last three or four years. He was a member of the firm of W. E. Hutton & Co. during the bull market era. He retired from that company in 1930. In the last year or so Bragg has traded largely through the firm of Hornblower & Weeks. He has been active on the bear side of the market at intervals in the last three years, but his friends assert that he has operated more extensively on the bull side than on the short side.

Chance to Get Business.

That the Chicago exchange stands the best chance to gain any business lost by the New York markets as a result of the new taxes was indicated by a checkup yesterday of the exchange's present membership.

Seventy-seven New York exchange firms are already members of the Chicago market. Of these 49 now maintain offices in New York. In all, the exchange membership includes 125 firms. These figures do not reflect the seats transferred last week.

These figures show that the New York firms, now members of the Chicago exchange, could steer much of their present business through Chicago without changing their present organization.

The last price on Chicago seats was $10,000, established in a sale late Friday. This was the best price commanded by memberships in months and more than double the best bid price which prevailed last Tuesday.

BANKING SHARES IRREGULAR IN TRADING HERE

An irregular trend prevailed in the Chicago bank stock market last week. Unlisted brokers reported prices of leading shares improved early in the week but reacted to close near the preceding week's final quotations.

Continental Illinois National sold down to 48, rallied to 57, then slumped to close at 49 bid, 50 asked, a decline of 4 points for the week.

First National slipped to 88, climbed to 101, and then sagged to close the week at 91 bid, 94 asked, a net gain of 3 points. Northern Trust and Harris Trust were unchanged.

Lake Freight Rates Rise for Shipments of Grain

Lake freights on grain, which recently were offered at 1⅛ cents a bushel from Chicago to Buffalo, with charters difficult to secure, have advanced to 1¾ cents, due to a jump in wages of elevator workers and grain shovelers, which have almost doubled in about a week. This tends to make chartering of boats slow, shippers declining to pay the advance.

Chicago Exchange Halts Trade in Three Issues

The Chicago Stock exchange yesterday announced that trading has been suspended in the shares of the Studebaker Mail Order company, Railroad Shares corporation and Seaboard Utilities Shares corporation.

NEW EXCHANGE FOR STOCK TRADE IS INCORPORATED

Move to New Jersey Under Way.

New York, Sept. 16.—(AP)—First steps to transfer Wall street's stock trading to New Jersey to escape the proposed emergency municipal taxes were taken today by a group of brokers who arranged the incorporation of "the National Stock Exchange" to be established in Newark.

"It's a new Boston tea party," said Col. William Freiday, Wall street broker and prominent in Democratic politics in New Jersey, who is president of the newly incorporated organization.

This move on the part of brokers resentful of the Tammany plan to place a special levy upon them was taken independently of the New York Stock Exchange, although the firm in which Col. Freiday is a partner, J. Robinson Duff & Co., holds three New York Exchange memberships.

Talk of Subsidiary.

At the same time rumors flew about Wall street that the prominent law firm of Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft has prepared a plan to submit to the New York exchange's membership for the establishment of a subsidiary exchange in Jersey City on the water front, where it could be reached by a special ferry from Manhattan.

"It is our intention, naturally," said Col. Freiday, "to coöperate with the New York Stock Exchange. Its members will be given prior rights to hold memberships in the National Stock Exchange.

"The primary purpose of every brokerage firm is to give its clients efficient service at the least possible cost. This new exchange will result in a substantial saving to both clients and firms. We have the assurance of New Jersey authorities that no taxes will be levied on transactions executed there."

May Increase List.

Col. Freiday said the new market would be housed temporarily in one of the large buildings in Newark, and it would probably list all stocks being traded in on the New York Stock Exchange and possibly some of those traded in the curb market.

What plans the New York Stock Exchange may have in the event the proposed municipal tax of $4 per 100 shares on stock transfers is signed by Mayor O'Brien on Sept. 21 has been kept a closely guarded secret.

While the exchange has taken no action, insofar as could be learned, toward transferring any of its activities elsewhere, it was understood that it raised no objection to the incorporation of the National Stock Exchange by a group of its members.

Business Machines Corp. President Visits Chicago

Thomas J. Watson, president of the International Business Machines corporation, and director of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, was in Chicago yesterday. He visited the Century of Progress during the day.

NEWSPRINT OUTPUT IN U. S. AND CANADA INCREASES IN AUGUST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 16.—Production of newsprint in the United States and Canada in August totaled 278,783 tons, compared with 259,869 tons in July and 237,448 tons in August last year, according to the Newsprint Service bureau. Canadian output during the month was the largest since May, 1931, while the output of United States mills exceeded the total for any month since June, 1932.

Canadian mills produced 194,262 tons in August, against 180,387 tons in July and 157,919 tons in August, 1932. The highest monthly output attained in 1932 by Canadian mills was in April, when 176,660 tons were turned out by Canadian mills. Output of United States mills in August this year was 84,521 tons, compared with 79,482 tons in July and 79,529 tons in August last year.

Production by Canadian mills in the first eight months of 1933 was 29,209 tons less than in the first eight months of 1932, a decrease of 2 per cent. Output in the United States in the same period was 77,591 tons, or 11 per cent less than in the like period of 1932.

Shipments from United States and Canadian mills in August were slightly under production, so that stocks increased slightly. On Sept. 1 mill stocks at Canadian mills were 41,826 tons, against 41,963 tons on Aug. 1. United States mill stocks were 21,407 tons, against 19,378 tons on Aug. 1.

Dollar Again Eases to New Low Levels

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The dollar declined today for the sixth consecutive day, losing 58 points in gold value based on local quotations for the French franc. For the week the loss amounted to 4.13 cents in gold value. A new low record of 66.86 cents in gold was established today, and the final quotation was 66.91 cents, comparing with 71.04 cents a week ago.

As a result, the price of newly mined gold quoted at the federal reserve banks rose to a new high mark of $30.49, a gain of 8 cents for the day, comparing with a low of $29.10 on Monday. Records have been kept only since and including Sept. 8, prior to which time government regulations did not permit acceptance of newly mined gold by the reserve banks on a consignment basis.

Sterling Rises Rapidly.

Sterling advanced at a faster pace than did other foreign currencies today, gaining 5 cents in value here to close at $4.72. The pound reached a high of $4.72½, the best level since July 21. The total advance for the week amounted to 20 cents.

French francs rose 5 points to close at 5.85⅛ cents, close to the new high mark of 5.86 cents. The week's gain amounted to 34 points.

The movement of sterling relative to that of the French franc since July 21 is interesting. Whereas sterling dropped to a low of $4.38 on Aug. 17 before returning to its July 21 level, the franc declined from a level of 5.55 cents on July 21 to a low of 5.19 cents on Aug. 1 and then rose through its July levels to a new peak of 5.86 cents today.

Francs at New Peaks.

Earlier highs were set on July 19, when sterling was $4.86½ and francs were 5.72¾ cents, both high marks for the year until the present week, when francs established their new peak. As the week closed, francs were 12¾ points higher than the peaks two months ago, while sterling was 14½ cents under its year's best level.

Reports that France and other gold basis countries of Europe may be forced off the gold standard this fall are not taken seriously in exchange circles here, despite the unfavorable budget and foreign trade conditions in France.

A matter of more immediate interest is the problem as to whether the British government will permit the pound sterling to rise further against the dollar. The foreign exchange markets generally were regarded as being still under the influence of hoarding operations initiated in continental Europe, and all recent fluctuations of exchange were viewed in the light of such operations.

NATIONAL TEA CO. FOUR WEEK SALES OFF 4.34 PER CENT

Consolidated sales of the National Tea company for the four weeks ended Sept. 9, 1933, amounted to $4,474,519, against $4,677,733 for the corresponding period of 1932, a decrease of $202,214, or 4.34 per cent.

For the 36 weeks ending Sept. 9, 1933, sales were $43,337,897, compared with $46,180,016 for the same period of last year, a decrease of 6.16 per cent.

The number of stores in operation declined 8.86 per cent, from 1,445 to 1,317, as of Sept. 9, 1933.

Machinery Trades Business Reported as Receding

Although September business in the machinery trades began well in some localities, American Machinist says that in general there is a recession from August and July levels. "The opinion is unanimous," says the review, "that the cause of the slowing down is the uncertainty connected with NRA codes."

Air Line Reports Year's Peak in Passenger Traffic

American Airways' passenger traffic in and out of the Chicago municipal airport totaled 3,650 combined arrivals and departures during August, reaching a new peak for this year, according to D. L. Seymour, president. This figure is 8.8 per cent over that for July.

STOCKS JUMP 1 TO 3 POINTS IN FAST TRADE

Inflation Reports Cause Flurry.

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—One of those impromptu buying jamborees that add so much zest and color to operations on the stock exchange on occasion developed suddenly in the last fifteen minutes of today's abbreviated session, and before the last transaction had been clicked off by the racing tickers values had been sent scrambling up 1 to 3 points throughout the list.

Orders poured in faster than they could be recorded and blocks of 2,000 or more shares were turned over with a frequency that made tape watchers wide eyed with wonder. As is always the case in these sudden buying flurries, traders jumped to the conclusion that "insiders" had been tipped off on some pending bullish development of more than ordinary stock market importance, and with inflation uppermost, as it is in speculative thought, it was but natural that the matter should be hooked up with Washington.

Expect Government Statement.

Word had been about for several days that the administration might make a definite announcement of its monetary policy within the next few weeks, and some thought that the statement might be forthcoming even sooner than anticipated. At any rate, it was widely surmised that somebody had got a break on some good news and that the market was due to improve materially on the strength of it. In no other way could the sudden outbreak of enthusiasm on the buying side be accounted for.

Up to the start of the rally the market had been a prosaic affair with trading quiet and price movements slight and somewhat irregular. Some of the leading utilities had shown a strong disposition to recede still further from the lows for the movement they reached in yesterday's trading when the meaning of the government's Muscle Shoals low rate power enterprise began to sink in through speculative craniums.

Starts in Mining Group.

The buying movement started in the mining group, being aided by further weakness in the American dollar on the foreign exchanges. Homestake, the leader of the division and long distinguished as the highest priced stock on the board, went out for a new altitude performance and before the closing gong put an end to its dizzy climb had soared 26 points to a new all time high of $351 a share. McIntyre Porcupine, in the yellow metal corner, followed the leader after a fashion and virtually the entire group caught the spirit. United States Smelting, Kennecott, International Nickel, Cerro de Pasco, Dome Mines and Federal Mining and Smelting all met demand. Federal jumped 18 points on a few sales.

The alcohol division fell in as it usually does when there is anything doing, and such stalwarts as United States Industrial Alcohol, Owens Glass, American Commercial Alcohol, National Distillers and Commercial Solvents went skipping ahead for net gains of 2 and 3 points or more.

Spreads to Entire List.

The buying quickly spread to the entire list and buying orders in volume appeared for such pivotals as United States Steel, American Can, Westinghouse and the like. Even the utilities were given a fling, Consolidated Gas, Peoples Gas and others wiping out early losses with net gains of a fraction to a point or so.

The motors came out of the "creeping recovery" class in time, Chrysler rising nearly two points to within a fraction of its year's high.

There was little activity in the rails despite the fact that the week's carloading figures were better than had been anticipated, but the group as a whole emerged safely on the upside of the account.

Turnover was around 1,001,160 shares, or virtually four times that of last Saturday.

Kelvinator Corporation Calls $824,000 in Bonds

Directors of the Kelvinator corporation have voted to call for retirement on Dec. 1, 1933, at 101, the remaining $824,000 outstanding 6 per cent bonds of Electric Refrigeration Building corporation, which bears Kelvinator corporation's guarantee as to principal and interest. With the retirement of this debt the corporation will have as its only capital obligation 1,124,645 shares of stock.

Early Return of Public to Market Seen

BY HOWARD WOOD.

The flurry in the markets just before the close yesterday led experts at the Chicago Board of Trade and along La Salle street to predict a return of the general public to the markets.

Since the break in July the public has not been trading in a big way. Even during the last week, when the dollar has been slipping and prices have been rising, the markets have been almost entirely professional.

La Salle street observers yesterday anticipated some news from Washington over the week-end, or early next week, that would account for the sudden resumption of the buying movement which has been generated largely by big purchases in the east.

The same sort of procedure that occurred during the bull movement in June and July is looked for in financial circles here. First, there is spirited buying from the east, presumably on the strength of some impending development, knowledge of which is at first confined to a limited number of big traders. Then, after the easterners have accumulated stocks and commodities in quantities, the news leaks out and results in heavy buying by the general public, which gives the early buyers a chance to unload at advanced prices.

Whether this procedure was being repeated or whether the sudden influx of buying by the general public just before the close was due to a widening recognition of the effect of inflationary steps already taken by the administration, there was no means of ascertaining at the time the markets closed yesterday.

The advance in the price of silver and soaring prices for the "silver" stocks led to the belief that some announcement might be forthcoming from Washington regarding a move to boost silver by remonetization of that metal or using large quantities of silver as backing for the issuance of additional silver certificates.

Another inflationary factor was the suspicion that the treasury's program of purchases of government bonds by the reserve banks may be speeded up. The word got around last week that reserve bank purchases of "governments" was to be increased from 35 to 50 millions in the week ended last Wednesday.

This increase failed to occur, but belief was expressed in some quarters that the stepping up of bond purchases had merely been postponed. The figures for the week ended next Wednesday will reflect the treasury refinancing which occurred Friday.

Secretary Woodin announced Friday night that this financing had been "successful" and that the amount offered, 220 millions, had been "fully subscribed." This offering, however, was peculiar in that it was limited to the amount of certificates maturing Sept. 15 offered by holders in exchange for the new issue of nine months certificates due June 15, 1934.

Exchange subscriptions for the new issue, the only ones accepted, it was learned yesterday, amounted to slightly more than 174 million dollars, leaving 46 million dollars worth of the 220 million dollar issue which matured to be redeemed in cash.

An early increase in the amount of weekly purchases of government paper by the federal reserve banks would not surprise La Salle street.

ITALY MOVES TO OFFSET EFFECT OF CHEAP MONEY

ROME, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The council of ministers today approved a measure authorizing the government to raise tariffs against foreign producers competing with national products when depreciated foreign currencies result in a menace of dumping.

The tariffs will be raised according to the foreign currency depreciation coefficient.

The council also approved a measure designed to raise national motion picture production in proportion to foreign films. The law also subjects the foreign films to a rigid rule demanding translation into Italian and sets up an unspecified tax on all reproduction and resynchronization of the foreign production. The new rule subjects the foreign films to the reproduction tax because it stipulates that the translations must be done in Italy instead of abroad as previously.

It was understood the tariff measures were particularly aimed to offset currency export advantages of the United States, Canada and Argentina.

INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION PLAN COSTS $2,550,000

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Purchase of fifty new street cars and eighty new trackless trolley cars, and perfection of a general street railway improvement program costing $2,550,000 were announced tonight by the Indianapolis railways.

The order, one of the largest single purchases ever made by any street railway company, will mean the displacement of every piece of obsolete equipment of the Indianapolis system.

The plan includes: Purchase of eighty new trackless trolley cars, $1,200,000; fifty street cars, $975,000; expenditure for construction of trackless trolley car overhead wires on thirteen lines, $375,000.

GRAINS ADVANCE AS GOLD PRICE MOVES UPWARD

Wheat Climbs Over Three Cents.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Quotations on free gold, as announced by the treasury department, showing the yellow metal has appreciated around 50 per cent as compared with the mint buying level under normal conditions is regarded as finally having convinced many speculators that inflation is a fact rather than a theory.

As a result of this belief grain prices advanced sharply yesterday. May wheat touched 99⅞ cents at the close, an advance of 3⅝ cents from Friday's close. Corn was up 2¾ to 2⅞ cents and oats was ¾ to 1¼ cents higher at the close.

Liberal Buying Reported.

According to gossip which prevailed on the Board of Trade yesterday there was liberal buying of grains during the day by operators who had become frightened as to the possible effect of inflation and had started to place some of their surplus funds in commodities.

An advance of around one cent per ounce in silver futures, with a further upturn in sterling exchange and a drop in the American dollar to new low levels in over 50 years, were also factors in starting general buying in all grains, and only the close of the session checked the upward movement. Strength in stocks was also a factor, especially the advance in the metal issues.

Wheat Nears Dollar.

A material broadening in general speculative buying was apparent in all grains, with wheat leading the advance. The latter moved up 3½ to 3⅝ cents with the May touching 99⅞ cents, the highest figure since Aug. 15, and the close was at 99⅝ to 99⅞ cents. September finished at 91¾ cents and December at 95½ to 95¾ cents. Corn was 2¾ to 2⅞ cents higher, with December closing at 55⅝ to 55¾ cents, the bulge in this grain surprising the trade as farmers sold around 1,000,000 bushels of cash grain on the way up.

Oats again developed strength and closed ¾ to 1¼ cents higher with December finishing at 41⅞ to 42 cents, while rye was 3⅛ cents higher, with December at 77¼ cents. Barley was up 1 to 1½ cents on the active futures, December being 58 cents.

Bull Sentiment Grows.

Many of the local professionals who sold out their holdings of grain Friday and early yesterday were reported as having tried to reinstate their lines when the markets started upward and to have found little for sale. The east was a persistent buyer of wheat as it has been for several days. At the top yesterday wheat showed 10 to 10⅞ cents above the low of the preceding week, while corn was 5⅝ to 6¼ cents higher.

Added reinforcement to B. W. Snow's opinion that the government had materially underestimated the probable consumption of wheat in the United States this season was given yesterday. Statistician H. C. Donovan estimates that the country will require around 690,000,000 bushels of wheat, laying especial stress on the marked increase reported in home baking as the result of the increase in the price of bread.

Rains Cause Damage in Canada.

Heavy damage to the new wheat crop in the Canadian northwest is now feared as the result of persistent rains. Edmonton, Alberta, in an area where the harvest was late this season, reported it had been raining for 32 hours. Gordon Brown of Regina, Sask, one of the leading operators in the prairie provinces wired: "Threshing postponed indefinitely by general rains all over. Western Canada experiencing one of the most backward seasons in years, which will cause further loss in yield and heavy deterioration in quality. Situation becoming serious, as already heavy damage appearing in best crop areas."

Winnipeg wheat futures closed 1⅜ to 1⅝ cents higher yesterday, with cash wheat premiums ½ cent higher as compared with the October. It is estimated around 6,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat have been sold for export in the last two days.

Country Sells Cash Corn.

Farmers have benefited materially as the result of the sharp advance in corn futures during the last week. Around 1,000,000 bushels of cash corn were estimated as having been bought by Chicago handlers from the country yesterday, with 3,000,000 to 3,500,000 bushels secured during the last week, the greater part of which was disposed of at prices well above those received during the preceding week.

Forecast for light frost in western Nebraska over the week-end, and possibly in the Dakotas, attracted much attention, especially as there are considerable late planted crops in the former section.

LONDON MARKET REVIVES AFTER EARLY SETBACK

Gold Mine Shares Show Improvement.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON., Sept. 16.—The attack of malaise which seized the markets a week ago quickly disappeared at the beginning of the week when there was a revival of activity. The recent setback was largely technical and the market regarded it as the logical aftermath of an unusual amount of buying during the summer and especially the holiday period.

Early in the week the overbought positions were satisfactorily adjusted and the way was cleared for a renewal of activities. The latter developed most prominently in industrials such as oils, tobaccos, and textiles, which are believed to offer the most promise of early appreciation. The rise of retail gasoline prices is generally anticipated here, such anticipation being based chiefly upon the extent of price advances in the United States.

Gold Shares in Favor.

Gold mining shares again were prominently in the limelight, the market quickly shaking off depressing influences. Notably there is a good deal of French and Cape support for leading Rand shares in the belief that the price of gold in relation to sterling will show a further sharp advance in the near future.

Outside the stock market movements proper a good deal of attention now is being focused on the movements of the dollar. Throughout the week a slow daily slide of the dollar was in progress, caused by selling, which, while on a comparatively small scale, was sufficient to outweigh the normal commercial demands. The movement was clearly motivated by Washington dispatches of inflationary forecasts. The impression is gaining ground here that America's currency will depreciate further, and toward the end of the week speculative sales of dollars increased, which came as no surprise to the market.

Discuss Roosevelt Policy.

There was much discussion on President Roosevelt's future policy, but financial opinion inclines to the view that the President will allow the dollar to depreciate on the strength of inflation talk and only actually resort to inflation if he finds it expedient.

The superfluity of credit still remains a predominant influence in the money market, where discounts are still declining. The treasury was able to sell its £45,000,000 of treasury bills at 8 pence lower than a week ago at 5 shillings 11 pence per cent. Next Friday £45,000,000 bills again will be offered.

Gold remains the center of interest in the London bullion market. The price continues to fluctuate in accordance with movements of French exchange.

2 MILLION MORE PIGS WILL BE BOUGHT BY U. S.

Farmers Force Revision of Hog Control Plan.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—Special.]—Nearly two million little pigs were added today to the number the government will purchase as a part of its hog-control campaign.

Unable even with a federal bounty to "encourage" the marketing of bred sows, Secretary Wallace announced that the quota of little pigs which the department of agriculture will take off the market has been extended from the original four million to 5,922,000 head.

Deadline May Be Extended.

The deadline for accepting the federal offer to buy light pigs remained at Sept. 29, although there were reports that so-called "emergency marketing" period established by the department would be extended beyond that date.

"The increase in the maximum," the department said, "was authorized to permit additional buying in areas where farmers are being forced to market unusually large numbers of pigs on account of extremely short feed supplies and in principal hog-growing areas where processing facilities have substantially limited the sale of pigs thus far."

"The sale of additional pigs," it was added, "also will compensate in part for the difference between the maximum of one million head of sows called for under the program and the probable actual sales of several hundred thousand head."

Farmer Keeps Sows.

Its hog campaign, the agricultural adjustment administration declared, may result in a reduction in hog slaughter of as much as 15 per cent this year, despite the fact that the June pig survey indicated that hog slaughter in the coming marketing year would be from 3 to 5 per cent higher than last year.

Mo[st] of the expected 15 per cent reduction, it was said, "probably will occur after Jan. 1, 1934."

The revision of the hog-control plan is the result of hog farmers' unwillingness to sell sows which are soon to farrow. Under the original program, the department offered to purchase four million little pigs weighing from 25 to 100 pounds, and in addition, to pay a bounty of $4 a head on one million brood sows.

NEW FINANCING MAY BE PLACED IN PRIVATE HANDS

Problems Raised by Security Act.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 16.—Because of the mass of detail and the prospects of prolonged uncertainties resulting from the securities act, Wall street is looking about for other means of undertaking the new financing which it believes will become desirable, if not necessary, next year. At present it is believed that such financing will probably be undertaken privately.

In this connection a survey by Standard Statis[tics] reveals that 71 per cent of the new securities listed with the federal trade commission under the new act have been those of investment trusts, while there have been practically no new isues listed by public utilities and industrial corporatons.

Search for Solution.

Searching for a solution to the problem of new financing, the question has arisen as to why the investment trusts might not, to a certain extent at least, become the direct purchasers of new issues of securities. It is pointed out that there are no restrictions, under the securities act, as to the investments of the trusts so long as the portfolio lists are frequently made public.

Similarly, it is thought the large insurance companies of the country, as well as savings banks and commercial banking institutions, might privately agree to subscribe to the bonds or stocks of some company wishing to raise funds without going through the rigmarole required by the new securities act.

The procedure, it is believed, would be quite simple and quite within the requirements of the new law. The corporation desiring additional funds would approach one or more of the institutions included above asking bids on the issue of stocks or bonds. A group of such institutions would form a syndicate and submit a bid, with the idea of acquiring the securities for their own investment portfolios.

No Public Offerings.

There would be no intention of offering these securities to the public. All securities so purchased would be held as investments. The public would become investors in them only indirectly, through the shares of the investment trust, the policy of the insurance company, or the stock of the bank.

Of course, the one primary hitch in such a plan, it is agreed, is that the securities bought in such manner would never have been registered. They could not be traded on any exchange and it would always be difficult to discover the fair market value for them at any specific or even approximate time.

Stockholders Approve Pierce-Arrow Repurchase

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Stockholders of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car company have approved the repurchase of the company from the Studebaker corporation and the plan for recapitalization.

PROPOSES RESERVE REDISCOUNT SHORT TERM MUNICIPALS

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Morris Tremaine, New York state controller, has been discussing with federal officials the possibility of federal reserve banks agreeing to rediscount short term securities to protect municipal credit. He said that this probably would require legislation, although the reserve banks may now purchase such securities on a 15 day basis, but do not accord them a longer rediscount privilege.

Mr. Tremaine contended that until the credit of municipalities which were in a position to meet their liabilities within a reasonable short time, through tax collections, was placed on a solid basis, other efforts to bring about credit expansion would be retarded.

The government had tried unsuccessfully various expedients, he said, such as putting out federal government bonds and heavy purchases of government securities by the federal reserve banks in the open market operations.

Mr. Tremaine said he advocated rediscounting by the reserve banks of short term municipal credit where municipalities were not in default and had collected 80 per cent of their taxes.

Member banks, Mr. Tremaine felt, would no longer hesitate to grant loans on short term municipals once they were assured that these would be rediscountable at the federal reserve banks.

The first and most important step in extending the credit facilities generally, Mr. Tremaine held, was to assure the soundness of the credit of the municipalities.

Business by Checks Shows 9.8 Per Cent Increase

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago for the week ended Sept. 13 by 134 banks in 38 leading clearing house cities in the Seventh district aggregated $682,066,000, an increase of 9.8 per cent, compared with a week ago [$621,023,000]. An aggregate for 36 cities of $679,931,000 in the current week compared with $671,771,000 for the corresponding week of last year, an increase of 1.2 per cent. Debits to individual deposit account for Chicago for the week ended Sept. 13, 1933, were $443,324,000, against $419,594,000 for the week ended Sept. 14, 1932.

Consumption of Rubber in August Ahead of '32

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 16.—Although consumption of crude rubber by manufacturers in the United States showed a decline in August compared with the preceding month, the total was 89.4 per cent larger than in August, 1932, it was announced today by the Rubber Manufacturers' association. Consumption of crude rubber last month amounted to 44,939 long tons, compared with 50,184 long tons in July, and with 23,721 long tons in August, 1932.

Bondholders' Group Asks for Injunction.

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The bondholders' committee for state of Arkansas highway and toll bridge bonds, headed by William L. De Bost, president of the Union Dime Savings Bank of New York City, has announced it filed an application in the United States District court at Little Rock, Ark., for an injunction to restrain the state treasurer from making any further disbursements of the revenue heretofore pledged for the service on these bonds. The bonds are outstanding in the aggregate amount of $91,200,000.

Inasmuch as a sovereign state cannot be sued by an individual or corporation without its consent, the decision to apply for an injunction was one of the few avenues open to the bondholders. The application asks that the state treasurer be restrained from making any further disbursements of gasoline and motor vehicle tax moneys collected under the Martineau act and subsequent amendments under which the bonds were issued.

Seeks to Set Act Aside.

The Martineau act and its amendments require the state treasurer to set aside out of the first moneys so collected during each half of the fiscal year a sum sufficient to pay the interest and sinking fund charges on the highway bonds and then the toll bridge bonds. The state legislature sought to set aside this act by passing at its regular session early this year the so-called Ellis refunding act, under which the holders of the state's highway and toll bridge bonds, as well as holders of bonds issued by the various other taxing districts of the state, were offered long term 3 per cent refunding bonds in exchange for their present holdings.

The legislature appropriated the proceeds of the gasoline and motor vehicle taxes to the payment of the proposed refunding bonds and made no provision for the debt service on the bonds outstanding.

Effect of Ellis Act.

The effect of the Ellis act was to place the highway and toll bridge bonds on a parity with the district bonds, which were not issued as state obligations. Last month members of the bondholders' committee conferred with representatives of the state in an effort to adjust the situation, but no program was formulated in time to present it to the legislature which convened last month. On the contrary, the legislature made further appropriations from the gasoline and motor vehicle revenues.

THOUSANDS of people in the five central states who are coming to A Century of Progress have not yet made arrangements for a place to live. Yet this is the one question all of them want to settle before they arrive!

Hotels, rooming houses and wide-awake landlords with furnished apartments to rent are going to help these people! They will advertise for future occupancy. And these advertisers will get the big share of the business.

Many of the people who will come to the Fair are strangers to Chicago. But practically all of them know the Tribune! From Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin thousands of families are coming to the Fair. And in these five states the Tribune has far more circulation than any other Chicago newspaper! These Tribune readers outside of Chicago are leaders in their communities—people who have the time to spare and the money to spend.

Now is the time to advertise to these out-of-town readers of the Tribune! They will be glad to have your help in settling the question of a place to stay. Begin now to build a list of reservations! You can reach far more prospects in Chicago and suburbs than through any other newspaper. Order an inexpensive Tribune Want Ad today!

INCREASED PORK DEMAND LIFTS PRICES OF HOGS

Predictions by live stock men that the government would buy additional bonus pigs materialized yesterday when the farm adjustment administration announced 1,922,000 more would be purchased. The original plan called for 4,000,000 pigs.

Last week several Chicago packers were combing the yards for supplies that were eligible to the bonus and said they could handle more than they were getting.

Thus far the government has purchased close to three and a half million pigs, according to slaughter figures from twenty leading markets. Chicago statistics show that local packers have slaughtered more than a half million head.

Weather Is Factor.

Cooler weather was a stimulating factor in the pork trade the last week, and with continued moderate to light supplies the market strengthened as the week progressed. Prices of dressed pork moved higher and were the principal factors in boosting live hog prices. At any rate, last week's advance in hog prices was the most spectacular in months and the level of prices is now the highest since Aug. 10.

However, prices were relatively low at the beginning of the week and the weekly average was only $4.10, as compared with $3.90 a week ago, $3.75 two weeks ago, and $4.15 a year ago. Last week's top of $5 was the highest since June 3.

Trading yesterday was of little consequence. Most of the receipts were pigs intended for government slaughter and hogs billed direct to packers. Only a "handful" were on the open market. The day's top of $4.70 was paid for one load of 220 pound butchers. Most of the 220 to 280 pound butchers sold at $4.20 to $4.65 at prices that were mostly steady with Friday's close, but 10 to 15 cents under the bulk of Friday's sales.

Cattle Prices Rise.

Broad outside demand featured the cattle market. Early, when receipts for the first two days were among the heaviest of the year, prices slumped still lower, but numbers were more moderate Wednesday and after, and demand was preceptibly better. Prices on virtually all classes of fat bovine stock headed upward and closed unevenly higher than the low point. Steer classes were fully 25 cents higher.

Fed heifers gained 25 to 50 cents over the low of Tuesday, while beef cows ruled strong to 25 cents higher. However, the latter failed to regain all of the down turn.

New heights for the season were reached by veal calves and up to $9.00 was paid sparingly. All interests regarded the market as topheavy, but buyers were forced to comb the yards for numbers, as there was acute scarcity of vealers. Liberal receipts of western range cattle early in the period gave country finishers a wide selection of good and choice feeders to choose from. There was a tendency toward indifference, however, and even the upturn in fat cattle values late in the week failed to excite country buying of thin cattle.

Among the sales were numerous loads of strictly good and choice stockers and feeders at $4.35 to $4.85. A few brought $4.85, including "meaty" feeders, and the top of $5.25 was paid for a "standout" load of Wyoming yearling steers. Many loads of fair to good replacement steers went out at $3.25 to $4.00.

Fat Steer Average Off.

The average price of fat steers for the week dropped 5 cents to $5.70. The top of $7.00 was paid on Wednesday and Thursday for weighty steers.

The price curve of lamb prices followed an erratic course last week. Strength at the opening was erased when unusually large receipts appeared. However, broad demand bolstered the trade late in the week and prices staged a partial recovery. The week's market was unusual in that the average price of $6.90 shows a gain of 30 cents over the previous week, even though the general market was lower. This was brought about by the unusually good quality of the offerings.

Top western range lambs sold up to $7.85, down 5c from the previous week. Best native fat lambs sold at $7.75. Feeders ruled steady to 10 cents higher.

Breeding ewes excited competition and even the large supply of these cleared satisfactorily at prices ranging from $3.50 to $6.25. The latter figure was the highest paid for breeding ewes since November, 1930.

BEET GROWERS WILL GET HIGHER PRICES FOR CROP

Washington, Sept 16.—[Special.]—Through voluntary action of the Wisconsin Canners' association growers of beets for canning in Wisconsin, Michigan, New York, and other states have the prospect of receiving higher prices for their product, according to officials of the agricultural adjustment administration.

The Wisconsin canners recently took action to increase prices to beet growers by 20 per cent, provided the adjusted price is not in excess of $7 a ton. It was pointed out that the increase in raw product costs would increase the cost of the finished product by amounts ranging from 5 cents to 25 cents a dozen, depending on the size of the can.

The Wisconsin canners will ask the firms which buy canned beets from them to consent to upward revision of forward contracts made earlier in the year.

GRAIN AND FEED DEALERS OPEN SESSION MONDAY

An interesting program for entertaining the members of the Grain and Feed Dealers' National association, which meets here Sept. 18 to 20 inclusive, has been arranged by Chicago grain men. Golf is to occupy the spare time of visiting members on Monday at the Ravisloe Country club, where entertainment and prizes will be a feature. The train leaves the Illinois Central depot at Van Buren street station at 12:25.

A banquet is to be given on Monday evening at the Blue Ribbon Casino at A Century of Progress. Tuesday evening the annual banquet will be held at the Joseph Urban room at the Congress hotel at 6 o'clock.

Ladies will participate in all entertainment activities, according to M. L. Vehon, chairman of the entertainment committee.

BUTTER AND EGGS STEADY

Butter and egg futures closed steady on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday. Butter was very quiet, neither buyers or sellers showing any interest. The four markets took out 13,300 cases more eggs than last year, and this fact brought in better buying at the close. Pressure was moderately heavy early. Switching from October to November featured the trading. Three of the four markets showed a heavy movement of butter out of storage, but Chicago put in 500,000 lbs, making the net movement in the four cities 200,000 lbs in. Sales—Butter, 10 cars; eggs, 125 cars. Prices follow:

Trade in Wool Active; Some Advances in Prices

Boston, Sept. 16.—(AP)—[U. S. Dept. Agr.]—Business in wool is quite active and some further advances in prices were made in the latter part of the last week. Resistance to the advancing price tendency slowed up trading early in the week but apparently business in goods helped to overcome the resistance. Prices were higher on a wide range of medium and finer fleeces and very firm to higher on territory and other western grown wools.

COTTON SELLS HIGHER

Inflation talk with an advance in stocks and grains was responsible for good investment buying yesterday, which carried cotton prices up and closed the market at the best level of the day. Southern selling during the early trading caused a drop of 10 points. A more bullish tone pervaded the finish, which was stimulated to some extent by the advance in silver.

At the close prices in Chicago were 33 to 37 points net higher on futures, with other markets 11 to 16 points up. Spots in New York were 10 points higher at 9.70 cents, with New Orleans advanced 15 points to 9.45 cents, while Galveston and Houston gained 15 points and were 9.40 cents. Rains were reported over the eastern belt. Prices follow:

LARD HIGHER

Buying of lard and meats expanded, and although the market was rather draggy early, the advance in grain stocks, cotton, and silver reversed trade sentiment and brought in buyers, who absorbed the moderate offerings. Closing prices on lard futures were up 7½ to 12½ cents, most futures being up the full limit. Liverpool lard was 3 to 6 pence higher and there were exports from New York of 397,000 pounds of lard and 141,000 pounds of bacon. Bellies were given more attention, and prices advanced 7½ to 12½ cents on futures, with cash lots 7½ cents higher at $5.95. An advance of 7½ cents was also made in regular lard to $5.90, with loose $5.25, an advance of 12½ cents, and leaf up 15 cents, with the finish at $5.15.

A good general trade was reported in cured meats and green hams, which were held at firm prices. Hogs were 10 to 15 cents lowsr. Receipts were less than a week and a year ago.

POLICEMAN AIDS LOST GIRLS, WINS COURTESY AWARD

POLICEMAN HARRY ZINK.

The weekly award of $25 to a policeman for courtesy on duty in Chicago streets which THE TRIBUNE has made since July 9, in order to encourage courtesy to World's Fair visitors, goes this week to South Park Policeman Harry Zink, 7915 Wabash avenue. It is the last of the series of weekly awards to be made.

Policeman Zink was named for the award for his courtesy and industry in working several hours past his usual quitting time that he might return safely to the tourist camp where they were staying three girls from Murray, Ky., who were lost from a party at the Exposition.

Asks Information.

The matter came to the attention of THE TRIBUNE when Policeman Zink called the city desk shortly after 3 o'clock one morning and asked for information regarding tourist camps in the suburbs. The story of the plight of the Kentucky girls and the policeman's patient efforts to return them to their families in the tourist camp was revealed later.

The girls, Mary Douglas, 24 years old, Beth Sexton, 14 years old, and Dolly Mae Ford, 25 years old, were among a party of 16 residents of Murray, located in Calloway county, Kentucky, who came to Chicago to see the World's Fair.

The Kentucky neighbors had rigged up a bus to contain sleeping and cooking quarters, and driven jauntily to Chicago, stopping at the Oakes Grove tourist camp on Roosevelt road. A few of them followed the bus in their own automobiles.

Party Is Separated.

On reaching the Exposition grounds members of the party separated, agreeing to meet later at Old Mexico. The three girls went away together with the impression they were to meet the others at 11 p. m. Meanwhile 13 members of the party met at 5 p. m. They waited until 6:30 p. m., and the three girls having failed to appear, departed for the tourist camp without them.

The girls waited from 11 p. m. to midnight, and appealed for aid in finding their party. They were instructed to go to the Travelers' Aid society quarters near the 23d street entrance. There they learned that no inquiries had been made for them.

Walking out the 23d street entrance disconsolately, they approached Lieut. John Grant and Sergt. Con Cullinan, South Park policemen. The girls asked their advice. Lieut. Grant summoned Policeman Zink and told him to see what he could do to locate the girls' party. Zink later asked Policeman William Toomey to help him.

Miss Douglas, near tears by now told Policeman Zink that they could not recall the name of the tourist camp where they were staying, but thought it was "The Oaks."

Girls in Confusion.

The girls could only tell them that they had taken "a yellow street car" and ridden "an awfully long way," and then transferred to a "green street car." The latter, they thought, "went along Cermak road."

Policeman Zink scratched his head. He questioned the girls further, which seemed to increase their dismay and confusion. For an hour they stood at the 23d street entrance to the Exposition watching the crowds in an effort to locate their friends.

The policeman went to a phone booth and, using his own nickels, called every inn and camp listed with an "Oak" or a "Groves" in it. He then called THE TRIBUNE. After an hour of making calls he called back to say he had learned that there was an Oakes Grove camp at Harlem avenue and Roosevelt road, without a telephone.

Returns Wanderers to Parents.

"I'm going to drive the girls home. They're nice southern girls, but they're not used to cities and they'd get lost again if they tried to go out alone," he said wearily.

A later check revealed that he had driven the girls to the camp, persuaded their parents that the girls were not at fault, and left them reconciled, the worried parents weeping loudly and the tired wanderers weeping more loudly.

"They were real folks, like I've always heard Kentucky people were," said Policeman Zink. "They wanted to spank the girls at first, but they changed their minds. The older folks followed me to my car, telling me to be sure to come to see them if I ever got down that way. They'd show me, they said, that Murray, Ky., could be just as hospitable as Chicago, and they promised I wouldn't get lost down there, either."

Policeman Zink arrived home at 7:30 a. m., and he had a little explaining to do to Mrs. Zink, too.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—[U.P.]—The federal emergency relief administration today announced a grant of $3,400,000 to Illinois for its unemployment relief needs through September and pending a special session of the legislature which Gov. Horner has agreed to call Oct. 3. The grant was made on an agreement made between Administrator Hopkins, Horner, and members of the state legislature here early this week when they agreed to pass legislation raising $20,000,000 for relief work.

The relief administration will finance relief work through September and for as "reasonable" a period as may be needed to raise the state funds.

After the state has provided funds relief will be on the basis of one-third federal and two-thirds state funds.

Today's grant brings the total of federal relief funds received by Illinois to $21,748,957.

TAKES STRANDED SON HOME.

James Eastley, 14 years old, who came to the city to see the World's Fair and was robbed of his car and money by two youths he had befriended, started back home to Pittsburgh yesterday. His mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Eastley, arrived and took the boy from the juvenile home, where he had spent two nights.

ICKES REPAIRS STORM DAMAGE AT ARMY POSTS

Washington Beauty Idea Also Aided.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Secretary of the Interior Ickes doled out $1,856,485 in federal public works easy money today. Almost all of it went for projects in Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia.

The war department was given $1,125,285 for construction and repair of structures in 16 army posts which were damaged by the recent storms. These allotments are as follows:

Forts Monroe and Story, Va.	$646,246
Langley Field, Va.	69,200
Bolling Field, D. C.	23,800
Fort George G. Meade, Md.	20,000
Fort Howard, Md.	10,000
Middletown Air Depot, Md.	65,000
New Cumberland Depot, Md.	4,000
Fort Humphries, Va.	35,000
Holabird Quartermaster Depot, Md.	4,826
Nansemond Ordnance Depot, Md.	50,475
Edgewood Arsenal, Md.	10,000
Fort Bragg, N. C.	10,000
Army Medical Center, D. C.	1,000
Fort Brown, Tex.	171,816
Fort Logan, Colo.	3,922

Cash for City Beautiful.

An allotment of $600,000 was made for the "mall development program" in Washington, D. C., the announcement explaining that it will be used in part for "the removal and transplanting of hundreds of trees which are now interfering with the beautification plans."

The mall, running along Pennsylvania avenue from the capitol grounds to 14th street, will be improved by roadway construction, general grading, landscaping, tree planting, and a water supply system.

Other allotments announced today are $3,500 for repairs to a fish hatchery at Fort Humphreys, Va.; $63,700 for dredging a nine foot channel at Knapps Narrows, Md., as an aid to the fishing industry in that locality; $47,000 for constructing a shelter harbor on Chesapeake bay at Upper Thoroughfare and Deals Island, Md., and $12,000 for repairs to the sea wall and buildings at Fort McHenry National Park, Md.

Ickes Makes Counter Attack.

Mr. Ickes made a counter attack today on "political sharpshooters and snipers" who, he said, are broadcasting statements that public works money already allotted is being applied with unreasonable slowness to actual work. These persons blame administration inefficiency and red tape.

"I am not restive under this criticism," he asserted, "which I do not think is based on a thorough understanding of the facts. Only recently I had a letter from a governor raising hell because of what he said was delay due to red tape. In that same letter he said that all public works contracts had to go back for review by a state committee. For that the administration is not responsible. I am not responsible for anything except the administration of this office."

PRICE OF LAND KEY TO ILLINOIS FOREST PROJECTS

Urbana, Ill., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Fate of the two proposed Illinois-Ozark national forest purchase of 600,000 acres in the southern part of this state, now depends on prices asked by several thousand holders of land in the area. That was the statement of L. E. Sawyer, forestry extension specialist of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois and of the Illinois natural history survey. An office to begin the purchase of the land will be established by the U. S. forest service at Harrisburg on or about Sept. 20, he announced. He also stressed the fact of employment of men and teams in the proposed forest work.

"No funds have been allocated for the purchase of lands within these specific areas," Mr. Sawyer said. "The national forest reservation commission which must approve these purchases, will approve them only where lands can be acquired at the most reasonable prices. It will be to the advantage of every one living within and adjacent to these areas to offer their timberlands and unproductive agricultural lands to the commission at a low price. The commission will pay a fair stumpage price for standing timber in addition to the land price. The present owners may reserve the mineral rights."

PURCHASE OF SITE DEPENDS ON REZONING

Alexian Brothers Have Elaborate Plans.

BY AL CHASE.

One of the largest real estate and building transactions the north shore has enjoyed in several years is scheduled for the village of Deerfield. It involves the erection of an imposing first unit of a contemplated group of educational buildings on an elaborately landscaped eighty-four acre tract, representing a total investment in land and buildings of close to half a million dollars.

The Alexian Brothers of Chicago, a Roman Catholic organization, have entered into a contract to purchase this site provided the property is rezoned to permit the utilization of the land as the buyers require. The land, in the northeast section of Deerfield, is east of and adjoining Waukegan road.

Will Pay Taxes.

An unusual angle to the contemplated project is the announcement by Brother Gerard, provincial and chief administrative officer of the Alexian Brothers, that although by Illinois law educational and religious institutions of this character are exempt from taxation, both taxes and special assessments will be paid by his organization.

In a recent letter to the Deerfield village board the Rev. Gerard said: "If we do acquire this land we have no intention of seeking to have it exempted from taxation at the present time. We would not ask for such an exemption unless we could give the village conclusive proof that we were rendering a corresponding service to the commonwealth, and the decision then would be in the hands of the board."

Have Landscape Plans.

Two parcels of land in the northeastern part of the village of Deerfield have been assembled. One is a tract of sixty-six acres owned by Charles W. Esentrot of Libertyville and William Tempel of Los Angeles. The other is a heavily wooded tract of eighteen acres just south of and adjacent to the larger parcel. This latter is part of the Briarwoods subdivision, owned by the Chicago Title and Trust company, as trustee.

Elaborate landscaping plans have been prepared showing how the eighty-four acres can be developed. These include an artificial lake, tennis courts, a ball diamond, extensive lawns, with considerable planting of shrubs, flowers, and trees, and the laying out of gravel roads and walks.

Tentative architectural sketches call for a modern, fireproof, steel, brick and stone structure of Romanesque design. Exterior walls of Wisconsin Lannon stone, roof of red tile, and windows of leaded glass are specified. Plans call for private rooms, lecture halls, chapel, dining room, etc., to accommodate between eighty and one hundred students.

Established Over 60 Years.

The Alexian Brothers of Chicago are a religious organization devoted to the work of nursing, which has been established for more than sixty years. This order operates the Alexian Brothers hospital at Belden and Racine avenues, Chicago, and has branches at St. Louis, Elizabeth, N. J., and Oshkosh, Wis. They receive only men patients and have only men nurses.

The proposed development at Deerfield will consist of a novitiate which is a training school for the religious education of young men who enter the Alexian Brothers order. All entrants to the organization in America will be sent to Deerfield, where they will spend from two to three years, after which they'll be transferred to one of several Alexian Brothers hospital units to receive their training as graduate nurses.

Richard J. Schmidt, attorney, and Dan O'Connor of the office of W. C. Regelin, brokers, represented the buyer. McGuire & Orr were brokers for the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, and H. L. Magnuson, attorney, represented Mr. Esentrot and Mr. Tempel.

Nisley Company to Open Its 69th Unit in Oak Park

The Nisley company of Colubus, O., retail distributors for the G. Edwin Smith Shoe company, has leased a store at 1116 Lake street, Oak Park, from Earl A. Drechsler for ten years, beginning Oct. 1, on a percentage basis with a minimum guaranteed rental of $6,000 annually. This will be the lessee's sixty-ninth store. The premises are now and have been occupied for thirty-nine years by Charles F. Drechsler with an undertaking establishment. Cornelius Teninga represented the Nisley company and R. E. Nicholas of Oak Park the lessor.

Rent Three Stores in New Washington-Dearborn Bldg

Three stores are reported rented by John R. Magill & Co. in the new Washington-Dearborn building, now under construction at the southeast corner of Washington and Dearborn. They are: Sherman Dresses, 35 West Washington, for five years; Subley Shoe company, women's footwear, at No. 23, for five years; Barnett Millinery, Inc., five years at No. 37. As already announced, Frederick Bartlett & Co. will occupy the entire second floor. The building will be ready for occupancy by Oct. 15, it is stated.

CONTEMPLATED NORTH SHORE PROJECT

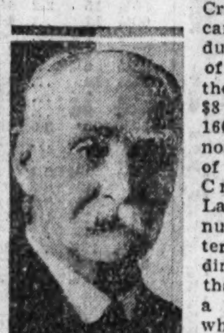
HAS SEEN FOUR REALTY BOOMS, FOUR PANICS

Old Time Chicagoan Recalls Past.

William Harding, grandfather of William H. Spikings of 4853 North Crawford avenue, came to Chicago during the boom of 1836 and paid the boom price of $8 an acre for the 160 acres at the northeast corner of what are now Crawford and Lawrence avenues. In the latter forties Harding considered that he had driven a good bargain when he sold the eighty acres bounded by Lawrence, Hamlin, Central Park, and Montrose for $10 an acre.



WM. H. SPIKINGS.

Richard Y. Spikings came to the section in 1842, married a daughter of William Harding and acquired the sixty acres at the northeast corner of Crawford and Lawrence from his father-in-law. These sixty acres descended to his son, William H. Spikings, who has lived every one of his eighty-five years on the property.

Recalls Boom of '72.

Mr. Spikings vividly remembers the great boom of 1872 and he tells how J. M. Smith, who didn't believe in strenuous labor but would sit in the shade of a tree, made more money speculating in land than others by hard work. Smith told with pride how he bought 10 acres on Elston avenue in the sixties for $1,000 and sold it in 1872 for $14,000. Later Smith acquired the land at one of the corners of Irving Park and Milwaukee, sat on it and thereby made his descendants independently wealthy.

But Mr. Spikings paid little attention to these booms. He worked patiently and held on to his property until about 1912, when he was able to sell a half acre at the northeast corner of Lawrence and Crawford for $8,000, or two thousand times the price per acre his grandfather had paid seventy-six years before, which he probably considered near the top.

The development he had waited for so long had come at last. Within fourteen years, however, the $8,000 corner had climbed to $160,000, an increase of twenty fold. The inside lots on Lawrence avenue he had sold for $1,200 in 1912 brought $12,500 in 1926.

Born in a Log Cabin.

Mr. Spikings was born in a log cabin acquired by his grandfather from an Indian chief east of Avers and north of Argyle. Near that spot Mr. Spikings later operated a brick making plant. He made the brick that went into his present house and laid the brick with his own hands, completing his house for his bride in 1874. His old homestead, with the barn built in 1881, stands as it did in the pioneer days.

He still lives in his own homestead with four generations of his family settled near him. Where his father and grandfather celebrated their 50th wedding anniversaries, he celebrated his golden wedding ten years ago.

Mr. Spikings has lived through four of the great booms and depressions described in the series of advertisements being published by the Chicago Title and Trust company and to be shown in the forthcoming book of Homer Hoyt, "One Hundred Years of Land Values in Chicago."

Sweets Steady La Salle St. Nerves, Says Mrs. Snyder

A La Salle street broker likes his chocolates, but he doesn't like to be bothered to cross the street to get them. Mrs. Ora Snyder, who by this time should be one of our leading authorities on such matters, having catered to the sweet tooth of prominent bulls and bears for many years, discovered this some time after she moved from the old Board of Trade building across to 331 South La Salle street. To correct this mistake she's now going to move it back to the west side of the street.

Two Shops in Old Board of Trade.

She has leased the store at No. 330 in the Postal Telegraph building for seven years and is having it redecorated in her colors: Green, silver, black, and cerise. It'll be opened for chocolate minded brokers about the middle of October.

Mrs. Snyder has a long and imposing list of well known stock and grain brokers who consume large quantities of her sweets. For fifteen years she maintained two candy shops in the old Board of Trade building. One faced on Jackson boulevard and the other on La Salle street.

When the old structure was torn down she consolidated the two into one at 331, directly across La Salle street. But the La Salle street brokers balked at crossing the street; there seemed to be a psychological barrier. So she's going back across the street.

Sweets Steady Their Nerves.

"Financial men eat more candy than any other class of business executives," said Mrs. Snyder. "I don't know why, unless it's because they live a fast and furious life, especially when there's an active market, and sweets probably steady their nerves. Anyway, La Salle street certainly likes its chocolates.

"Perhaps the average person doesn't know that my best customers aren't matinée women and girls, but Chicago men. They make up 75 per cent of my trade."

Mrs. Snyder smilingly announced that business has been booming since Aug. 1. She has increased her working staff 27 per cent since she signed the NRA.

EVANSTON FIRM OPENS WINNETKA BRANCH OFFICE

Mrs. Gretta P. Fuller and William Pickard, Evanston real estate brokers, recently opened a branch office at 746 Elm street, Winnetka. Rentals and sales of residential property will be handled by the new office for Kenilworth, Winnetka, and Glencoe. The Evanston office, at 1618 Chicago avenue, also will continue to handle houses in those towns, assisted by the added listings and facilities of the new office. Mrs. C. F. Wright is in charge of the new Winnetka office. Mr. Pickard states that there is marked activity in house renting on the north shore.

Atlas Equipment Company Rents South Clinton Space

The entire ground floor of the building at 1416 South Clinton street has been leased to the Atlas Equipment company, machinery dealers now on West Lake street. The space has been occupied for the last sixteen years by the American Pulley company, whose lease expires Aug. 1. Charles Handelman, president of the Atlas Equipment company, expects to take possession shortly after. Houston Gray of McMenemy, Inc., represented the lessor and David Horwich the lessee.

Cosmetic Official Rents Ambrose Cramer Residence

Trio from Austin Company Form Building Corporation

Radio Concern Rents All of Four Story Building

C. F. Durland & Co. report having leased the entire four story building, containing 12,500 square feet, at 215 West Huron street to the Shure Brothers' company, makers of radio parts, for a term of years.

REPORTS ACTIVITY IN FARM LAND SALES IN M'HENRY COUNTY

McHenry county is having a lively farm land market reports Dan Quinlan of Woodstock. And he backs up his statement with a list of sales of farm properties. He sold eighty acres on Northwest highway to John Markell of 1000 Main street, Evanston, and also eighty acres on the same road to Philip Dahlberg of 6600 South Claremont avenue.

The Julia Herrington farm, comprising about 320 acres in Hebron township, was purchased by Leeds Mitchell of Winthrop, Mitchell & Co., stock brokers, for a reported $24,000.

The Bert Thomas farm, just north of Greenwood, comprising forty-seven acres, was sold to Ed Prouty for more than $8,000 for land and buildings. Personal property brought the total sales price up to $10,500, Mr. Quinlan states.

"McHenry county surely is boiling with activity in land sales," said Mr. Quinlan. "They all want to get into the dairy business—McHenry county now has the greatest number of cows of any county in the United States—its land being adapted for that—pure water, blue grass, cheap lands, wonderful dairy barns, and silos."

Residence Sales on North Shore by McGuire & Orr

Among several north shore transactions reported by McGuire & Orr are the following: The ten room residence at 216 Lake street, Evanston, sold by Helen R. Warren to Robert B. Leffingwell; the residence at 624 Central street, Evanston, purchased by Edward H. McDermott of the law firm of Hopkins, Starr & Godman, from W. C. West. Clarence A. Hemphill bought a 75 foot lot on Tudor place, in McGuire & Orr's addition to Kenilworth Beach, and is erecting a nine room brick residence. Miss Lucille M. Larson of the Evanston office of McGuire & Orr negotiated these sales.

Glasner Forms a New Tool Manufacturing Corporation

R. W. Glasner, formerly president of the Marquette Tool and Manufacturing company, which has discontinued its Chicago manufacturing operations, has formed the Clearing Machine corporation and has taken over the building at 6499 West 65th street, in the Clearing industrial district, formerly occupied by the Marquette concern. H. P. Phelps, vice president of the Clearing industrial district, represented his organization.

Former Spaulding Gorham Head Opens a Jewel Shop

H. C. Tilden, former president of the Spaulding-Gorham company, has leased space in the Michigan Square building, Diana Court, for a jewel shop.

MUTUAL LIFE TO HAVE OFFICES IN FIELD BUILDING

One of the leading agencies of the Mutual Life Insurance company of New York has leased 8,000 square feet of space on the 20th floor of the new Field building and will occupy it about Oct. 15, according to Robert Carpenter, manager of that structure. Samuel Heifetz, manager of the agency, states that he will increase his personnel from sixty to seventy-five in his new quarters. He says business during the last three months has shown a substantial increase over the same period of 1932. Two other leases reported by Mr. Carpenter are to the Franklin County Coal company and Blyth & Co., securities.

LAKE-MICHIGAN BUILDING 100 PER CENT NRA

The Lake Michigan building, at the southwest corner of Michigan avenue and Lake street, has achieved a 100 per cent NRA rating for its tenants, according to S. M. Becker Jr., manager. His statement followed a check-up on tenants of the building, which houses more than 1,000 persons and scores of business firms.

Vogue Wright Studios Inc. Lease America Fore Space

The Vogue-Wright Studios, Inc., have leased approximately 14,000 square feet of space on the sixth floor of the America Fore building. The lessee, an affiliate of the Electrographic corporation of New York, will occupy this space for the executive offices of its advertising counselors, as well as their commercial art and photographic departments.

A. W. Dungan, president of the firm, announces that they will take possession when alterations are completed about Oct. 1. Howard L. Storch, manager of the building for Ross & Browne, agents, represented all parties.

Bills Realty Announces Two More Branch Offices

The Bills Realty, Inc., with main office at 134 South La Salle street, has just opened two additional branch offices at 1920 East 71st street and at 3346 Lawrence avenue. Ralph Silverwood, a graduate of the University of Chicago, is in charge of the south side office. The northwest side office will be managed by C. O. Balyeat, formerly with Lino Brothers. The company now has five branch offices and contemplates more.

Syndicate Buys Vacant on Kinzie and Austin

A syndicate of Chicagoans yesterday purchased 64,000 square feet of vacant fronting on both Kinzie and Austin, between Hoyne and Damen, from Ruth Abendroth for a reported $12,000. The Chicago Title and Trust company took title for the purchasers. This property was sold to Ruth Abendroth on June 27 by the David H. Fritts estate. The First Realty company was broker in yesterday's transaction.

Contracts Awarded

Contracts awarded in Chicago the week of Sept. 8 to 14, according to figures supplied by the F. W. Dodge corporation, totaled 27, with a combined cost of $169,600.

BUILDING IN SUBURBS MAKES A POOR SHOWING

August Permits Are Less than July.

August building figures in the Chicago suburbs make gloomy reading no matter how they're arranged. When compared with the preceding month of July, the August total of $293,972 shows a loss of $58,603. When a comparison is made with August of last year, the result is still more depressing, for the discrepancy mounts to $220,426.

J. F. BERGIN.

A few suburbs registered a gain in their August figures over the same month of last year. A few more showed an increase as compared with the preceding month of this year.

Following are the figures so far this year compared with the same months of 1932:

	1933.	1932.
January	$235,000	$270,000
February	305,000	307,000

That beer can be a factor in building operations in the suburbs as well as in Chicago is indicated by the report of Joseph Bergin, building inspector of Chicago Heights. That community takes the lead in August with a report of new building amounting to $29,400, of which $25,000 is represented by a brewery under construction.

Comments on Fair.

Mr. Bergin, in making his report on building conditions in his town, comments on A Century of Progress as follows: "The World's Fair gives a practical demonstration in beautifully designed and soundly constructed homes of what the homebuilder of the future can do with a little money.

"It's to the suburbs that people will have to move if they want to live in modern homes and the desire to own them will be a powerful force for the upbuilding of villages like Chicago Heights."

Robert L. Anderson, building inspector for Winnetka, had this to say: "Many residential additions and alterations are included in this month's report and more are pending. Apparently confidence in better times has caused owners to commence on delayed but much needed improvements."

42 GARDENS ARE ADDED TO HONOR ROLL BY TRIBUNE

72 Given Honorable Mention Rating.

BY EVERETT SWINGLE.

Judges completing their work in the seventh semi-annual Chicago Tribune Flower Garden Honor Roll competition for amateur home gardens within a forty mile radius of Tribune Tower today announce the addition of 42 names to the permanent list of outstanding gardens. Fourteen selected for recognition are on the south side of the city or suburbs.

With these 42 THE TRIBUNE has recognized a total of 259 gardeners whose handicraft has been judged outstanding. This fall 72 gardens also receive honorable mention.

The winners of the gold certificates, which are a part of the recognition, were forced to fight against handicaps greater this summer than in average seasons because of excessive heat and drought and the greater number of insects prevalent. Cracked earth, hosts of red spiders on evergreens and dahlias, mildew on phlox and zinnias, and a general spread of the insect thrip to nearly all gladiolus plantings were among the season's battles.

Find City of Homes.

In spite of these troubles south side gardeners, as well as those in other sections of THE TRIBUNE competition, revealed to A Century of Progress visitors from out of town that this is a city of homes, where gardening is as much, or more, of a hobby and pastime as golf or contract bridge.

Typical of the outstanding gardens is that of Mrs. C. E. Cox, 9821 South Leavitt street, where the simple but colorful treatment in front of the house announces the well planned and neat garden in the rear.

A fight against the well known "prairie," as home owners in the newer settled portions of Chicagoland refer to unsettled lots and subdivisions, has been won by Mrs. Charles L. Van Wie at 12106 South Ann street, Blue Island. Years of work have provided a good background, shutting in the yard from less colorful idle land.

Miss Frieda Kruger, 7430 Perry avenue, has accomplished, after office hours, an attractive home setting. Good care in combination with a simple but effective plan and good background make an outstanding yard about the home.

Alley Adds to Yard.

In Hammond an alley has been made an attractive portion of the yard by the work of Burton J. Hilliker, 223 Oakwood street. Colorful borders and a pleasant and attractive partial screening of the house foundation helped to swell the score in the judging of the yard. The south side honor roll:

Mrs. G. Carlson, 7735 South Park avenue; Mrs. C. E. Cox, 9821 South Leavitt street; Mrs. W. J. Evans, 4564 Grand avenue, Western Springs; C. S. Fletcher, 6231 Forest avenue, Hammond, Ind.; Burton J. Hilliker, 223 Oakwood street, Hammond, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. John Hills, 2309 Washington street, Joliet; Mrs. E. L. Jansen, 8312 Luella avenue; Mrs. A. Johnson, 8505 Vernon avenue; Miss Frieda Krueger, 7430 Perry avenue; Floyd Murray, 6528 Forest avenue, Hammond, Ind.; J. W. Ott, 431 South Court street, Crown Point, Ind.; Mrs. Charles L. Van Wie, 12106 South Ann street, Blue Island; Miss Daisy Wilson and Mrs. Linda Hindges, 313 South East street, Crown Point, Ind.; Otto Zeinke, 7537 Eberhart avenue.

Honorable Mention.

Beverly Hills Artists Hold Outdoor Exhibit

Beverly Hills artists are holding their second annual outdoor art fair this week-end on 95th street near the Rock Island station. Started earlier in the week, but postponed because of inclement weather, the show is under the auspices of the Ridge Artists' association and of the Beverly Sketch club. Oils, water colors, pastels, and sketches are among the genres on exhibit. Mrs. Maurice Le Bosquet, president of the Ridge Artists' association, is in charge, assisted by Mrs. Elizabeth Merrill Ford, Mrs. Joseph Barclay, and Arno Bretsnyder.

Little Alfred De Bard Briggs Jr. and his mother offer a charming version of the "mother and son" theme so often celebrated by the greatest painters. For his beauty, health and vital personality Alfred was chosen as the outstanding child in the baby show held Wednesday at the Ridge Park fieldhouse, 96th street and Longwood drive, in connection with the Beverly Hills Woman's club 22d annual flower show.

Three other winners in the baby show sponsored by the junior auxiliary of the Beverly Hills Woman's club. Roger Dawson (left), 11 months old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold V. Dawson, carried off the laurels for boys under 18 months. Sally Poly (center), at three and a half, exhibits the curly locks and bright eyes of the beauty contest winner. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gus A. Poly. Mildred Anne Brower (right), aged 18 months, brought home a blue ribbon to her parents, the C. J. Browers. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

SOUTH ZONE WALTHER LEAGUERS WILL HOLD BIG RALLY TODAY

Members of the Chicago South Zone Walther league, several hundred strong, will assemble from all over the south side and its suburbs this afternoon at Faith Evangelical church, 8300 South Sangamon street, for the annual fall rally of the organization.

E. A. KUECKER.

Edwin A. Kuecker, president, will conduct the session, which is the organization's first of the season. There will be a business meeting at 3 o'clock at which reports and suggestions offered at the international convention in July will be discussed.

Afterward supper will be served in the church basement by the ladies' aid and the young people's society. A Century of Progress will be the theme of table decorations and of the program of music and readings following.

In charge of arrangements for the rally is a committee including Ernest Holtorf, Miss Mildred Glawe, Charles Amstein, Miss Marie Hager, John Schoenig, Miss Dorothea Misch, and Miss Lucille Reinhart. Miss Irene Eichman is publicity chairman.

LA RABIDA COUNCIL, K. OF C., TO HOLD BIG GOLF MEET TODAY

FRANK J. HEALY.

Members of Calumet, Englewood, Auburn Park, St. Philip Neri, Ridge and McHale councils have been invited to participate in the event. Automobiles will leave 1241 West 79th street at noon, and foursomes will tee off between 1 and 2 o'clock with Thomas Walsh officiating.

Dinner will be served at 7 o'clock in the country club dining room, and afterward prizes will be awarded. Chief Justice Denis J. Normoyle of the Circuit court and City Treasurer James A. Kearns will be among the members of La Rabida council to speak.

Grand Knight Frank J. Healey, officer of the council for 17 years, has appointed Harry C. Morton, past grand knight, as chairman of the affair. Mr. Morton has been director and president of the Knights of Columbus baseball league. Assisting him will be John J. Mackey, William McCoy, Thomas E. McMahon, and Edward J. Scahill. La Rabida council's headquarters are at 6236 Princeton avenue.

Alfred Biggs' Baby First in Beverly Show

From a score of the Ridge district's most charming babies young Alfred De Bard Biggs Jr. was chosen for first honors in the baby show held Wednesday afternoon at Ridge park fieldhouse, 96th street and Longwood drive. The contest was a feature of the 22d annual flower show of the Beverly Hills Woman's club and was held under the auspices of the junior auxiliary.

Chubby Alfred, who at 20 months weighs 31 pounds, received two awards—the blue ribbon in the division of boys aged 18 months to 4 years and the purple ribbon for the outstanding baby in the show.

Health and Hair Win.

His curly blond hair and dark brown eyes won him the judges' approbation no less than his health and jolly personality. Beauty, pep, and health were the points on which the judges made their selection. They were Mrs. Katherine Rickan, Third district public health and child welfare chairman; John Hoffman, photographer, and Mrs. Julius Hess, north shore matron.

Alfred is a credit to his father, Dr. Alfred De Bard Biggs, the pediatrician. He is the youngest of three children.

Another prize winner was Roger Dawson, 11 months old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold V. Dawson, 2300 West 111th place. He ranked first among boys under 18 months old.

Little Mildred Anne Brower, daughter of the J. C. Browers, 9506 South Winchester avenue, carried off the honors for girls up to 18 months old. She is just that age. Sally Poly, aged three and a half, was awarded the ribbon for girls from 18 months to 4 years old. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Gus A. Poly, 1708 West 105th place.

Mrs. Radden Winner.

In the flower show itself Mrs. C. F. Radden, 10226 South Irving avenue, received the grand prize for having the largest number of blue ribbon entries in the show.

Among the blue ribbon winners in group one, with its brilliant display of blooms and shrubs of all varieties, were Mrs. E. H. Kitzelman, Mrs. William Phillips, Miss Grace French, Mrs. Alice Howe, Charles Westrick, Mrs. Nicholas Jacobs, Mrs. A. G. Wehlner, Mrs. Ansley Hitz, Mrs. H. V. Schmidt, Mrs. William Hedges, Mrs. E. C. Decker, Mrs. Walter Heineman, and Mrs. Otto Henry.

Mrs. William H. Bateman and Mrs. George Heppes were blue ribbon winners in the luncheon table and mid night supper table class. Fruit and flower arrangements offered by Mrs. C. H. Nicholas, Mrs. Robert Cresap and Mrs. J. H. Helwig received blue ribbons.

Husbands' entries of flowers arranged in pitchers brought C. B. Armstrong the ribbon for a small pitcher arrangement and Ernest Toy, the violinist, an award for his large pitcher arrangement.

Margaret Hanert Wins.

In the children's division Margaret Hanert's children's table, set with small dishes 60 years old, received a blue ribbon. Walter Heckman's carved bird on a stick and Jean Gregory's rabbit container for flowers were similarly recognized.

In the display of fruits and vegetables Miss Ruth Moll, Mrs. Benjamin Buttles, Mrs. J. B. Morris, and Mrs. W. H. Sanders received blue ribbons. The Ridge park commissioners' display and bouquets from the Rock Island station gardens, which the Beverly Hills club helps maintain, received blue ribbons. The Boy Scouts of troop 623, sponsored by Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, had a display of insect life.

5 HYDE PARKERS NAMED TO STAFF OF NEW COLLEGE

Five Hyde Parkers, formerly of the Crane Junior college faculty, have been appointed to the faculty of the new downtown division of the Chicago Junior college (also known as Chicago Christian college), 71st and May streets.

The loop school will open Sept. 25 at 84 East Randolph street, with both day and evening divisions.

Dr. Frederick H. Wezeman, president of the college and its new branch, announced an enrollment of more than 650 students at the south side parent institution last week. Gilbert Brighouse, 7725 South Sangamon street, is dean of both colleges, and Henry A. Swets, 7251 South Wood street, is dean of the high school.

OBERLIN WINS SIX FRESHMEN FROM SOUTH SIDE

Registration of nine freshmen from Chicago, six of them south siders, was announced last week by Oberlin college at Oberlin, O. Signed up in the college of arts and sciences are Leslie Walker, 10734 South Wood street; Richard Eastman, 5817 Blackstone avenue, and Philip Crane Jr., 9436 Bishop street. South siders taking up study at the Oberlin conservatotry of music are Miss Rosalind Schmidt, 1849 East 50th street, and the Borroff twins, Katherine and Elizabeth, 7633 Oglesby avenue, who were graduated with honors from Hyde Park High school last year.

AUBURN PARK TRUST TO FREE ANOTHER 5 PCT.

"Juggling" Helps in One Case.

(This is the third of a series of articles on the condition of closed banks on the south side. It continues the analysis of the Bain banks, which will be concluded next Sunday.)

BY HERBERT VEDDER.

Depositors of the closed Auburn Park Trust and Savings bank, 734 West 79th street, will receive a 5 per cent dividend, probably within thirty days.

Irwin T. Gilruth, receiver for the Bain banks, will ask a court order when the fall term opens tomorrow. The speed with which the court acts will determine the date of the dividend.

This payment will raise to 15 cents on the dollar the total received since the Auburn Park institution went down with the rest of the Bain chain June 9, 1931. Two others, the Bryn Mawr and Brainerd State banks, have paid 10 per cent dividends.

The 15 per cent return to date for Auburn Parkers, probably as much as the depositors in any of the remaining nine members of the defunct chain may hope to receive for many a moon, if ever, is explained by another of the Bain jugglings to keep afloat.

Told to Unload.

Early in 1931 the Chicago Clearing House association served notice on Bain that the Auburn Park bank must clear its books of bad loans and other dubious assets or have its membership in the association canceled. The Auburn bank, being the Bain chain representative in the clearing house, this was done—by unloading the "junk" on other members of the chain, to the detriment of their depositors and the advantage of the Auburn depositors. Others were not members of the clearing house and not subject to its surveillance. They managed to get by examinations by hasty, temporary transfers.

The 10 per cent dividend amounted to $54,979.46. There is cash on hand now of $47,701.92, nearly enough for another 10 per cent, but the difference between that figure and the 5 per cent dividend to be declared will be taken partly by recently allowed small preferred claims, legal fees, and costs of distributing the dividend. A small sum will, however, be left toward future devidends.

Including the cash on hand and not deducting from liabilities the dividend to be paid the bank has "book" assets of $903,763.13, against its remaining liabilities of $494,125.25.

Practically speaking, however, the assets immediately should be reduced by $143,757.49, the figure at which the banking house is held. Nothing is expected to remain over the $250,000 mortgage, holders of which receive the benefit of rental from an undertaking establishment now in the old bank quarters. The $29,968.29 for furniture and fixtures is another item without value.

The remaining assets are more favorable—as favorable as could be in a bank whose holdings are represented by inflated realty values. The fact that only $90,000, or one-seventh, of stock, bonds, and loans is linked with Bain promotions of obscure value is directly traceable to the clearing house edict. It is matched in no other Bain bank.

Not a personal loan to Bain or his associates is listed among the notes and discounts of $169,553.17 except a judgment for $15,800 against J. J. McInerney, one of its vice presidents. During two years $110,000 has been collected on notes.

Stocks and bonds of $33,200.70 includes but $13,322 in Bain interests, scattered among Stony Island trusts 266, 148, and 16 and West Englewood trusts 1,082 and 687.

Many Good Small Bonds.

Among other bonds are village of Niles Center, $4,500; Seaboard Air Line Railway company, $4,962.50; St. Louis and San Francisco railway, $4,837.50; City of Bicknell, Ind., water works bonds, $3,275.

The real estate loans of $429,118 are no bouquet of roses, even though advances on inflated Bain projects were but $60,000, including $10,800 to West Englewood trust 1,002, about $30,000 on Auburn Park Safe and Securities company building, and $8,500 in bonds of the bank's own building, not a regular banking practice. Most of the other loans are on properties in default of interest, principal, or taxes and subject to sharp downward revision in liquidation. Title has been acquired to $25,000 in property.

Bills payable of $79,800 have been erased and another $26,212 disbursed to collections. Preferred claims of $63,403.95 and secured claims of $25,000 have been paid. Expenses have eaten up $33,582.17, almost balanced by regular income. In addition, the $54,979.46 dividend was paid.

Receipts have aggregated $330,660.09. Included are $145,132.02 from bonds and cash items and $128,026.85 from notes, discounts, and real estate loans on which there was a conversion loss of only $13,764.70, a low figure for even the "cream" of the assets.

The remaining liabilities of $494,125.25, including the dividend in prospect, are obtained by adding $15,383.35 in newly acquired liabilities to deposits of $675,424.87 at closing and deducting $88,403.95 for prior claims paid, $53,209.56 more for cancellation of offsets allowed, and the payment of the $54,979.46 dividend payment.

Payment of $5,550 has been made on assessment against the capital stock of $300,000—less than 2 per cent.

CHURCHES TURN ATTENTION TO FAITH HEALING

Fillmore Visit Focuses Spotlight.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Faith healing is a moot subject and the relationship between religion and "cures" of bodily ills probably will be a battleground for a long period to come. But whether such cures are brought about by divine intervention or not, and whether or not stated church leaders of the various denominations wish to take note the faith healing problem, it nevertheless is apparent that "]faith healing" of one name or another is having a primary influence on religious groups at the present time.

CHARLES FILLMORE.

This influence was observed during the last week when Charles Fillmore of Kansas City, co-founder of the Unity School of Christianity, lectured at the Fellowship of Faiths convention at the La Salle hotel. For the last three weeks, the convention has been presenting widely known religious leaders from this country and the Orient, and aside from the opening night when the highly publicized Maharajah Gaekwar of Baroda was the speaker, the attendance at sessions generally has been pitifully small. About 2,000 persons heard the wealthy Indian ruler.

3,500 Hear Fillmore.

But when, without advance publicity, Charles Fillmore was scheduled to speak at the faiths convention, Morrison hotel officials estimated the attendance to be considerably in excess of 3,500. Mr. Fillmore was forced to remain and speak to an overflow crowd of 1,000 more. In addition to the fact of the size of the crowd was the "difference" in the makeup of the crowd itself. The usual fellowship of faiths convention attendance has been principally that group best illustrated by its vigorous applause for Bishop William Montgomery Brown's communistic utterances. But the Fillmore crowd assembled in part in chauffeur driven automobiles. The fellowship of faiths group is seldom found in any of the churches. The Fillmore throng appeared to the reporter to be a remarkable cross section of Chicago Protestantism.

It is likely that students of the Unity school which Mr. Fillmore directs would deny healing as its primary emphasis. But the Fillmore school was founded as a result of a remarkable "cure" of tuberculosis wrought on Mrs. Fillmore. Later, Mr. Fillmore—who now is 88 years of age—"was progressively reclaimed" to bodily health after suffering from spinal curvature and tuberculosis of the hip, through his religious regimen.

In Established Channels.

Unlike Christian Science, to which the Unity school often is compared, the Unity school seeks to work through members of all churches instead of founding a new church or sect. Mr. Fillmore's success in gaining the attention of interdenominational groups was attested by the make up of the assemblages which heard him. Some of the denominations have founded agencies to work out the problem created as a result of the influence of Unity and Christian Science by founding denominational agencies looking toward healing. In the Episcopal church is the Guild of Health, led by Dr. F. C. Sherman of Cleveland. This guild approaches the healing matter in a way very easily understood by Christian Scientists and Unity students, but with an Episcopal flavor.

In the Catholic church, the fact of miraculous intervention in behalf of sufferers has never been doubted. Tomorrow at Columbus hospital, Peter Smith a New York boy, will testify how intercessions of Mother Cabrini wrought a cure in his behalf. Hearings are being held there in the process which may culminate in the beatification of Mother Cabrini. At least two miracles, painstakingly tested, are required as one condition for beatification.

Many Healing Shrines.

Numerous Catholic shrines of healing are found throughout the world. The Shrine of the Little Flower in France is notable for its cures. In Quebec, the shrine of St. Anne de Baupre displays hundreds of discarded crutches and canes and other aids used by cripples as evidence of the cures. But Dr. James J. Walsh, famous Catholic physician of New York, commenting on the discarded crutches, once said that people should take their crutches away with them after their cures "because they may need them again."

LUTHERAN PARLEY

The Chicago circuit of the Norwegian Lutheran church of America will hold its annual fall convention beginning next Tuesday and ending Thursday at the Church of the Redeemer, Berenice and Lamon avenues. The pastor of the church is the Rev. K. Figenbaum.

Discussions at the daily sessions will be on the theme of "The Christ of the Cross in a Confused World" and will be led by the Rev. Lewis Moe of the First Lutheran, the Rev. Sander Tollefson of Bethel, the Rev. M. E. Fretheim of Parkview, and the Rev. M. Norstad of Faith Lutheran church. At the convention the Rev. Roy A. Harrisville of the Edison Park Lutheran church will present a discourse on "Home Missions."

The Rev. Figenbaum, assisted by the Rev. Mars Dale, pastor of the Medill Avenue Lutheran church, will officiate at the communion service which will open the convention on Wednesday. The Rev. J. H. Meyer of Trinity church in Aurora is president of the Chicago circuit of Norwegian Lutheran churches, which represents 30 pastors and 5,000 communicants.

MANNING TO SPEAK

Bishop William T. Manning, head of the Episcopal diocese of New York is coming to Chicago Sept. 29 to be the speaker at the mass meeting of Chicago Episcopalians in the Chicago stadium, 1800 West Madison street.

This will be the first time that Bishop Manning, center of many heated controversies in New York and head of the largest diocese in the Episcopal church, has appeared publicly in Chicago in recent years. Because of the strength and wealth of his diocese, he is considered one of the outstanding figures in the Episcopal church.

The Stadium service on Sept. 29 is said to be the first public service of its kind to be sponsored by Episcopalians of Chicago. It is part of a program commemorating the 100th anniversary of the Oxford-Catholic movement. Bishop James De Wolf Perry, primate of the Episcopal church, is scheduled to participate.

MERTZ TO LECTURE

The Rev. James J. Mertz of Loyola university will lecture on "The Holy Eucharist in Art and in Daily Life" at the September meeting of the Holy Name Cathedral Converts' league. The meeting will be held on Thursday evening, Sept. 21, in the assembly hall, 11 East Chicago avenue, at 8 o'clock. The meeting is open to Protestants who are interested in the subject of the lecture as well as to all Catholics of the archdiocese. The lecture will be illustrated with stereopticon slides.

ORDER TO MEET

The Third Order of St. Dominic, one of the oldest associations of the laity in the Catholic church, will hold a regional convention Sunday afternoon, Oct. 8, at River Forest. The meeting, which will have delegates from ten states attending, will be held on the grounds and in the chapel of the Dominican House of Studies. Prominent members of the clergy and the laity will address the assembly, the first of its kind ever held in the middle west. The Very Rev. T. S. McDermott of New York City, provincial of the Dominican fathers and superior general of the Dominican fraternity in the United States, will preside.

The Third Order of St. Dominic was founded in the 13th century. Fraternities, with a total enrollment of more than 25,000 religious and lay members, are established in all parts of the country. The Third Order will hold a world congress in Rome in February, 1934, to observe the solemnities of the holy year and the seventh century of St. Dominic, the founder of the order.

The Very Rev. J. L. Callahan, prior of the Dominican House of Studies, River Forest, is chairman of the committee in charge of the arrangements.

The new season of the Hebrew and Sunday schools opens today, with William Nudelman as principal.

BESSEMER TOPS RACE FOR TITLE IN SOUTH PARKS

Ogden, 1932 Champion, Holds Fifth Place.

Bessemer park, 89th street and South Chicago avenue, runner up last year, is the 1933 leader of the race for supremacy in interpark activities of the 19 playgrounds in the south park system.

With Tuley and Gage next in line, making strong bids for top honors after their 1932 slump, the Ogden park champions of a year ago are resting in fifth place in the standings issued to THE TRIBUNE last week by Ralph V. Pierce, athletic director. Mark White square, 11th last year and 14th in 1931, probably is the surprise of the race, now being in fourth place, a notch above Ogden. Just 1,000 points separate first and fifth, and any one of these leaders may come through for the championship shield.

Bessemer Totals 14,491.

Leader in boys' events with 7,733 points, but tenth in feminine events with 6,758, Bessemer's total is 14,491. Tuley, dropped from third to ninth last year, is in second place with 14,050. Tuley was second in male standings and seventh on the other side of the ledger.

Gage, the 1931 champion, finished eighth last year but is in third now with 13,997 and given an excellent chance to better its position in the events not yet reported. The cause of the rise lies in improvement in boys' standings where Gage was 14th last year and now is third, the same as in the girls' side.

Best balanced is Mark White's record of fourth among girls and fifth among boys for a fourth place total of 13,538. Ogden, easy male leader a year ago, is fourth in boys' standings and sixth among girls' for its fifth place total of 13,487.

Palmer Girls Lead.

Palmer leads the girls' activities as usual, but remains in 12th place because the boys are next to the cellar. Of its 11,665 points, 8,334 were gained in girls' events. Davis, sixth place park, is the runner-up with 7,405.

McKinley park has suffered the greatest reversal in the standings, dropping from sixth a year ago to 18th now, above only Mann, the year's new entry in competition. Lyman Trumbull park fell from 4th to 14th, Cornell from fifth to 10th, and Calumet from third to eighth.

1932.	Park.	Totals.	Men.	Women.
2	Bessemer	14,491	7,733	6,758
9	Tuley	14,050	7,068	6,982
8	Gage	13,997	6,677	7,320
11	M. White	13,538	6,291	7,247
1	Ogden	13,487	6,457	7,030
7	Davis	12,854	5,449	7,405
10	Russell	12,596	5,982	6,614
3	Calumet	12,481	5,601	6,880
13	Grand Crossing	12,166	5,708	6,458
5	Cornell	11,945	4,703	7,242
14	Hamilton	11,792	5,862	5,930
12	Palmer	11,665	3,331	8,334
16	Fuller	11,125	4,756	6,369
4	L. Trumbull	10,783	3,933	6,850
15	Armour	10,168	4,937	5,231
16	Hardin	9,326	3,514	5,722
18	Sherman	8,885	3,885	5,000
6	McKinley	8,531	3,480	5,051
	James Mann	4,659	2,206	2,453

In computing the supremacy, 30 per cent is for victory and 70 per cent for reliability and wide participation.

End Round Robins.

Round robin championship tourneys begun early in the summer were wound up last week by the junior and and intermediate girls. The senior winner will be announced this week.

Gage won the junior crown, defeating Calumet in the finals, 18-5 and 13-10. Gage eliminated White and Calumet put out Palmer in the semi-finals. Members of the Gage team: Marie Conway, Rose Jupin, Josephine Ondrasek, Sophia Cscvara, Gertie Urbik, Alvina Bedner, Irene Vascura, Grace Kaplan, Frances Kaplan, Josephine Kobylarczyk, and Dorothy Terendy.

The intermediate title went to Russell, which beat Cornell in the final, 14-29, 23-8, and 18-5. In the semi-finals Cornell upset Fuller and Russell crushed Palmer's title hopes.

50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

MR. AND MRS. HENRY PLENZ. [Beecher Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Plenz, 923 East 83d street, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last Sunday with a dinner and dance at the Windermere East hotel for 100 relatives and friends. The bride of half a century age wore a pansy-blue velvet gown and part of her wax wreath of orange blossoms, worn at the wedding, were painted gold and used as a coronet last Sunday, as may be seen in the picture. The Plenzes both were born in Cologne, Germany, and came to Chicago a year after their wedding. They have a son, Dr. Henry Plenz, and a daughter, Mrs. John Reize, of Chicago. There are two grandchildren.

Mrs. B. W.—Is it necessary to wait until a permanent is grown completely out before purchasing a new wave?
No. Rewaving revitalizes the hair and prolongs the life of your permanent.
Mrs. T. R.—What method of beauty culture system do you use in shampooing?
Our own. Through experimentation we have found a system that stimulates and serves as a tonic to the scalp.
Mrs. S. C.—What is the predominant style in hairdresses of today?
Victorian. We believe, however, that style in hairdressing should suit the woman's own personality.

CONGREGATION TO CELEBRATE 50TH BIRTHDAY

Immanuel Church to Hold Rites Next Sunday.

Immanuel Evangelical church, 70th street and Michigan avenue, will celebrate its golden anniversary at four special services next Sunday and a 50th jubilee banquet on Sept. 28.

THE REV. MR. SCHICK.

The church was organized Sept. 12, 1883, at 46th and Dearborn streets, remaining at that location until the congregation moved to the Park Manor location and erected its present house of worship in 1914. During its entire 31 years on Dearborn street the church had but one leader, the Rev. William Hattendorf. In 1914 the Rev. John Bollens became minister. He was succeeded by the Rev. George Hildebrand in 1922. Two years later the present minister, the Rev. Herman J. Schick, gave up the presidency of Elmhurst college to assume the Immanuel pulpit.

Elmhurst Leader to Speak.

Dr. Timothy Lehmann, who succeeded the Rev. Mr. Schick as Elmhurst president, will be the speaker at 7:30 o'clock next Sunday evening. The Rev. William Hathmann of Bartlett, Ill., who once taught in the Immanuel parish school, will speak at 9 o'clock in the morning, while the address at 10:45 o'clock will be by the Rev. A. A. Zimmerman of Pekin, Ill., president of the northern Illinois district of the Evangelical synod.

The Rev. Robert Clements, president of the Chicago Church federation, will speak at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when greetings are expected from Mayor Kelly and neighborhood religious groups.

At the banquet Sept. 28 a historical pageant will be given, illustrating some of the major events of past years in the church.

Property Held at $200,000.

A new parish house and parsonage were built in 1929 at a cost of about $90,000, and the church property is estimated at $200,000. Nearly 800 families are served, being drawn mainly from Park Manor, Hamilton Park, Englewood, and Beverly Hills. The church has seen 3,683 baptisms, 1,383 weddings, and 2,676 funerals.

The Rev. Mr. Schick received his ministerial training at the Evangelical seminary in St. Louis, for which Elmhurst college is a preparatory school. He also received a master's degree from the University of Chicago. Before assuming the pastorate in 1924 he headed Elmhurst six years. Prior to that he was president of the Indiana district of the Evangelical synod for 12 years, being located in Evansville, Ind.

3,000 8TH WARD RESIDENTS FETE ALD. D. I. SUTTON

Nearly 3,000 Eighth ward residents last Sunday attended the first basket picnic and field day sponsored by the Eighth Ward Civic Advisory council in compliment to Ald. David L. Sutton. The atmosphere of a Democratic jubilee pervaded the short program of speeches.

Among those appearing were Mayor Kelly, President James B. McCahey of the board of education; William G. Donne, state director of the Home Owners' Loan corporation; State Representative John G. Ryan [13th]; William H. McDonnell, south park commissioner, and Russell O'Brien, 3d district American Legion commander. President Emmett Whealan of the county board, Ward Committeeman James Sullivan, and Supt. George T. Donoghue of the south parks were scheduled to speak, but were ill.

The victory of the Novaks over the 82d Street Business Men's association baseball team for the local league title was the athletic highlight. Clarence Poffenberger was general chairman of the day.

EAST 79TH B. M. HOLD PROGRAM THIS AFTERNOON

The East 79th Street Business Men's association community day at the neighborhood playground, 76th street and Bennett avenue, will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Rain forced its postponement from last Sunday.

Congressman Patrick H. Moynihan [2d] is to be the principal speaker. The program will include presentation of awards to winners of the South Shore Y. M. C. A. Baseball league, sponsored by five members of the association, and an all star game between members of the five teams in the league. Max Schmidl is president of the business men, Elmer Walsh is chairman of the day, and Andrew J. Reed Jr. is master of ceremonies.

ALLEY ENHANCES HOME GARDEN SCENE

The work of Mr. and Mrs. Burton J. Hilliker, 223 Oakwood street, Hammond, illustrates a thorough neatness that has even extended to an alley planting on the west side of the home.

SOUTH SIDE HIGH P.-T. A. TO OPEN YEAR SATURDAY

Mrs. Bethke Hostess for Reception.

The South Side High School Parent-Teacher council of district 1 will open its fall season informally next Saturday evening with a get together dinner and reception at the home of the president, Mrs. William Bethke, 9317 South Damen avenue.

Members of the executive board and committee chairmen of the council, together with the presidents of all the south side high school parent-teacher associations, are being invited to attend the meeting with their husbands in order that they may become acquainted with each other before the actual work of the year begins.

Each guest is to bring part of the dinner, which will begin at 5:30 o'clock. Afterward there will be a brief business session and then a garden party on the Bethke grounds. Mrs. W. J. Wanninger, 7738 Chappell avenue, is chairman in charge of arrangements for the affair.

Legislation Is Theme for Year.

Mrs. Bethke will utilize the business interval to announce "school legislation" as the general theme of her program for the year. Elmer Schnackenburg is to be invited to address the council's first meeting in November at Bowen High school.

"Legislation and Leisure" will be the subject of the January meeting, home economics and budgeting, of the March session, and child welfare legislation, of the May meeting. At each of these authorities in the field are to be invited to speak.

Also there probably will be three evening meetings, at which fathers as well as mothers will be kept in touch with current problems.

Other Officers of Council.

Other officers of the council, besides Mrs. Bethke, are: Mrs. William Johnson, Lindblom, first vice president; Mrs. A. L. Fox, Westcott, second vice president; Mrs. I. L. Roberts, Parker, recording secretary; Mrs. William Abbott, Hirsch, corresponding secretary; Mrs. George F. Mundt, Parker, treasurer.

Chairmen include: Mrs. A. I. Olchovy, Hirsch, publicity; Mrs. H. J. Eckhardt, Calumet, membership; Mrs. H. E. Hillier, Morgan Park, parent education; Mrs. Henry Kellogg, Parker, ways and means; Mrs. Wanninger, Bowen, student aid; Mrs. J. R. Brown, Fenger, juvenile protection; Mrs. Robert McKinlay, Calumet, taxation; Mrs. D. Edwin Gamble, Morgan Park, hospitality; Mrs. B. W. Brown, Hyde Park, legislation; Mrs. J. C. Carroll, Hubbard, humane education.

The Southwest Parent-Teacher council has postponed its opening convention from next Tuesday to Oct. 17. The session will be held at Hope Reformed church, 78th and Lincoln streets, and will be an all day affair. The high spot of the program will be an address on "The Educational Significance of the Parent-Teacher Movement," by Mrs. Edward Jackson, third vice president of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers.

PARTY HOSTESS

Mrs. Claude Bender, 9032 South Throop street, was hostess to the South Side Catholic Woman's club at a luncheon and bridge party at noon Thursday at Glen Eagles Country club. Mrs. George Gibson is chairman and Mrs. Thomas Weinrich treasurer of the affair.

SALEM CHURCH CLASSES PLAN REUNION TODAY

The annual reunion of confirmation classes of Salem Lutheran church will be held today at the church, 74th street and Calumet avenue. The program will begin at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon, when refreshments will be served.

Pictures of former classes, dating back to 1888, will be shown on the screen at 6 o'clock. There will be a business meeting at 7 o'clock, with a musical program half an hour later. The choir will sing and Harry Johnson will be a soloist. Sixty-eight years old, Salem is the oldest Lutheran church on the south side.

Marder Memorial Club to Meet Tomorrow

The Irene Vivian Marder Memorial club will meet at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow evening at the home of Miss Jane Adler, 6122 Rhodes avenue. At the election of new officers last Sunday, Miss Sadie Silver was chosen president, Miss Ruth Eisenberg, secretary, and Miss Helen Greenspon, treasurer. Another business meeting to complete plans for the year will be held next Sunday afternoon.

THEY seem to be having a rare time in Cheltenham-South Chicago figuring out when is a dog. Not so long ago her pet hound brought three puppies into the world, and Lillian Nicholson, 8012 Burnham avenue, last week was confronted with FOUR summonses for not having dog licenses. The case of the mama dog isn't causing much argument, but the question of licensing the youngsters in the city collector's official family so early in life is a real bone of contention.

CLUB WOMEN OF ENTIRE STATE TO RALLY AT FAIR

Reception Next Thursday at Host Building.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

Illinois club women will rally Thursday at A Century of Progress. Several thousand strong they are coming from the Wisconsin border to the Egyptian line to participate in the festivities of Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs' day at the Fair.

Although the fall and winter season for the federation and most of its member clubs does not open until the beginning of October, this event is looked upon by club leaders as one of the stellar events of the coming year.

Invitations Are Issued.

Neatly engraved invitations, embossed with the golden eagle, were issued last week by Mrs. Carter H. Harrison, Mrs. Paul Steinbrecher, and Mrs. Herbert L. Stern, the state's official World's Fair hostesses, for a program and reception at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon in the Illinois Host building on the Avenue of Flags. This affair will highlight a day replete with interest for the club visitors.

Mrs. George A. Harriman, chairman of the literature department for the federation, and Mrs. William J. Piggott, the federation music chairman, are arranging the afternoon's program.

Luncheon in Trustees' Lounge.

At 12:30 o'clock there is to be a luncheon for the clubwomen in the trustees' lounge in the east wing of the Hall of Science. Mrs. Roy F. Hoadley of Yorkville, vice president of the federation, is in charge of the arrangements for the affair, assisted by Mrs. Truman F. Creager, treasurer of the federation.

Mrs. William Franklin Farrell, president of Illinois' club women, anticipates a record attendance, since the World's Fair day follows a two day conference in Chicago of the northern region of the federation.

Federation to Open Season.

The Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs will open its thirty-sixth year with a meeting at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning in the Eleanor clubrooms in the Stevens building. Mrs. John Van Wakeman as chairman of the day will introduce Otto L. Aken, superintendent of schools in Cook county, who will speak on "Home and School Projects."

A second speaker at tomorrow's meeting will be Mrs. F. H. Bradshaw, chairman of education for the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Burnett B. D. Warner, president of the Cook County Federation, will be the presiding officer.

The federation's ways and means committee with Mrs. J. D. Worden as the chairman is to have a card party at 1:30 the afternoon of Sept. 25 in the Eleanor clubrooms.

Coverlet Guild's First Session.

Dr. Russell H. Anderson, the well known curator of textiles for the new Museum of Science and Industry, is to open the year for the Colonial Coverlet guild with a lecture on Peruvian textiles at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in the museum in Jackson park. Dr. Anderson is bringing sample textiles with him to illustrate his talk. Assisting him will be Dr. O. T. Kreusser, the museum director.

Mrs. Frank L. Richardson of Evanston is beginning her second year as president of the Coverlet guild. Mrs. F. William F. Conlon is again handling the publicity.

St. Columbanus Parish Opens New Gymnasium

The new gymnasium and recreation hall of St. Columbanus parish, 71st street and Calumet avenue, was formally opened Friday evening. The new building was erected this spring and summer at a cost of approximately $20,000, with idle members of the parish being given much of the construction work. The formal dedication was postponed until last week, awaiting the return of the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Dennis P. O'Brien, pastor of the parish, who has been responsible for development of the young people's program of the church.

MARRIED

MONA MacMILLAN BOYLE.

Miss Mona Leis MacMillan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey MacMillan, 6228 Ingleside avenue, was married Sept. 9 to Charles A. Boyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Boyle of Buchanan, Mich. The bride attended Starrett school for girls and the University of Illinois, where she was a member of Alpha Xi Delta sorority. The groom attended the University of Michigan. After a honeymoon trip to Windsor, Ontario, the couple will live in South Bend, Ind.

PLAN SOFTBALL, TALKS, DANCING FOR FIELD DAY

Finals of a district softball tournament in the afternoon and a community program and dance in the evening will feature the second annual field day Saturday at Madden park, 37th street and Rhodes avenue.

Six ball games will be played, beginning at 1 o'clock. The two surviving teams in each division will meet for the junior, intermediate, and senior boys' and girls' championships of the near south side.

Nathan K. McGill, member of the Chicago recovery administration executive committee, will be the principal speaker on a program at 7 o'clock. "Citizenship, Recreation, and the NRA" will be the program theme.

Mayor Invited to Talk.

Mayor Kelly, and Supt. George T. Donoghue and V. K. Brown, director of playgrounds and sports, of the south park system, are others invited to speak. Madden park is a south park playground, and its director, Edgar G. Brown, is in charge of the day. Mrs. Alice Price, president of the Doolittle Parent-Teacher association and of the Grace Presbyterian Church Mothers' club, will be another speaker.

Both Rhodes and Vernon avenues, on either side of the park, will be roped off between 37th and 39th streets for dancing after the program. Leading orchestras in the community are to provide the music.

Turn on New Lights.

The new floodlights, just installed for night play, will be turned on for the first time Saturday evening.

The dolls made by Madden park girls, and on exhibit last week in the annual south park doll show, will be displayed during the day. Materials for the dolls were contributed by the Heman council and the Neighborhood Breakfast club.

Among those assisting with the program are four ministers, the Rev. J. A. Bennett, the Rev. H. R. Duval, the Rev. H. H. Porter, and the Rev. I. J. Hendon.

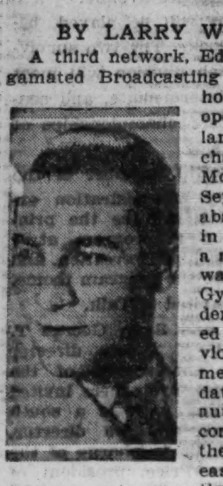
WYNN NETWORK WILL BE OPENED MONDAY, SEPT. 25

30 Major Features Are Promised by Chain.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A third network, Ed Wynn's Amalgamated Broadcasting company, will hold its formal opening of its Atlantic seaboard chain at 8 p. m. Monday evening, Sept. 25. In the absence of Wynn in Hollywood this announcement was made by Ota Gygi, vice president, who pointed out that previous announcements of opening dates were not authorized by the company. After the opening six east coast stations will be on the air from 9 a. m. to midnight daily under the auspices of the new net, Mr. Gygi added.



BERNIE CUMMINS.

President Roosevelt will speak during the dedication program, it has been announced.

Stage and screen notables who are to make their radio bow under the A. B. C. banner include McIntyre and Heath, Gus Edwards in "Shcool Days of the Air," Beverly Bayne and Pedro de Cordoba, Rita Gould, Rosamond Johnson and his Negro choir. Officials promise "more than 30 major features, embracing in all the scope of audible entertainment from soloists to symphony orchestra. Ed Wynn is reported ready to get out of the new company, having dropped a quarter of a million up to now.

Frank Westphal and his orchestra, pioneers of the airways, are reported out over at Columbia and WBBM. Carl Moore, the Arkansas batoneer and hog caller extraordinary, and his orchestra reported slated as Columbia's new studio orchestra.

Nice hearing Harry Sosnick on the air again. His opening at the Bismarck Tuesday evening turned out to be something of a preview of the new Olsen & Johnson-Sosnick show which goes on the air over CBS at 9 o'clock Friday evening, Oct. 6 from the Opera House theater. Olsen & Johnson will provide plenty of hokum. Olsen's line "Here comes Daniel Boone now," may become as well known as Jack Pearl's "Vass you dere, Sharlie." The King's Jesters and the Doring sisters gave a demonstration of the kind of a capella singing that ought to help keep the new show on the air all season. The inside story of how NBC's King's Jesters will be allowed to sing on a big Columbia network is a tortuous one we will not endeavor to detail here.

Bob Nolan's singing adds much to the Bismarck show. Eddie Gaar, one of the best of mimics, whom we had already heard over the air on Ben Bernie's show at 8, at the Palace at 10, dropped in and got a big hand for his impersonations of Ed Wynn and Chevalier. Bernie Cummins came in from the Aragon and told about good luck on his recent road tour despite 13 days and nights of rain in 16. Through the efficacy of W-G-N, he reported, great crowds turned out every night, 3,500 at Eveleth, Minn., a small town. If Cummins ever needs a double he will call on Marchmont Schwartz. Reminded of their similarity in appearance Bernie recalled that even Father Charles L. O'Connell president of Notre Dame had once commented on it. Bernie, after a month here, plans to go to New York for the winter season. Ted Weems, now at the Trianon, will follow Sosnick at the Bismarck in several weeks for the winter.

As a free lance announcer Jean Paul King manages to do extraordinarily well. For years he has announced Clara, Lu 'n' Em. Then he handles the WBBM Sunday fur show, featuring Lee Morse at 6 p. m. tonight. He also pilots the Contented hour at 9 o'clock Mondays, which becomes a coast to coast broadcast Oct. 2. And he will announce the new vacuum cleaner show featuring a cast of more than 100, including Joseph Koestner's orchestra, Noble Cain and Chicago A Cappella choir, and Edwards Davies, coast to coast on NBC beginning Oct. 8.

BRIEFVIEWS—Whiteman - Jolson - Taylor program—A big watermelon to Jolson for calling the formal Deems Taylor "Deemsie" but scallions to Al for telling that old chestnut, ending "Aw, let him make his own sandwiches." And thank you, Paul, and you, Roy Bargy for once more playing the incomparable "Rhapsody in Blue." Commercial announcements intriguing.

The expanded Lopez-Alice Joy hosiery hour. Much smoother music, thanks to additional strings; Alice's voice, deeper, softer than ever. Commercials: Pleasing voices, copy repetitious, inane.

Suggestion for Fred Waring's cigaret show sponsors: Fire Milton Berle today; let Harry Richman go after his contract of four weeks is up. Give Waring and his singers an extra half hour, to be interrupted only by David Ross' readings. Berle's jokes are the stalest heard up to now on the airways. Richman is all right on the stage, doesn't fit into the "smooth" Waring picture, and it's futile to have him read commercial lines when David Ross does it perfectly. "The Last Roundup," from the new Ziegfeld Follies as interpreted by Waring, is one of the finest things yet presented on this program. Charlie Agnew's version of this song of the range with Stan Jacobsen singing, is also a honey. We go for Guy Lombardo and Mark Fisher's arrangements of the number, also.

Clyde Lucas and his orchestra come from Hollywood to open at the La Salle and over WBBM next Saturday evening. They provided the music for "Grand Hotel," "The Wet Parade," "Blond Crazy," and other pictures. Lilyan Wolf is the girl vocalist with this band, a girl who like that other Lilyan—we mean Miss Tashman—boasts an extensive wardrobe. . . . Duke Ellington, back from a summer in London, on the air from WLW, Cincinnati. . . . Myrt and Marge will return to WBBM-CBS Monday, Sept. 25. Broadway will be deserted for a South American setting in the forthcoming series. . . . Easy Aces will be back on the air Tuesday, Sept. 26. They'll be heard at 12:30 p. m. this season.

With Carlos Molina taking Vincent Lopez's place at the Urban room and on the air, Corry Lynn [Cornelius Lynch to you south siders] is installed at the Hawaiian room of the Congress. Lopez has gone to Milwaukee but will return to Chicago each Sunday for his NBC commercial. . . . Clyde McCoy postcards that he is enjoying a motor trip through New England. He paused in New York to dine with Jack Denny and Jeannie Lang, and looked in on Phil Harris. . . . Those swell harmonizers, the three Morin sisters, are making a personal appearance at the State-Lake theater. . . . Phil Baker's show goes on the air from the Civic Opera house next Friday evening, with Ben Bernie and Sally Rand as added attractions for the visiting ham and dairy products salesmen. Sally will not attempt to put her fan dance on the air.

Wendell Hall will go on the WJZ-NBC-WMAQ network from 6:45 to 7 p. m. Sundays beginning Sept. 24 on a new commercial series. The Red headed Music maker is now heard at 2:15 weekdays on an NBC and WMAQ sustaining program. . . . William Adams and Marion Hopkinson will play the parts of President and Mrs. Roosevelt on new March of Time programs, to be directed by Arthur Pryor Jr., son of the bandmaster. . . . Charlotte Learn and Virginia Ware have rounded out a year as leading ladies in College Inn Comedy sketch. . . . Ben Bernie goes to Detroit for a theater appearance Oct. 6. Little Jackie Heller, who goes to St. Louis next week, will be with Ben. . . . Buddy Rogers will replace Bernie at the Casino.

Clara, Lu 'n Em are pondering this excerpt from a Jacksonville, Fla., woman's letter: "In my rock garden is a fish pond; in the pond three fish—Clara, Lu 'n Em; Flattered? I've often wondered if you'd be."

GARBER MOVES TO BLACKHAWK TOMORROW NIGHT

Kemp to Make Road Trip, Visit Carolina.

Jan Garber and his orchestra will open at the Blackhawk café tomorrow night and during the next few weeks Jan and his boys will be heard on all the W-G-N periods formerly held by Hal Kemp and his band. Kemp will be out of Chicago for several weeks, making a tour arranged by MCA and then going home to North Carolina for a two weeks' vacation before returning to the Blackhawk for the fall and winter.

Garber's band has been featured on the air for the last three months over W-G-N from the Trianon ballroom.

A newcomer to Chicago night club patrons is to be introduced by Garber at the Blackhawk. She is Ruby Wright, songstress with Garber's band. Lee Bennett and Rudy Rudisill are the male soloists of the Garber unit and also will be featured on the broadcast programs as well as the floor show at the café.

Will Present "Midnight Flyers."

At his debut tomorrow night, Garber will present the regular Monday night feature, the "Midnight Flyers" from midnight until closing, this program usually running through two and a half hours with outstanding stars of radio and the stage of Chicago participating as guest artists.

Kemp's final appearance of the summer season on the "Midnight Flyers" show last Monday night brought out the greatest lineup of stars ever featured on this show. More than 30 individual acts were presented on the program which ran for nearly three hours.

Back to Carolina.

Kemp and hs band have a heavy booking of road dates. Ater the road trip Hal and the boys plan two weeks of nothing but rest because it's their first time off in more than 2 years.

Kemp insists that all he's going to do on his two weeks off is go home to those hills of North Carolina and "take off his shoes and sit."

On the road tour Deane Janis, brilliant singer, who has been featured with Kemp's band during their stay at the Blackhawk, will be presented as one of the feature attractions of the orchestra.

GRIEG PROGRAM TO BE PRESENTED BY ORCHESTRA

The music of the great Norwegian composer, Edward Grieg, will be featured by Adolphe Dumont and the W-G-N Concert orchestra on the popular "great composers'" program over W-G-N at 7 Tuesday evening.

The program Tuesday will be made up entirely of Grieg compositions and will include "Triumphal March," from Sigurd Jorsalfar; "To Spring," "The Butterfly," "Norwegian Folk Song," "Norwegian Dances Nos. 2 and 3," "I Love Thee," "The Last Spring," "Erotic," "Solveig's Song," and "In the Hall of the Mountain King."

Tonight from 6:45 to 7:30 o'clock and again from 9 to 9:30 o'clock the orchestra will be featured in two concerts with music of the lighter classics. On the early program Mr. Dumont will feature a grand fantasy on melodies from "The Chimes of Normandy," "Dance of the Bouffons," and "The Swan." On the later program the special numbers will be "Liebesleid" and Rubenstein's "Kamennoi Ostrow."

IN TWO SHOWS

Alice Hill, the Alice of "Painted Dreams," home sketch broadcast at 11:35 a. m. week days on W-G-N, also is a member of the dramatic company which produces the "Heart to Heart Club," heard at 8:45 p. m. Monday nights.

LEONARD SALVO TO SIT FOR PORTRAIT IN AIR CARTOON CLASS

Leonard Salvo, W-G-N's popular organist, will actually sit for his portrait at 12:45 this afternoon in Tony D'Orazi's cartoon class, heard at time over W-G-N. The talented instructor has persuaded Mr. Salvo to be present and play suitable music as he gives his directions to the class. He'll play songs to indicate his hair, eyes, mustache, and other features while the class draws the picture. The finished cartoon will appear as the one accompanying this story.

F. X. BUSHMAN BACK TOMORROW WITH NEW TALES

Francis X. Bushman returns to his "Movie Personalities" program at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning after a long vacation during which his program was continued by Elizabeth Hines, former Broadway star. Mr. Bushman comes back with a lot of new anecdotes and in this week's program will tell about Alice White, Elissa Landi, and Douglas Fairbanks Sr., the latter being a friend of many years' standing. Miss Hines will continue to assist Mr. Bushman in his program, in the rôle of the young woman who asks the questions.

W-G-N BEAUTY EXPERT TO HOLD 4 FREE SCHOOLS

Meetings Will Be Open to Every One.

V. E. Meadows, well known beauty specialist who conducts the beauty course on W-G-N at 1:15 each Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, will conduct four schools of beauty in Chicago during the next two weeks, it was announced yesterday. The schools will be announced over the air and are open to the public free of charge.

V. E. MEADOWS.

Mr. Meadows for several years has been the adviser to many of Hollywood's movie stars. He has taught hundreds of the famous women of the movie colony how to apply cosmetics to their best advantage, and in his open meetings during the next two weeks he will demonstrate his advice on the use of cosmetics on living models.

During his lectures Mr. Meadows will tell his audience how to apply make-up which will last untouched for 24 hours, if necessary, regardless of heat, wind or rain. He will tell how to prevent freckles, how to guard against lines or wrinkles, and how to give new life to the hair.

The first of the meetings will be held tomorrow. The schedule follows:

Hotel Sovereign, 6200 Kenmore avenue, 2:30 p. m., Monday; 2:30 p. m. and 3:30 p. m., Tuesday and Wednesday.

Orrington hotel, Evanston, 2:30 and 8:30 p. m., Thursday and Friday.

Southmoor hotel, 67th and Stoney Island avenue, 2:30 p. m., Monday, Sept. 25; 2:30 and 8:30 p. m., Tuesday, Sept. 26; 2:30 p. m. and 8:30 p. m., Wednesday, Sept. 27.

Graemere hotel, Washington boulevard and Homan avenue, 2:30 p. m. and 8:30 p. m., Thursday, Sept. 28, and Friday, Sept. 29.

No admission will be charged to any of the meetings and women are invited to any of the sessions or all of them.

GRID PROSPECTS TO BE DISCUSSED BY HARRINGTON

With baseball rapidly approaching the end of its 1933 season, football is becoming the liveliest topic of conversation among the sport minded fans who listen to the W-G-N sport review at 6:30 every night. In keeping with the times, John Harrington, the sport reporter, will give listeners a detailed summary of the prospects of the Big Ten schools and other colleges that will occupy the limelight during the fall campaign. On Monday night the Wolverines of Michigan will be the subject of his review and from then on will come interesting stories of what's what among the other universities.

In addition Harrington during the week will interview several of the stars who will be carrying a great deal of the burden for Northwestern. George Halas, the owner coach of the Chicago Bears, will tell something about the professional titleholders.

Baseball will be represented on Wednesday night by Dolph Camilli, the first sacker of the Chicago Cubs, who has been making a fine impression at Wrigley field since he came from the west.

Fiorella, Marjorie Dodge on Variety Hour Tonight

Mario Fiorella, Pacific coast operatic singer, and Marjorie Dodge, soprano, will be featured with Frank Westphal's orchestra on the Chicago Variety hour over WBBM—CBS at 6:45 this evening.

Neighborhood Theaters

"Three Corner Moon"—the name is derived from a stock in which Mrs. Rimplegar invested and forgot about until a margin cover was demanded—is at the Tivoli this week. This pleasing comedy of the Rimplegar family and the effects of depression thereon was chosen one of August's six best movies. The children are Claudette Colbert, smitten by a would-be writer [Hardie Albright]; Wallace Ford, William Bakewell, in blonde meshes [Lyda Roberti]; and Tom Brown. Mary Boland cops honors, though, as the widowed mother of the brood. Richard Arlen, a physician, is the family savior.

Another Musical Revue.

Having had such a fall reopening success with "Gold Diggers" the Avalon now is showing "Moonlight and Pretzels," third of top-notch musical revues. Like the others, it has a young song writer who puts on a show of his own. In this case Roger Pryor rings the bell. The similarity extends even to a finale ensemble number. Leo Carillo, a Greek gambler, is grand as the show's angel when things look blackest. Lillian Miles, a real charmer, is the reason. Mary Brian is Prior's big moment. Added attractions include Jack Denny's orchestra, Herbert Rawlinson, Alexander Gray—and gals aplenty.

"Mama Loves Papa."

Two stars of comedy, Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland, combine to make "Mama Loves Papa" one of the funniest, most human little domestic screen dramas in years, according to Mae Tinee, who rated it one of July's six best. And it's a clean number, with choice dialogue. Ruggles is overrun with puns, which go completely over domestic mama's head—20 years of marital happiness is the record, until— A prize cast includes Lilyan Tashman, George Barbier, and Walter Catlett. It's at the Maryland and Jeffery today and tomorrow, and at the Grove Friday and Saturday.

Drama Down on the Farm.

"The Stranger's Return," developing a series of character studies headed by Lionel Barrymore, crusty civil war grandpop, is at the Tower this week, and Jeffery Friday and Saturday, the Grove today and tomorrow. City divorcee, Mirian Hopkins, immediately is taken into gramp's heart down on the farm, upsetting relatives' hopes. Franchot Tone clicks as the college educated farmer who loves and is loved by Miss Hopkins—but there is a sweet wife, Irene Harvey, and therein lies the "courageous ending" which is so lifelike. Stuart Erwin hits the spot as gramp's whisky loving farmhand.

Cagney Makes Movie Move.

With deserved popularity, "Mayor of Hell" is making a thorough round of south side theaters. Today and tomorrow it is at the Oakland Square, Shore, Frolics, and Lexington—and all week at the Metropolitan. James Cagney is the central dynamo that makes this movie move. And Madge Evans, comely nurse, is what makes Cagney move. Surprising how a gal can change even a grabby politician to a deputy commissioner actually interested in making a reform school a good institution! Other acting plums go to Dudley Digges, Allen Jenkins, and Frank Darrow.

FARLEY SPEAKS OVER W-G-N AT 12:30 TOMORROW

The address by Postmaster General James A. Farley at the Controllers Institute of America luncheon will be broadcast over W-G-N and the Columbia network tomorrow from 12:30 to 1 p. m., direct from the grand ballroom of the Hotel Roosevelt, New York. Mr. Farley, who will bring a message from the government to the assembled guests, will be introduced by F. J. Carr, president of the institute and presiding officer at the luncheon.

Lewis White Will Sing Aria with Grant Today

Lewis White, baritone, will sing the "Dio Pacente" aria from "Faust" at 10 o'clock this morning in his recital with Allan Grant over W-G-N.

ROSELAND POST TO HOLD HORNED TOAD RACE MEET

Speediest from All U. S. Are Entered.

Roseland post, No. 49, is preparing for a capacity crowd next Sunday afternoon at its Horned Toad Derby, to be held at Legion City, 127th street just west of Halsted street. The announcement says:

"Speed developed through countless centuries of scurrying across the burning sands will be a paramount issue as champions of the western states face the barrier in the Legion's benefit classic. Thoroughbred racers from all over the sagebrush sections are being carefully groomed and put in shape for those individuals and business concerns sponsoring toads in the race."

Funds derived from the event will be used to aid the post in furthering its activities.

Chicago Stock Yards Post, No. 333, will hold its annual meeting and election of officers Thursday night at 8 o'clock in the grand ballroom of the Stock Yards inn. A record attendance is requested.

Honoring its drum and bugle corps, which won second place in the parade and third place in the class B competitive drill at the state convention, Square post, No. 232, of the American Legion will hold its annual picnic today at the 40 and 8 chalet, Maple Lake, near 95th street and Archer avenue.

Russell Cook, 7827 Peoria street, chairman of the outing, announces that it will be an all day affair with competitive games and sports.

Square post has arranged a past commanders' night for tomorrow night in honor of Paul G. Armstrong, recently elected senior vice commander of the state department. The meeting will be held at 6115 Cottage Grove avenue, and has been arranged by Russell C. Smith, senior vice commander.

Woodlawn unit, No. 175, received citation for outstanding work in Americanism and child welfare work at the recent state convention in Rockford. The unit also received the Pearl Duncan traveling cup, putting it in line for winning a trophy at the national convention in October.

George A. Mueller was recently elected commander of Motorist post, No. 637; Edward C. Berger was elected senior vice commander, Louis Tobbe junior vice commander, Benjamin Martin finance officer, A. J. Hegelund historian, S. A. Dublinsky sergeant at arms, and Harold Watson chaplain. Joseph Koller was reappointed adjutant.

Glowing loveliness...

DON'T SPOIL IT BY TIRESOME TUB-SCRUBBING!

BAB-O BRIGHTENS BATHROOMS without effort

After the bath...you're deliciously refreshed! What a pity to wear yourself out, rubbing film and hard-water rings from the tub. BAB-O lightens this tedious task as no other product can. A sprinkle of BAB-O ... a wipe ...and tub and tiles twinkle...enamel and porcelain gleam instantly... easily! • Rust stains, cloudy surfaces, gloomy spots succumb to BAB-O. Household tasks are cut in half... pantry and kitchen will also sparkle. Buy a can of BAB-O tomorrow. You'll be saving money too...for a little BAB-O goes a long way! Once you try BAB-O, you'll never be without it.

Of course, you won't find GOLD in every hill . . .

. . . and you won't find United States' Rheingold Beer in every place where beer is sold.

Rheingold extra pale is as fine a beer as you can find on either side of the Atlantic.

But good beer must be handled and served correctly if you are to enjoy the fine flavor and refreshing stimulation which the Brewmaster's skill brewed into it.

That is why we restrict our outlets to carefully selected retailers who are qualified to serve you as our Brewmaster himself would serve you.

Rheingold is too fine a beer to permit careless handling, and we conceive it as our responsibility to safeguard its high quality until you pick up the glass to drink it.

Our salesmen are instructed not to sell Rheingold Beer unless the retailer has passed our requirements as to equipment for cooling and serving beer—sanitary conditions and proper knowledge of handling beer.

Rheingold is not a common name and not a common beer.

You won't find it everywhere—any more than the prospector finds gold in every hill—but look for the name Rheingold, and where you find it, you can depend upon a retailer whose place is sanitary and properly equipped to handle good beer, and who knows how to serve it.

Supreme comfort.. and Delco Heat

BURNS 95% AIR AND ONLY 5% OIL!

Delco Heat saves you so much it's hard to know where to begin. There's the business of playing stoker . . . Delco Heat saves you that! And the discomfort of waking up in a cold, bleak house . . . Delco Heat saves you that!

In addition to all this blissful comfort, Delco Heat saves you real hard dollars. For—believe it or not—Delco Heat actually burns 95% air to only 5% oil.

The "Delco Fuel Control" takes care of that. It's an ingenious device resulting from Delco Engineers' long experience with the combustion of liquid fuels. It meters the oil always at the exact pressure and mixture necessary for complete, efficient combustion.

Come in and see Delco Heat perform. So quiet. So sturdily built—and so simple. Only one moving part!

Then let our factory-trained mechanics install Delco Heat in your furnace, be it hot water, steam or warm air.

Take another look at the man in the photo above. Then clip the coupon below—and get ready to laugh at winter!

AND THERE'S JUST ONE THING MORE, SLICER— WHERE DID YOUR GANG OF CAR THIEVES COME FROM?
YEAH— OUT WITH IT— SLICER! OR WE'LL KEEP YOU UP ANOTHER TWENTY FOUR HOURS!
I'LL TELL EVERYTHING IF YOU'LL JUST LEAVE ME ALONE—MY GANG ALL CAME FROM RIGHT HERE IN TOWN.. LOCAL BOYS.. WITH HEADQUARTERS AT THE OLD ICE FACTORY ON GROIN AVENUE... JUST NORTH OF TENTH STREET.... NOW PLEASE LET ME REST.. GIVE ME WATER... LET ME LIE DOWN!
CERTAINLY— WHY NOT, SLICER?
WELL—THERE YOU ARE, TRACY! YOU'VE GOT THE DOPE ON THIS CAR THIEF RING—NOW GO GET THEM!
LISTEN—THAT'S EXACTLY WHAT I INTEND TO DO.. BUT REMEMBER, CHIEF, THIS RING OF AUTOMOBILE SNATCHERS IS THE SLICKEST OUTFIT WE'VE EVER RUN UP AGAINST IN THIS TOWN—AND IT'S GOING TO TAKE SOME HEAVY SCHEMING TO HAUL THEM ALL IN!
CHIEF, I THINK I'VE GOT IT! YOU RECALL SLICER SAID THE BOYS WERE HAVING A MEETING TONIGHT? NOW, MY SCHEME IS THIS.....
I'M ALL EARS, KID—
THAT NIGHT! INSIDE THE OLD ICE FACTORY—A GRIM, SHIFTY-EYED GROUP SIT AROUND A LAMP-LIGHTED TABLE....
YEAH—THEY GOT SLICER ALL RIGHT, BOYS—AND IF THEY MAKE 'IM TALK—THEY'LL BE AFTER US! NOW I WANT YOU TO REMEMBER THIS... IF THAT FLATFOOT, TRACY, IS PUT ON THIS JOB... WE MUST MAKE IT HIS LAST JOB—GET ME?
HEY, DUKE! COME OUT HERE QUICK!
LISTEN TO THE POLICE CALL COMING OVER THAT LOW WAVE RADIO SET IN MY CAR!
OPERATIVE NO. 24 GO TO THE OLD ICE FACTORY AT GROIN AND TENTH—INVESTIGATE MEETING THERE..... OPERATOR NO. 24 GO TO GROIN AND TENTH——
HOW LONG HAS THIS BEEN GOING ON, DOC?
OH, ABOUT TEN MINUTES— I COULDN'T BELIEVE MY EARS AT FIRST!
HEY, DUKE! THERE'S SOMEONE KNOCKING ON THE GATE!
ALL RIGHT— OPEN 'ER UP, DOC, AND IF IT'S THE FLATFOOT, BOYS, LET 'IM HAVE IT!
WHAT? HOLY JUMPIN' GEE! IT'S THE SLICER—CHEE, SLICER, HOW DID YOU GET OUT? PUT YOUR GUNS AWAY, BOYS!
YES—PUT YOUR GUNS AWAY, BOYS—AND YOUR HANDS UP IN THE AIR! AS SOON AS I GET THIS PUTTY OFF MY FACE, AND THIS WIG OFF—I'LL CLEAR THINGS UP FOR YOU!
HEY! DAT AIN'T SLICER.
YOU SEE—I HAD THAT CALL SENT OUT OVER THE RADIO—KNOWING YOU BIRDS WOULD ALL COLLECT AROUND THIS GATE AND I COULD NAB YOU IN A GROUP. OF COURSE DISGUISING MYSELF LIKE YOUR PAL, SLICER, WAS JUST TO GET ME INSIDE THE GATE WITHOUT GETTING SHOT! COME ON, MILLIGAN!
TRACY!

I WISH YOU COULD, DARLING. BUT — MAYBE SOON
JOHN, I DO WISH WE COULD START LITTLE DORA'S MUSIC LESSONS
BUT I DON'T SEE HOW WE CAN AFFORD IT, SUE — I'VE GOT TO PAY THE INSURANCE THIS MONTH — AND THE DOCTOR, TOO
OH, OH — WHY IF THIS IS TRUE, I THINK I SEE A WAY TO SAVE SOME MONEY FOR DORA'S MUSIC LESSONS. I'LL SEND FOR THAT BOOKLET RIGHT AWAY!
WHAT SUE READ
NEW "BUDGET-BREAKFASTS"! MAKE HOUSE-MONEY GO FARTHER
Fully Nourishing Breakfasts at Low Cost Make Big Savings
Save tidy sums of money out of what you ordinarily spend for breakfast, but without curtailing necessary morning nourishment! The concentrated nourishment which Grape-Nuts provides takes care of that — in new, planned, low-cost meals. Write for "A Month of Budget-Breakfasts."
SEVERAL WEEKS LATER
WHAT A BREAKFAST! AND WHAT A DELICIOUS CEREAL THIS GRAPE-NUTS REALLY IS!
OH MUMMY! I'M SO GLAD I CAN START MY MUSIC LESSONS TOMORROW!
BUT SUE DEAR, WE AGREED THAT WE COULDN'T AFFORD TO HAVE DORA TAKE MUSIC LESSONS
BUT JOHN, WE CAN AFFORD IT, SINCE I DISCOVERED THESE GRAPE-NUTS 'BUDGET-BREAKFASTS' YOU ENJOY SO MUCH. THEY'RE ACTUALLY SAVING ME ENOUGH TO PAY FOR DORA'S MUSIC LESSONS!
GREAT HEAD-WORK, SUE!
HUSBANDS CHEER THESE NEW BUDGET-BREAKFASTS!
HERE'S BUDGET-BREAKFAST No. 4
Sliced Peaches
Grape-Nuts with Milk and Sugar
Baking Powder Biscuits . . . Butter
Coffee, or Postum Made-With-Milk
No skimping on the morning nourishment your family needs when you serve them these delicious "Budget-Breakfasts" with Grape-Nuts!
For, Grape-Nuts gives concentrated nourishment. A single portion — just two rounded tablespoons — with milk and sugar, actually gives more varied nourishment than many a hearty meal!
Get Grape-Nuts from your grocer today — serve "Budget-Breakfasts" beginning tomorrow morning. Your family will love them — so stick to them — they should help a family of four save from $2 to $8 a month! Grape-Nuts is a product of General Foods.

HERE'S WHERE WE HAVE SOME REAL SPORT, DOTTY - YOU JUST WAIT HERE - I WON'T BE GONE LONG - NOW WHAT ARE YOU UP TO, TIM?
WHILE THERE'S NOBODY HOME I'M GOING TO PLAY A LITTLE HOOKY BEFORE THEY COME BACK -
I GUESS THIS ONE IS JUST ABOUT THE RIGHT SIZE -
WHEW! WHAT A JOB THAT WAS BENDING THIS PIN INTO A HOOK -
AND A PIECE OF THIS STRONG THREAD WILL BE JUST THE THING FOR MY LINE -
IT ISN'T MUCH OF A ROD - BUT IT'LL DO THE TRICK ALL RIGHT -
LUCKY THE MAID HASN'T SWEPT UP YET - WHAT COULD BE SWEETER BAIT THAN THIS BIG COOKIE CRUMB -
ALL SET! NOW TO TRY MY LUCK -
SH-H-H - NOT SO LOUD - SIS - YOU'LL SCARE 'EM AWAY CAN'T YOU SEE THEY'RE GETTING READY TO NIBBLE ON THE BAIT -
NOW YOU STOP TEASING THOSE LITTLE GOLDFISH, TIM, I THINK IT WILL SERVE YOU JUST RIGHT IF THEY PULL YOU INTO THE BOWL -

AIN'TCHA COMIN' OUT AN' PLAY AGAIN AFTER SUPPER, PERRY?
NO SIR!! THERE'S GONNA BE SOMETHIN' SWELL ON TH' RADIO TONIGHT ALL ABOUT DAREDEVIL DAVE IN TH' LAND OF WONDERS!! I'M GONNA STAY IN AN' LISTEN TO THAT!!
PAW, I WISH YOU'D DO SOMETHING ABOUT PERRY! IT'S PAST HIS BEDTIME AN' HE'S IN TH' LIVING ROOM INSISTING ON LISTENING TO SOME FOOL THING ON TH' RADIO!!
OH, HE IS, HUH?
I'LL GO IN AN' GIVE HIM A GOOD TALKIN' TO, AN' MARCH HIM STRAIGHT TO BED!!
"SO THIS IS THE CAVE OF THE WINDS, EH, DAVE? I'M SURE THE SECRET TUNNEL WHERE THE MAD MONK HID THE STOLEN RUBIES IS SOMEWHERE ALONG THIS PASSAGE!.... SH-HH! EASY NOW! IF THAT RASCALLY SAILOR, BLOODSHOT, SHOULD CATCH US IN HERE, WE'D BE SUNK!!... LOOK! WHAT'S THAT BLACK SHAPE THERE AHEAD OF US??"
AN' THAT'S TH' KIND OF STUFF YOU'RE LISTENING TO, WHEN YOU SHOULD HAVE BEEN IN BED LONG AGO! NOW YOU TURN THAT RADIO OFF AN' GIT RIGHT ON UPSTAIRS!!
AW GEE, POP!!
THERE!! NOW REMEMBER, I DON'T WANT YOU TO EVER LET ME CATCH YOU WASTIN' YOUR TIME ON ANY SUCH TRASH AGAIN!!
AW' A FELLER CAN NEVER HAVE NO FUN IN THIS HOUSE!
LET'S SEE NOW!! WHERE WAS THAT STATION PERRY HAD!! I WONDER IF DAVE FOUND THAT SECRET TUNNEL!!
H'M!! S'FUNNY, BUT I DON'T EVEN GET A PEEP OUT OF IT!! I WONDER HOW THAT KID GOT IT TO PLAY??
SEPT. 17-33
WELL, I GIVE UP!! I'VE TRIED EVERYTHING KNOWN TO SCIENCE, BUT I CAN'T SEEM TO FIND THAT STATION PERRY WAS LISTENING TO!!
-ER-UH- PERRY, HEH, HEH! WOULDN'T YOU LIKE TO COME DOWNSTAIRS FOR A FEW MINUTES AN' MAYBE PLAY TH' RADIO LIKE A GOOD FELLER??

AMBITIOUS ALMA

WORKING AGAIN TONIGHT, ALMA? HAVE A HEART—TYPE THESE—I GOTTA DATE
SURE! NOBODY DATES ME—BESIDES I LIKE TO WORK—I WANT TO GET TO THE TOP
POOR KID, SHE DOES WORK LIKE THE DICKENS, BUT THERE'S ONE THING HOLDING HER BACK
8 P.M.
OH, MR. ABBOTT—I'M JUST FINISHING SOME LETTERS—CAN I DO ANYTHING FOR YOU?
I'M IN LUCK! HOPED SOMEBODY MIGHT BE HERE—I HAVE SOME IMPORTANT CABLES TO GET OFF TONIGHT—COULD YOU COME RIGHT UP TO MY HOUSE?
WHEW, IT'S STUFFY! MIND PUTTING DOWN THAT WINDOW? SO THEY CALL YOU AMBITIOUS ALMA—YESSIR—I LIKE WORK
MARY, CAN YOU FIX UP THIS YOUNG LADY? SHE'S GOT TO WORK VERY LATE
GLADLY! I'LL HAVE EVERYTHING NEEDFUL LAID OUT IN THE GREEN ROOM, DEAR
WHAT A NIGHT!—BUT THAT GIRL'S A WONDER, MARY! I'D GRAB HER FOR MY SECRETARY AND DOUBLE HER SALARY, BUT SHE'S CARELESS ABOUT—
PERSPIRATION ODOR IN UNDERTHINGS! NO NEED TO TELL ME, JIM—PERHAPS I COULD DO A LITTLE MISSIONARY WORK—SUGGEST LUXING UNDERTHINGS AFTER EACH WEARING?
NEXT WEEK
LUX EVERY DAY HELPS A GAL ON HER WAY! BANISHES PERSPIRATION ODOR—KEEPS COLORS BRIGHT—CAKE-SOAP RUBBING OR ORDINARY SOAPS CONTAINING HARMFUL ALKALI MIGHT RUIN LINGERIE, BUT GENTLE LUX KEEPS IT LIKE NEW
6 WEEKS LATER
MISS ALMA, HERE'S SOMEONE WRITING ABOUT "GETTING ON IN BUSINESS"—ASKS WHAT YOU THINK MOST IMPORTANT
FIRST, HARD WORK, OF COURSE—THEN—PERSONAL DAINTINESS! A BUSINESS GIRL HAS TO WORK WITH OTHERS—SHE MUST NEVER RISK OFFENDING—OF COURSE, THANKS TO LUX, IT'S EASY
SECRETARY TO PRESIDENT
SO MANY SUCCESSFUL WOMEN SAY THAT—NEARLY EVERYONE USES LUX NOWADAYS TO KEEP DAINTY
P.S. I hear my story is to be used as an advertisement. I hope other girls will take this hint. I'd like them to know how easy it is to avoid offending from perspiration odor in underthings. That 4 minutes a day with Lux helped me win my new job!
Lux removes perspiration odor, keeps colors like new. Don't risk cake-soap rubbing or ordinary soaps—they're apt to have harmful alkali. Anything safe in water is safe in Lux.

"Prestige and Confidence"

As a leader in the Beauty Culture field, JOHN MUELLER'S reputation has very few equals.

His original ideas and extensive knowledge of the profession have marked him as one of the foremost stylists in America.

Many years of experience have enabled him to perfect a method of instruction in Beauty Culture which is recognized internationally. Only at can such expert training be obtained.

Again and Again

the finer Shops call us for operators. In fact, we are unable to fill the demand for our graduates. There is only one explanation.

John Mueller's System of Training in Beauty Culture

gives the student a BETTER knowledge of the profession—it teaches her the things a shop owner requires of an operator—it makes her a capable, efficient specialist.

John Mueller PERSONALLY supervises the instruction and progress of each and every student.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

I WANT MEN AND WOMEN TO ADVERTISE OUR GOODS AND DISTRIBUTE TRIAL PACKAGES

If you want work and will be satisfied with $6 to $9 a day at the start—with more if you make good—I'll give you a job at once in congenial, interesting advertising work distributing Trial Packages of my goods right in your own neighborhood. You can work full time or spare time and start making money the first day.

$110 IN ONE WEEK.

Just send me your name and I will lay bona fide PROOF before you. I'll show you how Sol Korenblit, of New York, made $110 in a SINGLE WEEK! H. L. Lennon writes: "I went out Friday morning and made $39.63 in 7¾ hours." Mrs. Eva McCutcheon, of Oklahoma, quit a $10-a-week office job and made $26.55 profit the very first day. Mrs. Jewel Hackett, of Ohio, cleared $33 in 7 hours. These exceptional earnings show the wonderful possibilities!

NEW ADVERTISING PLAN.

You may wonder at making such big money as this even in hard times. But my new advertising plan of trial packages is the answer. The "Trial Package" Plan is simple. You now need only be able to distribute trial packages of my line to people in your neighborhood. After they have used these products and see how they save money, they give you their orders for full size packages. You handle the money and deliver the goods. And you KEEP a big share of every dollar taken in as your pay. Pay for delivering 35 trial packages a day will be $8.75 a day—regular and steady.

SEND NO MONEY.

I don't want your money. All I want is a chance to lay the facts before you so you can decide for yourself. If you want an unusual opportunity to make $8.75 or more a day—with an old, reliable, million-dollar manufacturing company—then mail the coupon below and see how easy it is to start on my "Trial Package" Plan. You don't need any capital. Express start at once. Don't miss this chance. It doesn't cost anything to investigate, so mail the coupon today—RIGHT NOW!

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

AN OPPORTUNITY SELDOM OFFERED.

We are looking for five high grade men, one each for New England, New York state, Alabama, Georgia, and the Carolinas. The successful applicants will be men way above average in ability, with past records that prove this ability. They should be between 30 and 45 years of age, should drive their own car, and be prepared to start work at once. Their work will be calling on the executive heads of companies. The product is a tried, proved plan that is increasing the sales of hundreds of concerns under present conditions. Not advertising or premiums of any kind, but a complete sales promotion plan specially prepared for the oil and baking industries. The appeal is unique, and the results obtained most convincing.

Territories are fully protected; our men are given a thorough training; earnings are for above average, the basis being a liberal commission. To qualify you must have sold high grade specialties successfully. Preferably those who have sold advertising contracts, high grade office equipment specialties, intangibles, etc.

Our firm is highly rated, with a record of 30 years of successful operation, and a clientele of over 12,000 leading American firms. Applicants for the positions are requested to phone Haymarket 7855, Monday or Tuesday only, and ask for MR. C. J. RAFT.

opportunity for man who is sincerely seeking steady employment. If you have direct sales experience, average ability, and your needs require $30 per week or more, a ten minute interview will acquaint you with new possibilities. EARNEST MEN!

IF THESE INCOMES INTEREST YOU AND IF YOU BELIEVE YOU CAN LEARN TO FOLLOW SUCCESSFUL PROCEDURE, APPLY MONDAY MORNING. WE HAVE POSITIONS OF SPLENDID OPPORTUNITY FOR MEN WHO CAN LEARN HOW TO SUCCESSFULLY CONDUCT THIS BUSINESS!

These positions are permanent, immediate, substantial. Men selected will have to take time to learn, and during this period may have to be satisfied to get along on nominal earnings of $125.00 to $175.00 a month, if necessary. Amazing simplicity of our newest mechanical invention makes possible the addition of a few men to our organization. After the right ways of working and handling are learned and applied, there is the possibility of a substantial increase in weekly pay checks.

We have men locally making from $100.00 to $150.00 or more in a week. Pay checks ranging from $75.00 to $90.00 a week are ordinary, and often are received by men who never made that much in the most prosperous times generally. [illegible]

S. T. has earned as high as $345.00 in 10 days, [illegible]

At no past time during the entire period our company has been in business has it been so successful as at present. [illegible] Electrolux [not refrigeration].

In this work, no previous experience is required. We teach you this work thoroughly. [illegible]

Recently seven men were making money in three and a half days after receiving their preliminary instruction [illegible] To such men this opportunity will mean great happiness and success.

If you feel qualified and really want something permanent, come in for a personal interview Monday morning, Sept. 18, from 9 to 1. Call at Room 910 in the Engineering Bldg., 205 W. Wacker-dr.

MEN

We make a sincere, straight from the shoulder statement that it will cost men real money who are too skeptical to investigate this advertisement.

Some cash earnings for last week:
O. M. $502.80; H. S. J. $221.64
S. P. $429.04; F. W. D. $200.80
W. F. E. $336.37; A. B. $171.50

You will meet these men. Others whom you will meet and question, earned from $38 to $90 for the week. We invite the investigation of any one on the above figures.

AS MEMBERS OF THE NRA business expansion program, we find it necessary to expand our organization in and outside of Chicago.

OUR DEAL IS BRAND NEW AND OUR PRODUCTS ARE NEW AND AMAZINGLY DIFFERENT.

Only a personal investigation will convince you that this is the best proposition in America. We extend a challenge to good men to have us prove this. Our company enjoys the highest credit rating and is backed by men of integrity and aggression.

ABSOLUTELY NO INVESTMENT ON YOUR PART. We pay the rent, light, heat, stenographer, etc., place you where the business is and pay you daily. We want you to apply for an interview with men of good appearance and who have a sincere desire to locate a permanent connection.

Make up your mind to investigate this profitable business immediately. Monday, 9 a. m. to 12 ONLY. Room 609, 75 E. Wacker drive.

We can use a few men in Gary, Hammond, South Bend, Rock Island and Peoria. Write for appointment.

MEN LIVING IN WESTERN SUBURBS WILL BE SELECTED FOR THESE PLACES!

I wish men who will come with the same character and purpose that prompted four men to come recently into this work. I refer to Mr. Trenn, Mr. Newton, Mr. Richardson and Mr. Leon. They realized that there was a job to do, and they would be well paid for doing it. They did not have to question the financial responsibility of their employers, and they knew that past experience was of small moment except as it has molded character in them.

This is highly profitable for the right men—and I shall be frank in my personal talk with you, and if I believe you can do the work, we stand ready to go to work with you without a penny of cost to you. I can see you from 9 to 12 only, Monday, Sept. 18. Ask for Mr. Wilbor, Rm. 401, Lake-Marion Bldg., corner Lake and Marion streets, Oak Park, Ill.

4 MEN. Selling experience necessary. Unusual opportunity for men anxious to engage in permanent occupation. Men selected with best records will be placed in charge of districts with several men, which means additional revenue. This is not a campaign, but an established permanent job with the most saleable product this side of Chicago. Working through the stores of the local gas company. Apply Monday between 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. MR. J. V. MONAGHAN, Room 1213, Peoples Gas Building.

PRIDE

When an ancient sage opined: "All Is Vanity," he probably never expected to be quoted in an apartment house advertisement. Yet we moderns all enjoy the smug feeling that our home has a background of smart environment.

The buildings listed below incorporate just the features that make for pride in tenancy. Meticulously maintained, their general mien is one of comfort-a-plenty. Select the one whose accommodations suit your requirements and let its manager show you through.

1061 Rosemont
"The Coronado."
1-3 Rooms.
This newly furnished kitchenette apartment hotel enjoys a unique superiority in the locale it serves. Careful attention to detail and guest welfare has established a record of long-lived tenancy.

425 Surf-st.
"The Sheridan Surf."
1-3 Rooms.
A beautiful 9 story building overlooking Lincoln Park, close to Sheridan-rd.—20 minutes by bus to the loop. All units equipped and appointed to give comfort and smartness to these apartment homes. Extra large living rooms, large dinettes and kitchens, double or twin In-a-Dors. 24 hour switchboard and elevator service. Priced very reasonably.

2600 Lake View-av.
"The Marlborough."
3-11 Rooms.
Facing Lincoln Park, Lagoons, and Lake, one of the finest buildings in the entire Lincoln Park Section. These apartments—in fact, the whole property, evince an unparalleled charm and distinction. Restricted tenancy.

180 East Delaware
3-6 Rooms.
180 E. Delaware presents an atmosphere of distinguished sophistication and charm. A home in this building guarantees the urban dweller that rare combination of facile comfort and convenience of location unequaled in Gold Coast Chicago.

5555 Everett-av.
"The Jackson Towers."
4-16 Rooms.
At 56th-st. and the Lake, overlooking Jackson Park and the lovely facade of the new Industrial Museum, this property typifies desirability in location and accommodation.

20 East Cedar-st.
8-14 Rooms.
Duplex Arrangement.
[Short waiting list for 6 rooms.]
Just off Lake Shore-dr., a 21 story building of fine apartment homes embodying all the meanings of the word home. Here is maintained an atmosphere of Refined Comfort and Luxury almost suburban in Nature.

A Manager at Each Building.

NEAR NORTH SIDE

How would you like an apartment just flooded with light and sunshine, with a marvelous living room, fireplace and a bay with glimpses of the lake over the house-tops, or a little 2 story bungalow, one furnished, tucked away in a little quiet court? A studio with lofty ceilings and balconies, or a cozy little studio, all so near the loop that you actually walk to your office, and your leisure time is not spent in walking back and forth.

Partnerships and Investments.

An Unusual Business Opportunity

Because of the serious illness and recent market losses of the owner, one of the country's foremost financial advertising agencies and direct mail concerns, 14 years old, offers an unusual partnership opportunity or outright sale of the business at a small fraction of its $50,000 inventory valuation. . . . Reputation of the firm in banking field is unusually high, and value of name and good will alone is worth thousands of dollars. . . . Owner's inability to finance completion and marketing of certain products and services now badly needed by banks generally for immediately increasing their banking income, which products have unusual profit possibilities for our business, is also a factor in this decision. . . . Equipped with an experienced staff of writers and artists, with printing mailing departments, etc., this business offers an unusual opportunity for quick development into a profitable and expanding general advertising agency, direct mail or mail order business. . . . Present owner will remain with business until new owners become adjusted. . . . An outstanding proposition that will stand the strictest investigation. . . . Complete information will be given to parties seriously interested. . . . Address L G 121, Tribune.

$150 Buys This Complete Business

I have a complete business, something good that any man or woman or husband and wife working together can set up in their kitchen at home on which you can make up to $25 to $30 a day. For $150 you get absolutely everything you need to start out and make a good profit the first week. This is no "scheme" or "slick proposition," but a legitimate, stable business. You manufacture at home an absolutely new food product. Looks and tastes like nothing you ever saw or heard of. Put it up in sacks and leave it with grocers, delicatessens, beer taverns, etc. They sell it for you at a big profit per dozen and it sells like wild fire. Derry now selling 600 dozen a week. Lambert sold 1,896 dozen first 6 weeks. Took in $1,011.20 in cash. No experience needed, as I show you how and start you off right. Call in person at Room 812 Boyce Bldg., 54 W. Illinois-st., or write. Ask for Mr. Archer.

Tents and Bungalows Serve for Classrooms

Sink or Swim Fate Assigned to All Fruits

By MARY MEADE.

To sink or not to sink? That's the question—not one William S. had to answer for Hamlet, but one each neat section of fruit that goes into wigglesome gelatin molds these days has to answer for itself. And the result is—plenty of fun for everybody! For the latest and merriest thing out is self-layered salads and desserts. And the way it works—until you get the key to it—seems pure magic.

Just, for instance, fruits, speaking from the aristocratic viewpoint of gelatin dishes, separate themselves into two schools—the ones that take the high road and sail to the top, and the ones which take the low road and wander to the bottom of the dessert, salad or what-not.

Get Layered Colors.

The new game, therefore, is to pair off fruits by twos and twos—or maybe fours and fours—and tumble them gleefully into the quivery mixture.

And the secret is—know your fruits! The ones heavier than the gelatin mixture slide for the bottom. These are usually the canned fruits, which have adopted a considerable supply of sugar to weight them down. Those lighter than the gelatin mixture rise to the top and salute.

Classify Fruits.

So let's set fruits down in their respective classes.

THESE TAKE THE HIGH ROAD
[and float in gelatin]

Diced raw apples.
Broken nuts [pecans, almonds, etc.]
Fresh sectioned grapefruit.
Sliced bananas.
Fresh sectioned oranges.
Sliced fresh pears.
Halved fresh strawberries.
Cubed marshmallows.
Fresh raspberries.

THESE TAKE THE LOW ROAD
[and sink in gelatin]

Prunes, cooked.
Cherries, maraschino.
Cherries, canned.
Cherries, Queen Ann.
Pineapple, canned.
Blackberries, canned.
Raspberries, canned.
Apricots, canned.
Peaches, canned.

Which starts the ball rolling, for with two such lists it now remains simply to pair them off in combinations which will appeal to eyes and palates, and then select the gelatin for the go-between to best flatter them. And even here we have much latitude, for gelatins appear in lemon, lime, cherry, raspberry, orange, strawberry, chocolate, coffee, and sundry other popular hues and taste sensations. They come ready sugared, flavored and tinted, and ask merely that boiling or lukewarm water (depending on the brand) be added, fruit or nuts be tumbled in, and the whole thing be given a chilly session in the refrigerator before unmolding for its debut.

Here Are Samples.

So let's try a few of the prize combinations just to start us in the spirit of adventuring. First we present a green, white and golden temptation:

BANANA-PEACH LAYERS.

2 cups water.
½ cup sliced canned peaches
1 banana, sliced thin.

Heat the water as directed on the package and dissolve the gelatin. Arrange the sliced peaches on the bottom of a simple mold—either a large one or numerous individual ones—and pour on the warm gelatin mixture, being careful not to disarrange the peaches. Add the banana, letting the slices float evenly over the surface. Chill till firm. To serve, unmold and top with a flourish of whipped cream, if desired. This serves six.

Or have you tried:

LAYERED APRICOT AND PEACH SPECIAL.

1 package orange flavored gelatin.
2 cups water.
6 halved canned apricots.
¼ cup broken pecan meats.

Heat the water as directed on the package, and dissolve the gelatin in it. Arrange the half apricots in individual molds, round-side down, and pour over them equal amounts of the warm gelatin mixture. Scatter pecan sections over top and chill until firm. Unmold and serve. This will fill six individual molds.

ORANGE-CHERRY MOLD.

2 cups water.
10 maraschino cherries, sliced in eighths.
2 medium sized oranges.

Heat the water as directed on the package and dissolve the gelatin. Arrange the cherry sections in the bottom of the mold, and carefully pour on the warm gelatin mixture. Drop in the oranges, which have been carefully sectioned to remove all membranes. Chill until firm, and unmold to serve.

Winter Styles Rich in Fabric, Sirenish in Line

By BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The just-out Paris fashions for the winter of 1933-'34 pin their hopes on the return of the grande dame. The winning silhouettes are molded and sirenish and long, in the manner of Lillian Russell in her prime. There are fire and swagger and opulence in the trimmings, furs, feathers, and fabrics.

The fine drawn dress lines that make a point of body lines underneath are abetted by accessories around the bosom of the dress, at the hem of the skirt, on the sleeves, and sometimes at the hips. Drapery, bows, jabots, and such etceteras appear on the bosom below high collars.

Fur Used Lavishly.

Hemlines are split, shirred, flared, plaited, uneven, and befurred. Long and short tight sleeves, shirred sleeves, bishop sleeves, and leg o' mutton sleeves, with fullness all pushed back to look like wings sprouting from the shoulder blades.

Coats are mostly very slim, with rounded shoulder lines and lots of luxury fur around the top. Lanvin and others put fox spirals around coat sleeves and use big fox collars. Vionnet puts fox bands on upper sleeves and shows standing gathered fur collars. Mainbocher puts on ruffled plastrons and sleeve patches of caracul and other flat furs. Chanel trims some of her coats with ermine plastrons topped by standing ermine collars and cat's whisker cravats. Schiaparelli has standing collars ending in small bows and long streamer ends of civet cat.

Capes, Swagger Coats.

Maggy Rouff shows coats of padded heavy stiff silk and satin with wide seal hems and collars. Chanel has them in surah silk. Patou shows coats with Persian lamb yokes and front and back bibs and winged leg o' mutton sleeves ending just below the elbows. Vionnet also shows short sleeved coats that button under the left arm or all the way down the center back. Augustabernard uses wide fox or Persian lamb bands that go around the neck and down to the front hems of coats.

Fur Capes Skimpy.

Furs with and separate from coats and jackets make a point of fox, Persian lamb, mink, and other fur muffs, usually very large. Maggy Rouff has skimpy mink capes with velvet drop yokes. Chanel shows leopard capes and short Persian lamb basque jackets. There are heaps of skeleton capes of fox, and Lanvin makes bolero jackets of two cartwheel ruffles of broadtail joined by bands at the neck.

Fur trimmed velvet suits abound everywhere in Paris. Patou and Maggy Rouff make them with fur peplums and collars on their basque jackets. Skirts have fur hems. Chanel shows suits with mink bordered plaid velvet jackets and plain velvet skirts. Waistcoat and vest blouses in metal brocade,

Be Rough to Your Gums, DentalExpert Now Advises

By Antoinette Donnelly.

AT THE centennial dental congress held in Chicago in August one heard and reheard the experts emphasize brushing the gums. Brushing them with a dry brush! And a hard brush! Also a smaller brush than is ordinarily used. A brush that can get in and around the teeth at every little crevice.

This gum brushing now so strongly advocated is our only substitute for the gum stimulation provided primitive peoples in their coarse foods requiring chewing. Among these men and women no pyorrhea condition or gum softening is found and very little tooth decay.

Also, speaking of diet in relation to a healthy mouth [and this is the term used now instead of healthy teeth], the dentists advocate daily consumption of one quart of milk, one head of lettuce, and one pint of orange juice. Eat your other foods—but include these vital teeth, gum, and mouth regulators. In fact, we are told that so effective are these food elements that they offset the damage wrong foods threaten.

Smoking, we're told, has neither ill effects on health of the teeth nor is it, as sometimes argued by smokers, a preventive against tooth ills. Chewing gum increases the flow of the saliva, consequently is cleansing. But there is this about smoking, explained Dr. Roy Wilson, one of the leading Chicago dentists—smoke stain is irremovable in cases where it penetrates the thin enamel. But if the enamel is strong, and therefore impenetrable, there is no danger of permanent staining. Dr. Wilson tells me that mottled enamel is caused by fluorides in the water and is peculiar to certain sections of the country. It is prevalent in Arizona and in many of the mountain states. Correction is under way in some of the sections through change in the nature of the water supply.

In pyorrhea treatment and in other dental conditions the body's lack of calcium is being resupplied with haliver oil [from the liver of halibut], in addition to the other daily requirements already named.

Dr. Wilson pleads for the safety of the younger generation's mouth and health. "If," he argues, "the economic strain bears down too heavily for dental service, do the economizing on the adults' teeth—but give the young ones a chance."

"Whatever else you do," he urges in connection with mouth health, "go to bed with clean teeth and a clean mouth. Require of yourself three full minutes for this vitally important pre-retiring operation."

Says Men Won't Swear if Lady Dentist Hurts

ACCORDING to Dr. Willa Yeretsky of Grand Rapids, Mich., member of the Association of Women Dentists, "men patients wouldn't dare to 'cuss' when a woman dentist hurts them.

After a long period in which the male population exceeded the female by about 1,100 to 1,000, Italy now has more women than men. The latest census returns show that there are now only 957 men to 1,000 women.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Sacrificing Mothers Try to Minimize Requests in Deference to Others, but Do Sometimes Have Need of Their Own in Wearing Apparel Line.

By Sally Joy Brown.

MOTHERS in all classes seem to have one outstanding quality in common. They demonstrate an instinctive unselfishness; personal needs and feelings are utterly ignored until the wants of others are fulfilled. This trait has been particularly noticeable in the last two or three years, when poverty, sickness and worry beset numerous family circles. Every bit of their love and resourcefulness has been devoted to others—children, husbands, or friends.

A great percentage of my mail comes from mothers asking help, not for themselves, but for others. If their personal needs are mentioned at all they are last and least important. However, they do require some attention, so today I'm making an appeal for them.

Mrs. S. J. is the mother of nine children whom she endeavors to support on an extremely meager daily wage. She is badly in need of a coat, size 40. Her home is located on the south side.

Another woman writes for herself and for her children:

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: I am a widow with three children, a girl, 12, and two boys, 15 and 11 years old. I am doing domestic work for lodging and board, but my greatest difficulty is securing necessary clothing for the children. My husband died less than a year ago, and his insurance barely paid for funeral expenses and debts incurred after he had been unemployed for several years. I am in need of bed linen, dishes, and clothing for the children and myself. I wear size 40. MRS. E. K."

The following letter from an invalid pleads its own case:

"Dear Miss Brown: I am a shut-in living in a small room in a rooming house. My life is a lonesome one, as I have rheumatism, and it has affected my hands and eyes in a manner which prevents me from doing any kind of work with my hands. I am able to read only occasionally.

"Do you suppose one of your readers has a discarded radio I could have? I can't tell you how grateful I would be, or how much it would mean to me. MRS. F. B."

"Dear Miss Brown: I am badly in need of a dress, size 44. I have had only one dress I could wear on the street this summer, and I have washed, ironed and mended it so often it is no longer presentable. As I am under the care of the doctor at the X—— clinic, and have to go there two or three times a week, my need of clothing is great. One of the organized charities has been helping me to support myself and baby, as my husband deserted me a year ago. I shall be more than glad to call anywhere for clothing. MRS. V. M."

A discarded dress or suit would mean a great deal to Mrs. M.

Booklet Is Guide to Palate Teasers

IF you're forgetting that to do full justice to a hearty meal palates must first be tickled with an appetizer—or if you're weary of being appetized with tomato juice and fruit cups, then you'll welcome Mary Meade's newest booklet, "Appetizers, How to Make Them—When to Serve Them." The booklet contains all and more than the name indicates, for it is chuck full of directions for appetizers from many countries, as well as thirty recipes for canapés, appetizers, and cocktails.

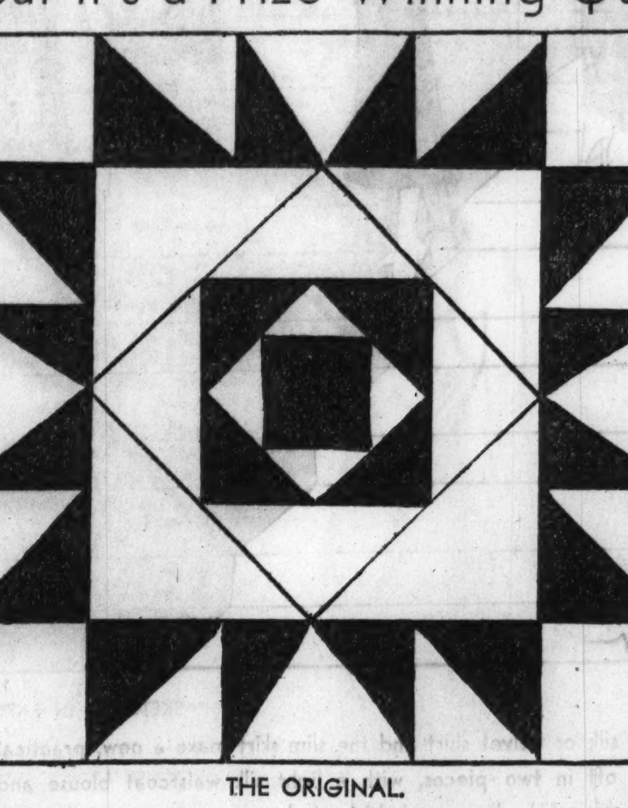
The price of the booklet is 3 cents at the Tribune Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn; or send 5 cents, coin or stamps, with your name and address to Mary Meade, Tribune Tower, Chicago.

Window Seat Is Good Addition to Bedroom

GIVING even a small bedroom a nice, generous window seat, well padded and upholstered, means a pleasant spot for the occasional guest to lounge and a convenient place in which to store extra bedding of various kinds.

A small bedroom may be easy to furnish well and decorate prettily, but it is not so easy to keep in order unless one has plenty of closet and drawer space for one's personal belongings.

Lose Source of "The Original," but It's a Prize Winning Quilt



THE ORIGINAL.

By Nancy Cabot.

WITH disconcerting simplicity this striking quilt pattern is named "The Original." A little venture into quilt history reveals the reason. Any number of quilt makers who have pieced this particular design have claimed it as an original execution of their own; the real title was lost in this shuffle of false claims.

The design is usually made in rose and white or pink and white, and its basic qualities are so excellent that it is considered of champion caliber . . . it has frequently been awarded high honors in quilt competition.

Each Sunday for a limited period Nancy Cabot is offering her readers an unusual value in quilt patterns at the regular price of five cents each. These patterns, like the one offered today, will include instructions for making the border as well as the block design. All are of exceptional quality. Send five cents in coin or stamps to Nancy Cabot, the Chicago Tribune, printing the name and address clearly. Or call at the Tribune Public Service Office, One South Dearborn.

Dreary Life Is Lot of Girl Who Supports Home

Present Cheerless State Far Too Often Precedes a Drearier Future.

By Doris Blake.

WE hear a lot these days about how the depression is putting family relationships into reverse. Whereas, in the good old days, they tell us, father and mother used to spend their declining years with sons and daughters, now the children [probably bringing the grandchildren] come flocking to the old homestead to get free room and board. That, people say, is what unemployment does to the old concepts of who should support whom.

But my observation is that there are still plenty of sons and daughters providing a home and companionship for their parents. Usually the son or daughter who does this is the unmarried one. This isn't always the fault of the wedded brothers and sisters. Things just naturally fall out that way in thousands of cases. Most of the children marry fairly young, and the boy or girl who doesn't just continues to live at home. Then, as the years roll by, he or she inevitably begins to assume responsibility for the upkeep of that home—to pay the rent, gas, light, and grocery bills.

Denied Normal Family Life of Their Own.

The real tragedy of this situation is that the home responsibilities which the young people assume frequently prevent them [and, by the way, it's usually the feminine sex which gets these burdens] from marrying and having families of their own. The sacrifice that this involves—the adjustments to a life not so full nor so rich as that of their married friends—is something that can be adequately described only by one who had made them. Sometimes I think that these people are our unsung heroes.

Frequently the problems of the daughter at home are complicated by responsibility—moral and financial—for younger brothers and sisters. And these youthful "incumbrances" once they outgrow the incumbrance stage are usually the most ungrateful and thoughtless of all sister's beneficiaries. Seldom do they remain in the home after their wings are grown to share the care of parents or still younger children. Out they go—especially the boys—to careers and homes and families of their own. They usually don't even shed a tear for dear old Nell or Mary or Jane who has made this prosperity of theirs possible.

And speaking of prosperity—ingratitude on a full stomach was the rule in the old days. Now adversity in the form of a lost job frequently hits these younger brothers and sisters and they troop home to be fed and lodged again. Only this time they usually appear not just with their luggage but with a spouse and a family in tow.

Faithful Drudge Keeps on Paying the Bills.

I have any number of letters from lonely and discouraged women in their thirties who tell of such cases. Hard pressed financially, the younger sons and daughters came home as to a haven and have been received with warmth and graciousness. When prosperity was upon them, of course, they again betook themselves to homes of their own. But they didn't in any real measure repay the generosity that had tided them over. As the years slipped by, Sister, the Faithful, continued to foot the bills at the old homestead.

But the thing that really makes the life of the "home girl" infinitely more dreary than that of her married sister is the bleakness of her future. The latter's burdens may be—and often are—trying beyond words. But usually they are compensated for by the love and companionship of a husband and children. And the wife and mother has a happy future to look forward to with her offspring, however difficult they may be at the moment.

The unmarried girl who keeps the home fires burning not only has little in her present but almost nothing in her future. An utter hopelessness overcomes her as she sees all her women friends married and settled in homes of their own. Frequently, bowed down by the financial struggle, she is unable to keep up with her old friends socially. And even if she is she is automatically excluded from many of their activities because she is a spinster.

Parents Prove to Be Obstacles to Happiness.

The parents are likely to add complications to this state of semi-ostracism. Sometimes, embittered by years of struggle, they create a home atmosphere which is not conducive to entertaining. Sometimes they are willfully tyrannical and irascible, and insist on directing all of their daughter's activities. Even the best intentioned of them find it difficult to escape the conviction that this girl of theirs, although a wage earner, free, white, and over 21, is still an irresponsible youngster to be scolded, bossed—but rarely petted.

If the parents are not unreasonable in their demands, the daughter may find a fresh and vigorous life in the manifold activities which our civilization offers.

Newest Lighter Uses No Flame for Cigarets

A LIGHTER positively guaranteed not to flicker out is the latest offering of the smoking accessory manufacturers.

A little round tube, no larger than a lipstick, which it closely resembles, now lights cigarets without a sign of flame. The trick is turned by a grayish metal substance whose secret the manufacturers of this latest gadget won't divulge.

The base of the tube is stuffed with cotton, known officially as "wick cartridge," which one douses with the liquid accompanying the lighter. This keeps the metal substance at the top fed with liquid fire. When one wants a light he simply gives his gadget a gentle shake [to agitate the liquid which, being heavier than the cotton, is inclined to sink to the bottom], unscrews the cap, then touches to his tobacco a gently glowing piece of metal.

Like every lighter, this new one requires a bit of care—but its idiosyncrasies are as naught before those of former instruments, with wheels that wouldn't spin and springs that would pop out. The cotton [pardon, the wick cartridge] must, of course, periodically be doused with the liquid. The metal has to be replaced about once every six months.

Inexpensive forms of the lighter are brightly done in colored enamels. But it also comes in gold, silver, and platinum to suit bigger bank accounts.

SKETCHED IN A CHICAGO SHOP BY A TRIBUNE STAFF ARTIST.

Designers Go In for Orgies of Femininity

Most Stalwart Girl Will Now Be Clinging Vine When Evening Falls.

By Rhea Seeger.

THE most impossibly self-sufficient female will appear delightfully young, helpless and decorative in any of the new "after five" dinner and dance dresses just unpacked in one superlatively glamorous collection to be found n one of Chicago's fashion-wise shops. These new things are mysterious, exciting, and definitely different from last year's numbers.

This year you will wear ribbons, pleatings, flutings and ruffles instead of frank deep cutout backlines. The newest models are cleverly strapped and banded instead of stark, trying classic simplicity. They are marvels of intricate draping and flounced skirtlines. Silk, satin, luxurious fabrics of all kinds, colors and combinations will probably make this new season one of the most interesting any clothes hound will ever enjoy.

Grand Manner of Gay Nineties Prevails.

Some of the most unusual models have been sketched in the adjoining columns . . . lovely long clinging dresses fashioned in the grand manner of the last century.

At the upper left . . . a picturesque creation of almond green chiffon velvet, made with a high swathed neckline, a row of buttons down the back, a tiny rippling peplum at the back and the merest scrap of a train. The sleeves are long and slender, reaching almost to the middle of the hand. This is the combination hostess or evening gown any shopper would be glad to find.

Lower left . . . sleek, slim black velvet, trimmed with glittering brilliant buttons. It has puffed tucks over the shoulders and is fashioned with a long curve hugging silhouette. It's short enough to dance in and long enough for picturesque tea drinking at five o'clock.

Lower center . . . a stunning gown of thin wool fabric resembling last year's Bagheera cloth . . . made with wide flattering ruffles over the shoulders, and the same slim silhouette that is high fashion this fall. It is severely simple as to color, yet its deep pinky orange color is exotically beautiful.

Ermine Makes Black Velvet Frock Dramatic.

Lower right . . . another inky black velvet made with an extremely high front neckline, with wide rippling short sleeves in wing fashion, with a flared simple skirtline and all the ingenious detail that marks the perfect dress.

The smaller figures at the top illustrate two other "after five" dance dresses. The left is a full crêpe silk combined with shiny black striped chiffon . . . the large puffed sleeves, the bodice top are of this transparent chiffon; the cleverly molded skirtline reminds you of the glories of the "princess" dresses.

At the right . . . a black velvet combined with bands of white ermine . . . just the simple sort of a dress for any festive fall occasion . . . the rippling sleeves dramatized with the white ermine are vastly becoming to practically every personality . . . you can wear it for tea, dinner, theater and midnight dancing. It is distinctive, flattering and skins inches from your anatomy.

HOSPITALITY TRAY A BOON TO BUSY GIVER OF PARTIES

FILL up the cocktail shaker, open the anchovies, take down the "hospitality tray," and let's have a party. What is it—the hospitality tray? It's just that—of chromium about 22 inches wide, and 12 inches long.

At one end are six separate glass trays neatly fitted in to hold the food —and there's room for plenty. At the other end is a nifty little bread slicer that really works and in the center is a grand electric toaster.

Even the woman who isn't deft could give a smooth running party with it. Toasted sandwiches pop out every minute or so, neatly sliced bread is always available, and hors d'œuvres, meats and cheeses are smartly laid out for appreciative consumption. It's what one reverent woman described as a godsend for the kitchenetteer.

Scanty Undies Answer Need for Snug Lines

By Clotilde.

EVERY woman wants perfect fitting underwear, and here is a pattern that should be very popular. It is No. 3307, and is called a fitted chemise, althought it really is a perfect fitting brassiere and pantie combination.

Notice how flat looking it is through the waist and hipline; straps are fastened underneath at the center front and back for closing.

Crepe de chine is one of the loveliest of lingerie materials and it comes in many lovely colors and shades. When darts have been put in, and seams basted for fitting, don't make the mistake of fitting it too tight. If the lines are perfect, it will be more satisfactory if the fitting is done easily. Use felled seams, stitching first, and then, after cutting away one seam edge so it measures ⅛ inch, hem the other seam edge down.

Narrow bias binding will make a tailored looking finish at top and bottom, and a lace edging at the bottom, with a lace medallion set in the front of the upper part will, of course, be pretty also.

Any junior girl would be delighted with a coat made by pattern No. 2934. The raglan shoulders will lessen the difficulties of making, and if you will carefully follow the directions that come with the pattern, you should have no trouble in turning out a tailored looking garment.

Polo cloth, or a soft checked woolen or homespun, are ideal materials, and will be just the thing for school and every day wear. When cutting out the lining, lay the center back of the back pattern piece about one inch from the fold of the material. Mark the center back with the tracing wheel, and lay an inverted plait down the center back, basting from top to bottom.

It would be hard to find anything that would give a more slender appearance than the undies made by pattern No. 2971. There is the fitted brassiere fastened at the center back, held in place by shoulder straps. The panties are about as short as they could be, and are fitted with extreme snugness through the hips. The brassiere can be adjusted through a tie string at the center front. Remnants can be used to good advantage in many lingerie pieces, effecting a considerable saving.

Schiaparelli's suits of quilted silk or of a new very thick silk just like its name, "Treebark," are notable, and they have streamer ties of rainbow striped silk. Worth shows velvet suits with white ruffled linen blouses, and Schiaparelli's wool suits have cambric blouses with standing ruffle collars and bows.

Jeanne Lanvin shows suits with high collared fitted military jackets, slim skirts, and frog and band closings. Fitted jacket suits of wool with long, sheath skirts and white shirtwaists are seen at Mainbocher. Maggy Rouff makes sports suits with fitted jackets flared at the sides by huge pouch pockets. Molyneux and Lanvin show smart wool suits with loose jackets trimmed with beaver or Persian lamb. Fur or feather toques are shown with suits. Chanel's red wool sports suits having a gold under weave are noticeable. Schiaparelli's flared tunic jackets are brand new.

Fashion Says Farewell to Markedly Square Shoulders.

Please make a note that square exaggerated shoulders are finished. Houses who ought to know better in Paris still do some of them, but they are not fashion. The new shoulders are feminine.

Dresses, except for sports and very practical wear, are in the molded sheath silhouette with variations at the top and bottom and on the sleeves. Very much in favor with the leading French dressmakers is this sort of dress in wool with the back of the bodice and long fitted sleeves in satin, in velvet-striped chiffon and other transparent materials, and in net or lace. Wool frocks are trimmed with satin or velvet, or fur or metal brocade and lamé.

Vionnet makes dresses with fitted bodices shirred up the sides and draped across the front. She likes bishop sleeves shirred at the top. So does Lanvin. Mainbocher's molded dresses with drapery around the bosoms and with the back half of the skirt hem dipped down in a square to the heels are sensational.

Maggy Rouff and Lelong Fuss with Hems.

Maggy Rouff and Lelong's frocks with flared hem ruffles covered with shirring, and frocks with skirt hems flared and split in front are new. Velvet frocks are much shown. Patou and Maggy Rouff and Augustabernard feature satin frocks. Patou emphasizes the back of his siren-slim satin dresses with poufs and standing ruffles just below the waistline. Almost all the dressmakers' show dresses with bodices in some rich light material like brocade, satin lamé, and taffeta and long slinky skirts in dark woolen or velvet.

The Vionnet high-low neckline, shown to TRIBUNE readers last spring, is all over the dress style map of Paris. It is draped high along the throat in front and dips down in a V at the back. There are many high ruffles functioning at the necklines of dresses, and lots of throat enveloping drapery. Loads of elbow and slightly longer than elbow sleeves that are shirred, wing draped, split, etc. Long fitted gloves are in style with these sleeves and the short sleeves on coats, and the predominant muff for the same reason.

Exciting Details to Brighten Practical Clothes.

Practical frocks in the Paris mode are sparkled with such details as Lanvin's silver ball buttons and silver studded belts, Schiaparelli's draped satin girdles, Chanel's narrow spangled belts and buttons, Worth's jet embroidered belts and Augustabernard's jet stomachers, Lanvin's square silver berthas and vests, and Mainbocher's little bibs covered with velvet flowers.

Mainbocher's striped velvet shirts, worn with wool vests, give life to the sports mode. Chanel puts bright printed jersey plastrons on sports suit jackets, Worth uses satin vests for sports. Plain small-printed velvet frocks are seen around. Three-quarters length wool capes and coats prevail for sports, and two piece dresses about which I have already written.

Downy Knitted Suit Keeps Young One Warm as Toast

By Jean Macdonald.

IF today's illustration isn't inspiration for the immediate purchase of yarn and needles and an unconquerable desire to knit, needlework isn't your particular forte.

Made in soft pink Saxony wool, this child's ensemble is simply knitted in a wide broken rib that is distinctly new and much more attractive than the plain stitch. Russian necklines are among the favored fall styles for adults and they are just as smart for the 1 and 2 year old and extremely sensible. The neckline buttons up neatly and snugly so as to keep the chill north winds away. The weight of the yarn in the suit makes it ideal for fall with its changing temperatures and perfect for winter wear under that pretty pink coat.

The stitch is easy to do and the sweater, trunks, and even the tiny cap are all made on two pairs of straight needles. The smaller size needles are used for the bands of trimming. Buttons and narrow elastic for the waistband and under the instep complete the materials required.

HOW TO ORDER.

If you wish instructions for making the child's two piece legging suit illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean MacDonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

Nazis Bar Women Wearing Cosmetics

WOMEN using artificial aids to beauty are barred from Nazi meetings or entertainments in Breslau, Germany.

A woman requires only 83 per cent of the food necessary for a man, according to recent findings of the British ministry of health.

Miss Stella Akin, a lawyer in Savannah, Ga., was recently appointed a special assistant to the United States attorney general in Washington, D. C. She started to work at the age of 17 as a stenographer in a lawyer's office.

Mrs. Eva S. Fry, aged 37, of Omaha, Neb., has been an automobile mechanic for the last 11 years. She works side by side with stalwart men mechanics adjusting carburetors, grinding valves, fixing flats, and the like.

According to the belief of Miss Margaret K. Stewart of Phoenix, Ariz., corresponding secretary of the Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, women public jobholders are not so susceptible to graft as men.

While Fall Plants Are Blooming, Gardeners Set Out New Bulbs for Flowers of Spring

Preparations made during the next month will determine the appearance of the spring garden, as is testified by the owner of this attractive suburban home. Beds of tulips set out by types and varieties flank the front entrance to the home. By careful selection the bloom may be carried over several weeks. There are Darwins, cottage tulips, Mount Tacoma, Bien Celeste, and parrot tulips to choose from.

Deep Planting Highly Important

By Paul Potter.

WHILE the dahlias, zinnias, asters, gladiolus, and other flowering plants still carry the bloom up to first frosts, gardeners are beginning to cut away dead material, to dig up the idle parts of the beds and borders, and, above all, to plan for an early start on the garden's blooms for next spring.

The coming season will be devoted to revamping the garden. Bulbs will play an important part in the spring symphony of colors and they can be ordered now to be ready for planting during October. What a variety there is, too, with crocus, anemone, bulbous iris, daffodils, hyacinths, scilla, snowdrops, jonquils, narcissus, chionodoxa, tulips, and lilies, all important to the completed picture of April, May, and early June.

Good Drainage Makes for Luxuriant Blooms.

The soil may need some fertilizing and working over in the next week or two. Most any good garden soil will produce luxuriant bulb blooms, and since the bulbs will start a root growth yet this fall they should be well fed and the soil should have good drainage for the fall and spring rains.

The bulbs are planted at varying depths, ranging from 2 to 3 inches for the anemone down to a depth of 8 inches for lilies. The bulbous iris, chionodoxa, crocus, and snowdrop may be planted 4 inches deep, grape hyacinth and tulip 5 inches, hyacinth and daffodils 5 or 6 inches, and narcissus about 7 inches deep.

Informal Gardens Demand Bulbs Be Tossed About.

The surface of bulb beds should be slightly raised in the center to aid in drainage and to produce a slightly banked effect during the blooming period. Formal gardens require exactness in placing the bulbs as to width apart, evenness of rows, and as to color arrangements.

Informality is secured by tossing a handful of the bulbs into the bed and planting them where they light. Tulips always look best in the average garden if planted in clumps of a dozen bulbs or so each. Gardeners who care for developing knowledge of the plants usually like to place related varieties near each other, with the types so identified as to aid the grower and visitors in studying the blooms next spring.

Poet's narcissus is a favorite, and when planted along a bank or terrace the flowers will look like snowbanks when they bloom. They are also advantageous in border plantings, with tulips behind them. There are several good crosses between the poet's narcissus and the regular trumpet daffodil, including Sir Watkin and Lucifer.

Jonquils Are More Prolific than Daffodils.

Those who find it difficult to differentiate between jonquils and daffodils may keep in mind the fact that daffolids always have one flower to a stalk and are usually represented by the large trumpet. Jonquils, on the other hand, may have several flowers on a stem and usually are clustered.

It should be borne in mind also that tulips do not all bloom at the same season. If you have admired a neighbor's tulips and wondered how they came out so early and lasted so long, you can achieve the same results by selecting your bulbs with this knowledge. The Darwins grow about 30 inches in height and bloom in May. The cottage tulips follow in rapid order, with late tulips, such as Epicure, Mount Tacoma, or Bien Celeste. The parrot tulips offer an added variety in your fall selections, of which Fantasy is one of the best.

It may be surprising to many gardeners to see that tulip bulbs have advanced somewhat in price this fall. This should not be attributed to the NRA, at least not to any American governmental activity. The bulk of our commercial tulips come from Holland, where the industry is an important commercial interest. Of late the Dutch government has placed strict requirements on all exports and imposes a minimum price at which all bulbs must be sold.

Many American importers placed their orders for bulbs early this year, at the specified prices fixed by the Dutch regulations. Since that time the United States has gone off the gold standard, and the Dutch growers report they are not allowed to fill the old orders with the dollar worth only about 70 cents abroad. Some growers met the price increase, while others scurried around in the United States for available stocks. As a consequence the early bulb buyer will get the best selections.

THIS WEEK IN THE GARDEN

Monday, Sept. 18.

It is high time to be thinking about the approach of early frosts and to care for those plants needing attention. Many of the gladiolus will be ready for digging, drying, and housin. Dig the corms carefully, saving the small bulbils of the varieties which need to be increased. Lay the corms in boxes to dry, and later remove the withered stalks. Bulbils will remain attached to the mother bulb and need not be removed until some time during winter. It is necessary that an extra effort be made to keep all kinds separated and accurately labeled.

Place each kind in a small box or sack, tie it up, and store away until later. It is a good time, also, to arrange to buy bulbils of the newer kinds for planting next spring. Frost may be expected any time after the 20th of the month and very tender plants should have a place ready for them indoors. Cacti and other tender succulents should be carefully potted if they are planted directly in the open ground.

When planting use a soil composed of half soil, without organic manures, and half torpedo sand. Perfect drainage should be given by placing an inch of broken pots, small stones, or other solid litter in the bottom of the pots. The larger the pot the more drainage will be required.

Pots for cactus plants should be comparatively small, a size that will just permit the plant to rest comfortably. Other succulents, such as the century plants, aloes, and novelties will stand more water, but all should be kept rather dry during their dormant or resting period. Unless palms, the corn plant [dracæna], sansevieria, and aspidistra have broken or cracked pots they should not be transplanted, for they, also, do not remain active during winter. They require considerably more water than succulents; in fact, the soil should never be bone dry, although, of course, it should not be saturated.

Plants in active growth must have moisture at all times. When they are resting very little water is necessary. Overwatering is the bugbear for successful indoor culture—but so, too, is a too dry condition.

Tuesday, Sept. 19.

Changes in the perennial border may be started. Some plants must be transplanted as early as possible to enable them to become thoroughly established before cold weather. But do not transplant late flowering perennials in autumn. Transplant those seedlings that are strong enough to move but see to it that the soil is in good condition, not too dry or too wet, but just right for ease in handling. Weak seedlings may be kept in the seedbed without disturbing them, mulched slightly, and carried along until spring.

Take note of the autumn flowering asters, for much may be learned by critical observation of the different types and varieties. If trouble is experienced in growing them plant in a new spot next season.

Wednesday, Sept. 20.

Dig out any stray weeds to prevent their forming seeds to grow next year. Collect the remains of all vegetables, such as beans, peas, early cucumbers, corn stalks, and everything else, and pile and burn them as soon as they dry. Some waste materials may be piled and composted, but burning will kill many lurking insect pests and prevent the spread of fungus diseases. It is always the best plan to keep everything cleaned up and tidy.

Onions that are ready for gathering should be taken care of before wet weather or they are likely to rot in the garden. Practically all of them are now ready, with their tops withering down and the bulbs projecting out of the ground. Gather them in boxes or sacks after permitting them to dry for a few days.

Thursday, Sept. 21.

See that all broken or cracked glass in the conservatory is replaced with new and do this before cold weather or tropical plants will suffer. Repair the sash for the coldframe or hotbed, and if possible give the latter a new coat of paint.

Plan the bulb garden before ordering the stock, for it will save considerable time, money, and give a better arrangement. It is not too late to divide and reset iris. Old clumps will never give the bloom that a vigorous, healthy clump will produce. Delphinium plants will stand removal in rich, deep soil. All perennials thrive best in a well drained soil. Heavy clay soil may be lightened by spading in organic matter and light, sandy soils are made more retentive of moisture by spading in the same kind of material.

Friday, Sept. 22.

Hardy roses may be planted, well mulched after cold weather arrives, and they will be found in excellent condition for an early start next spring. Use hybrid perpetuals and polyantha types for the most prolific bloom. Rugoas are usually dependable and useful for many purposes.

Plant a few lilies in groups in the perennial border. The snowdrop is fine when planted in drifts, placing the bulbs irregularly 2 to 3 inches apart and about 3 inches deep. Snowflake is very attractive.

Saturday, Sept. 23.

Take note of the earliest flowering hardy chrysanthemums, because the early kinds are the most dependable for the home garden. Frost is bound to injure midseason and late varieties, and a record of those which are dependable insures a good display.

Water new lawns when dry. Remove runners from the strawberry plants set last month to throw the strength into the plants remaining. In the small conservatory sow sweet alyssum along the sides of the benches to add a touch of beauty to the general effect and to provide some material for cutting.

Difficult to Select Reading for Teen Ages

List of Suitable Books for Boys and Girls of 15 and 16 Aid to Parents.

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

AN article by a well known writer on the subject of children's reading caught my eye. Always interested in this sort of thing for my own purposes and for the profit of my correspondents, I read it through. When I had finished I found myself greatly disappointed. It had, I thought, almost no practical value for the average mother, especially for the average modern mother.

"I believe," this writer stated, though not in these exact words, "that children should be allowed to read anything they please. My father had a magnificent library. Several generations of book lovers had built it—ancestors of many tastes. I was allowed to browse in it from the time I was able to read until I grew up. I'm sure nothing I ever read there did me any harm. Besides all the joy I had in that mellow room, a fine taste in reading and an appreciation of style were built up in me."

I believe, too, that such an experience would be a rich one for a child. But how many people today have fine libraries representing a wide range of reading in which their children can browse? Not many. Some young people learn to browse happily in a public library, or a good book store, but they are the exceptions—and that comes later, anyhow. What most parents have to do today instead of turning a child loose to browse in a library is to bring the library to the child. In addition the child of that time, say a generation and a half ago, had fewer sensational and trashy appeals made to his reading eye, so parents have more to do to guide their children's reading than they used to have. Modern parents of average or less than average means cannot find much practical help, then, in this sort of advice.

Middle Teens Hardest to Prescribe for.

Many parents who are interested in the subject, are entirely at sea as to what books to provide for their boys and girls in their middle teens. This is, I think, the hardest age of all in the matter of reading.

When children are little books are almost no problem at all. We know pretty well what youngsters enjoy at different ages, and if we can't pick out the books ourselves, there are usually people who have gone to the trouble of compiling excellent lists. [We've even done that ourselves and will send one to you on request with the necessary envelope and postage.]

The inbetweens—the children from 7 to 12 or so—are the next more difficult to choose books for. As their tastes widen they need a greater range and variety of books.

But the girls and boys of high school age are most difficult of all to make a list for. Adolescents develop unevenly, especially in regard to reading. For one thing, mystery and detective stories have a fascination for almost all of them. Some are still enjoying only books written definitely for their age—while others are mature and enjoy adult fiction, biography and history, and reading matter relating to their special interests or sports. To be sure, the girl of 16 reading "Anna Karenina" or "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" doesn't get out of it what the mature man or woman gets. But the fact remains that they often want to really enjoy adult reading, and there is no reason why we should deny it to them.

Some Parents Object to Adult Fiction for Children.

Some people feel the older classics [which were written for grown men and women] are all right for their children, but not modern adult fiction. This is a mistake. Some parents, also, still feel that good taste in reading is developed only through these older classics. This is another mistake. Dickens, Scott, the somber George Eliot, and Thackeray, are not to everybody's taste. Some of them are slow moving, and we can't cram them down all young throats.

There is a good deal of fine writing being done today and during this last generation that is more satisfying to young readers than most of the older classics. With little time for fiction I have, myself, read half a dozen fine novels in the last two years that would hold the interest of boys and girls in their teens.

All this is general. What a great many parents and also young people want is something definite—a list of good books to choose from. Two lists, from excellent sources, of books for boys and girls of 15 and 16 I have combined for the use of the readers of this column. I am purposely using these choices rather than just my own, as I feel the books will appeal to a wider variety of tastes than if the selection had been personal.

This leaflet will be called "Books for the Middle Teens." It contains the names of books of fiction, poetry, and biography, and will be sent on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Fences at Doors and Gates Keep Baby Within Bounds

IF your babies are growing up to the point where they are commencing to toddle beyond the home's confines and show an inclination to explore other yards and streets and dangerous crossings, investigate the variety of fences available at moderate cost today. They not only improve the appearnce of a home, but they afford privacy—and safety—for the family's youngest members!

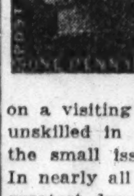
THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen

These stamps are described in the accompanying article.

Mr. Cabeen will be glad to answer questions concerning stamps. A stamped, self-addressed envelope should be enclosed in case a personal reply is desired.

ENGRAVING, or intaglio, or recess printing, as it is variously termed, ranks above all other processes when the difficulty of counterfeiting is considered. This rather than appearance is the prime factor in the eyes of the stamp issuing authorities, but when well executed, engraving produces the most beautiful stamps. From a collector's standpoint engraved stamps have the advantage of a permanence of color and a durability of paper which is not usually found in stamps made by cheaper processes. The simplest intaglio process used in stamp manufacture is copper plate printing in which the one or more stamp designs on the plate are wholly engraved by hand. In the example shown herewith, which is a facsimile of the rare "post-office" Mauritius stamp, a single stamp design was engraved on a visiting card plate by a jeweler unskilled in this class of work, and the small issue printed one by one. In nearly all engraving processes the greatest drawback is the slowness of the operation.



Stamps from Lebanon.

Lebanon, famous in ancient times for its cedars, became a stamp issuing country following the great war. Prior to that time it had been a part of Turkish Syria and pending autonomous government, was mandated to France. That alone accounts for the use of the French language on its stamps. Up to 1925 the stamps bore Grand Liban as the name of the country, and after that date it became Republique Libanaise. Values on the stamps shown are expressed in piastres and decimals of piastres. Views are shown of the famous cities of Tyre and Sidon; the ruins of the Roman temples of Vesta and of Bacchus at Baalbek; the modern village of Bickfaya; the pigeon rocks at Beirut, and the cedars of Lebanon.

Barbados Tercentenary Stamp.

The tercentenary of the establishment of government upon the Island of Barbados was the occasion for this large stamp, which bears the portraits of Charles I., king of England at the time the charter was granted, and George V., king at the present time. Charles I. had the misfortune to lose his head at the hands of Cromwell following the civil war between the king and parliament.

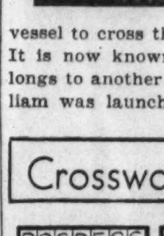
From Turks Islands.

A peculiar plant of the cactus family which bears a resemblance to a head wearing a fez is responsible for the name Turks Islands which is given to a group of the British West Indies. The cactus is commonly called a Turk's head. The Turks and Caicos islands are a part of the Jamaica colony. This one farthing stamp of 1910 shows the Turk's head.



The Royal William.

This is the 5 cent stamp which Canada recently issued to honor the Royal William, supposedly the first vessel to cross the ocean under steam. It is now known that this honor belongs to another ship. The Royal William was launched at Quebec in 1831 and crossed the Atlantic in the late summer of 1833.

Your Questions.

F. R.—The portrait shown on the current 14 cent United States stamp is that of Hollow Horn Bear, a chief of the Brule Sioux. This subtribe of the Sioux or Dakota nation is also known as the "Tetons of the Burnt Woods." Hollow Horn Bear at one time actively engaged his braves against the United States but later entered the employ of the Great White Father and was in Washington, D. C., at the time of his death.

D. B.—Stamps bearing the country name "Ethiopie" are from the country which Scott's catalog lists as Abyssinia.

Cachet for U. S. Sub.

The Navy Yard Improvement association will sponsor a cachet at the launching of the submarine Cachalot at Portsmouth Navy Yard Oct. 19, 1933. Send your covers ready to go, to Charles W. Clark, Portsmouth Plains, Portsmouth, N. H.

A Correction.

Prof. Eifreg of River Forest, Ill., calls attention to an error in a recent article which located the Wartburg castle on the Rhine. There was no reason for moving this old castle from Thuringia in central Germany, but having done so it must now be moved back, and the Rhine loses what would have been an added attraction.

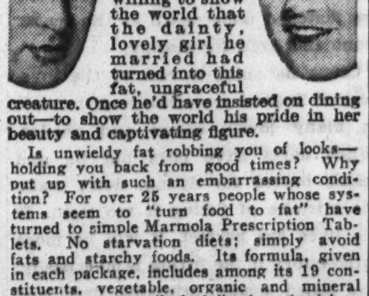
Ashamed of His FAT WIFE



ASHAMED of her now: unwilling to show the world that the dainty, lovely girl he married had turned into this fat, ungraceful creature. Once he'd have insisted on dining out—to show the world his pride in her beauty and captivating figure.

Is unwieldy fat robbing you of looks—holding you back from good times? Why put up with such an embarrassing condition? For over 25 years people whose systems seem to "turn food to fat" have turned to simple Marmola Prescription Tablets. No starvation diets; simply avoid fats and starchy foods. Its formula, given in each package, includes among its 19 constituents, vegetable, organic and mineral ingredients prescribed daily by physicians throughout the world. Over 20 million boxes have been sold; and now Marmola is demanded by the thousands in leading style and beauty centers—and even in such faraway places as South Africa and Australia. Ask for it at any good drug store—only $1.

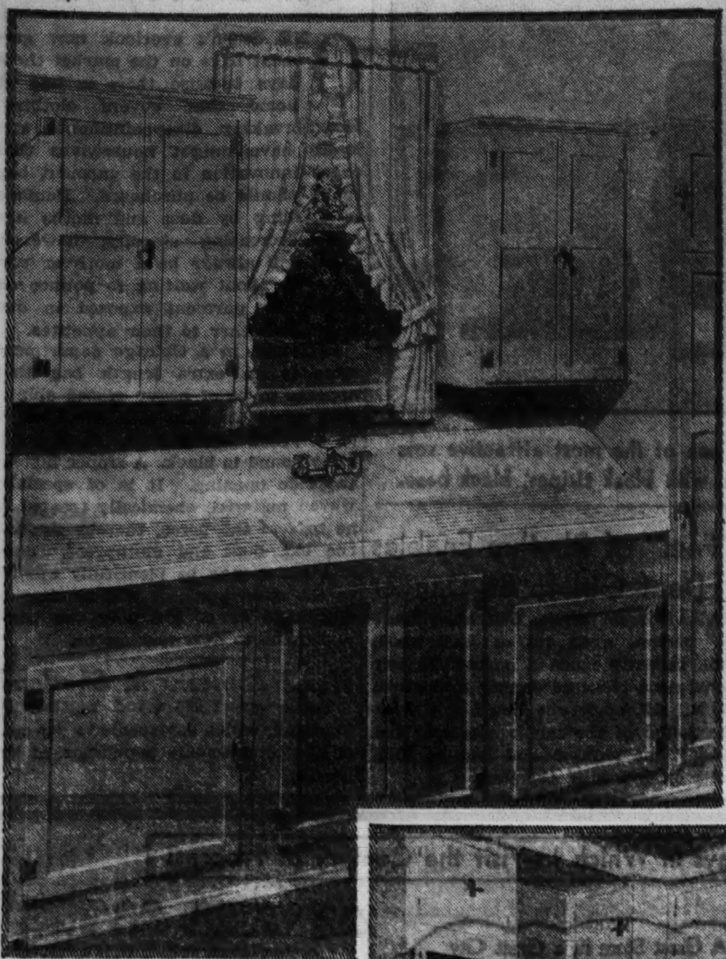
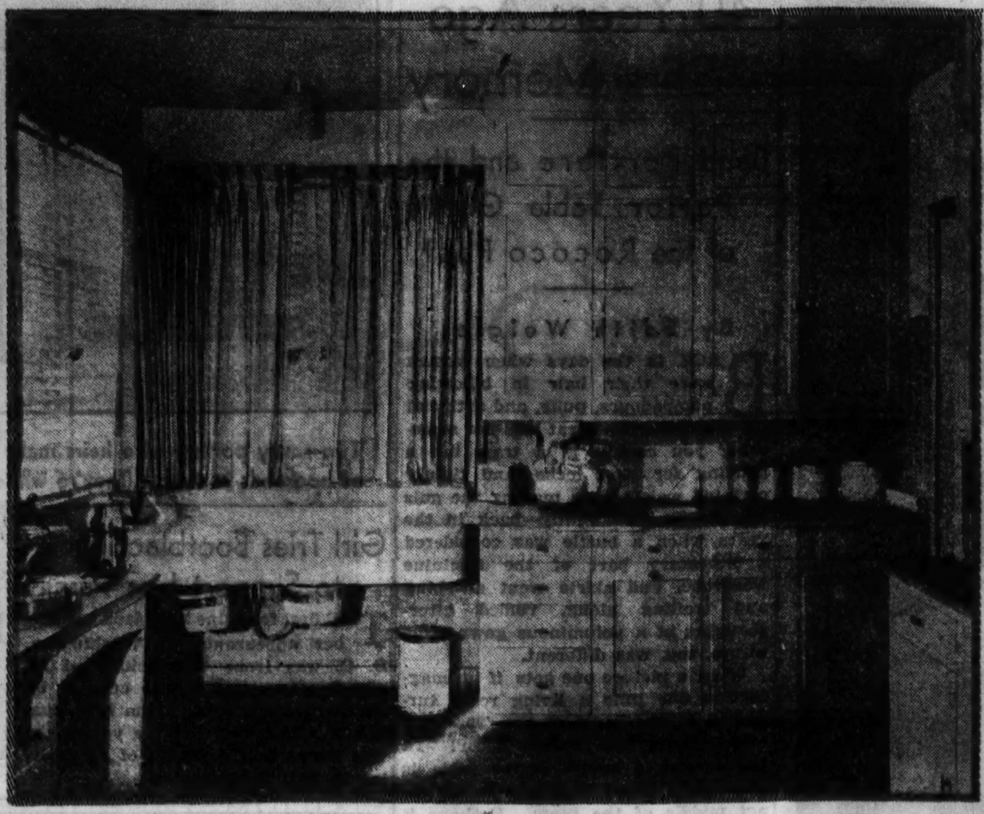
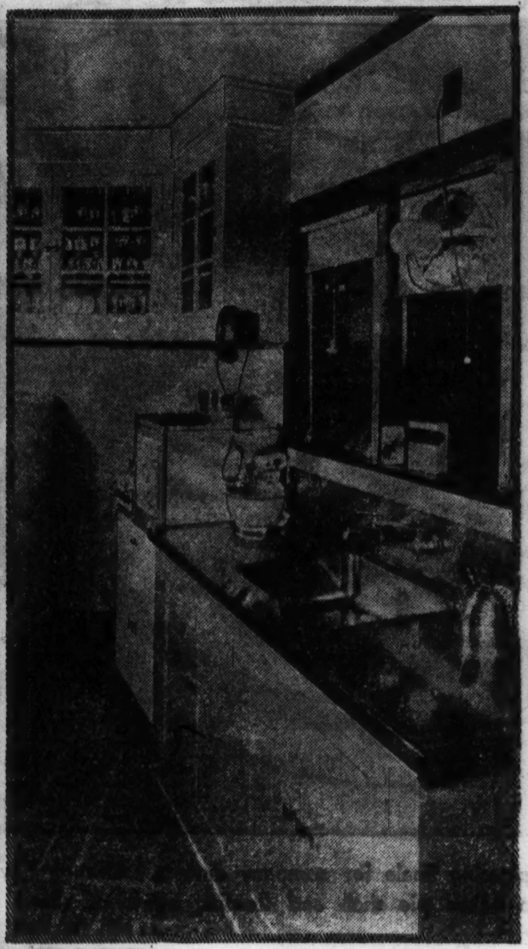
Sink, Cabinet Unite to Coax Efficiency Into Kitchen



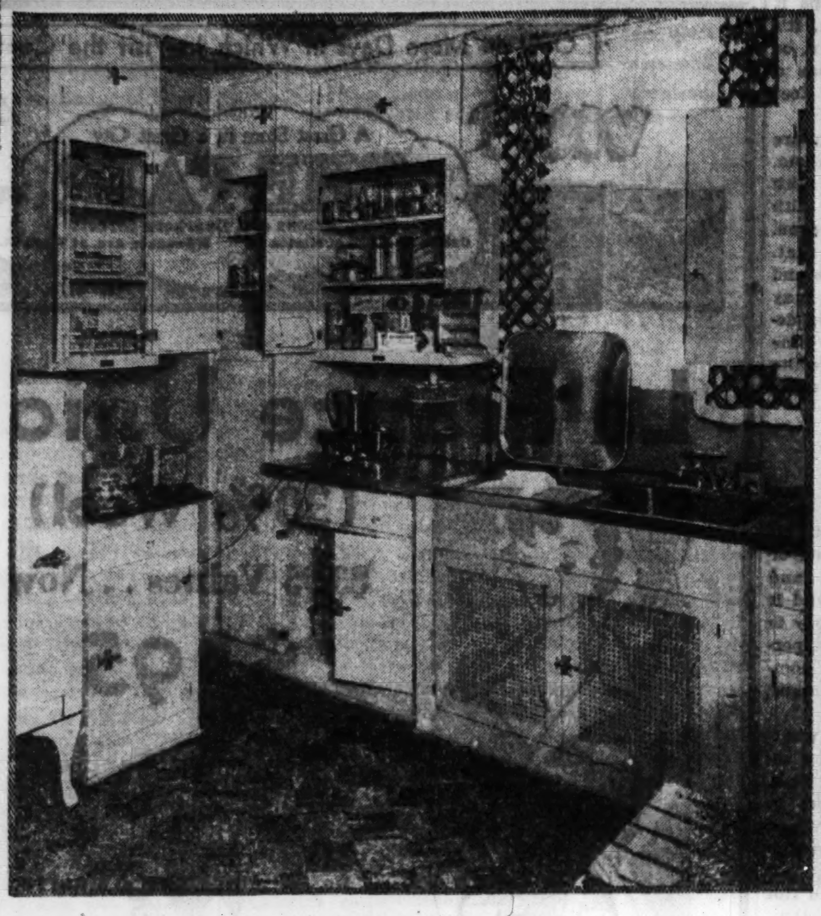
Of acid resisting porcelain enamel, this sink fits quite snugly over compact wooden cabinets. Doors are perforated to allow for ample ventilation.



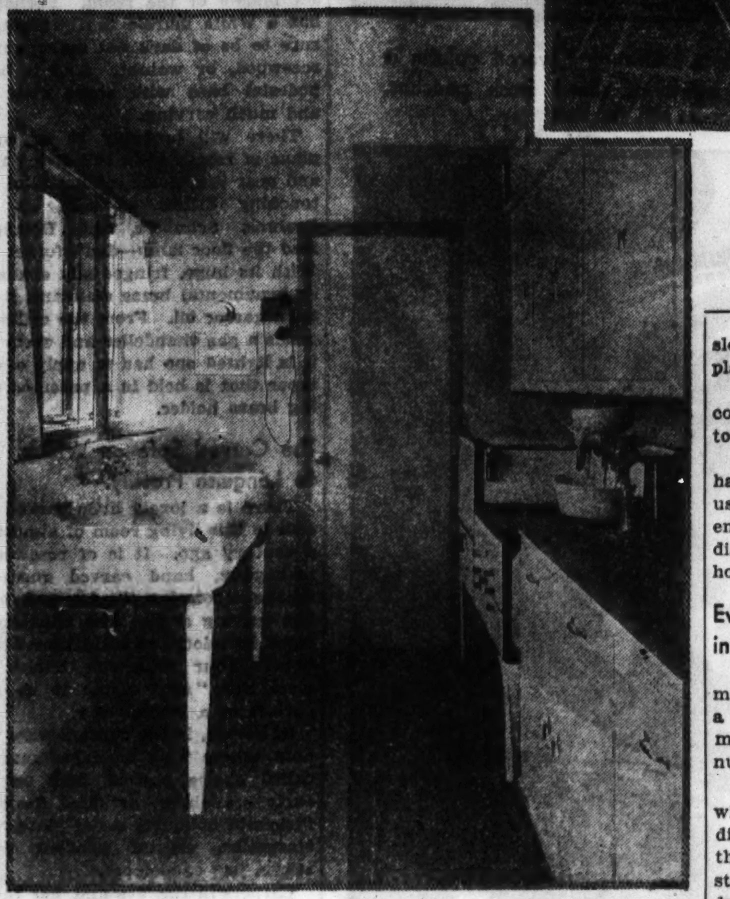
Two sizable and very convenient swing-out containers are seen under this sink of acid resisting porcelain enamel. The sink is well proportioned.



Well equipped, this kitchen in one of the houses at the Fair; its sink is of gleaming stainless metal and over the window is an electric builtin ventilator.



With top lifted, this handsome sink of silvery cooking metal contains an electric dishwashing compartment. There are abundant cabinet and cupboard space around the sink and cabinets underneath.



To show that sinks still have legs, and modern sinks, too, appears this unit of acid resisting porcelain enamel, gracefully proportioned and attractive. And the telephone is conveniently placed.

Dishwashing Now Done Atop Neat Cupboard

By Louise Bargelf.

THE sink has come a long way and has done quite a bit of progressing since its rain barrel days at the back door of our pioneer cabins!

Moreover it has been forming new attachments these last few years.

In the model kitchens of the houses at A Century of Progress, as well as in special exhibits of kitchens everywhere, we see a growing friendship evident between cabinets and sinks.

Some Sinks Still Stand on Own Legs.

On the best of terms are these two utilities. Indeed, so omnipresent are cabinets and cupboards and often so closely related to the sinks above them or under them or beside them, that in many cases they seem to be an integral part of the sink units. Never very far apart, they obviously appear to consider that together they are doubly fortified and in a position to render greater usefulness to the kitchens they grace and to the workers they serve.

Sometimes, of course, we see the familiar sight of the sink on legs; new and lovely models of this well known type. Again we see the sink without legs but attached to the wall by brackets. Beneath such sinks there are often swingout containers of one sort or another. But more and more frequently we find the sink atop cabinets and cupboards, with ventilated doors for freshness and sanitation within.

Arrangement of Kitchen Affects Labor of Cook.

Since there is no room in the house in which the home maker is more interested than the kitchen—and, with reason, since she spends some seventy per cent of her working time here—the trend of these new kitchens of ours is of almost universal interest to the feminine eye.

Kitchens, well arranged and well equipped mean a tremendous number of steps actually saved. Poorly equipped, poorly arranged kitchens on the other hand cause many an aching foot and many a wearisome hour.

The placing of a generous amount of cabinet space around the sink and the utilization of the underneath areas make possible a real economy of effort. Indeed there is no one single feature which contributes more directly to an orderly home and to a serene disposition than cupboards and cabinets—plenty of them, and then perhaps, a few more for good measure.

Housewife Now Has Paradise of Shelves, Drawers.

Those of us who began our home making in the days when masculine judgment decreed that one big cupboard with a scant supply of shelves, farther apart and a lot deeper than necessary was quite enough for any home, view with delight the abundance of cupboards seen today. As we no longer have to drag our ironing boards up from the basement or out from between the ice box and the wall, or hang our dishpan on a hook behind the door, so we no longer need to wear the paint from our best kitchen chairs by climbing up on them to reach inaccessible shelves in inaccessible cupboards.

Kitchens where there is a real place for everything have become a reality and so many of the units which make this abundance of storage space possible are units which are simple to incorporate into our already existing rooms.

Many cabinets are so constructed that the new sinks can be fitted directly over them. And sometimes an old sink, even, if it is the right height, can also be so fitted, or the cabinets can be "fixed to fit."

Units Now Made for Brooms, Vegetables, Linens.

For any small bit of kitchen modernization there are these cabinets of wood or steel, which come in a wide variety of styles and sizes. There are also many compact single pieces for the kitchen, dish and broom units, vegetable storage units, soiled linen receivers which open with a convenient tilt forward movement, as well as table tops of porcelain enamel, stainless metals and stainless steel, linoleum and wood.

The sinks of today come in various materials and different colors. There are sinks of acid resisting porcelain enamel, of vitreous china and silvery looking stainless metals. There are also sinks of light weight steel, over whose base are electrically fused coats of acid resisting enamel.

Electric Motor Now Cleans and Rinses Dishes.

An electric motor is under the sink that operates an impeller which catches up the water in the sink and hurls it on the dishes. A turn of the lever draws the water, the cover is raised and a rinsing hose with a slender spray nozzle is brought into play.

Still other type of washers are so constructed so that one does not have to rinse the dishes by hand.

These dishwashing sinks, which have a capacity to hold the dishes used by a family of four in one day, enable a home mistress to wash her dishes only once every twenty-four hours.

Even Clothes Can Be Scrubbed in the Up-and-Coming Sink.

Some electric sinks have separate machines for washing the dishes and a separate laundry compartment and machine for washing clothes. The number of drainboards is optional.

Helpful, these modern sinks of ours, which contain electric machines for dishes and clothes. Not only are they labor saving, but they make sterilization simple with their abundance of scalding water. They are also economical in their use of soap and water.

The story of sinks is an interesting one from the days back in our stone age when basins were first carved out of stone and employed as washing receptacles.

Early Europeans Washed in Boxes Lined with Zinc.

Throughout Europe for many generations sinks were simply boxes lined with zinc or copper. At first portable, they were later permanently installed in homes. Since than they have been manufactured in various materials and shapes.

It is in the decade of the seventies in this country that the first cast iron sink appeared. Its rim was flat, it was either galvanized or painted, and placed within wood siding. It had wooden drainboards.

Today the tendency is growing to manufacture sinks in one piece. Flat rim sinks with separate backs and drainboards are still manufactured in smart models, but the movement in the direction of the sink with all its parts made into one is marked.

Amateur Decorator Finds New Colors Improve Old Bathroom

By WillElla de Campi.

THE general trend toward freshening up homes as an active revolt against the shabbiness of depression is being clearly indicated throughout the country in the reports from shops and studios of household furnishers and decorators. In many instances entire houses are being redone, while in other cases the process of rejuvenating is being carried out gradually, room by room.

One valiant young woman of our acquaintance is starting her Household Reconstruction Activities with the smallest room in the house, the bathroom.

"It's so easy," she writes, "to make the bathroom pleasantly decorative and comfortable as well as utilitarian. There's really no excuse for flat, uninteresting bathrooms now when such delightful decorative accessories and fascinating possibilities for colorful effects are so well within the reach of any one. And having successfully carried out the plans for a distinctive bath-dressing room is added incentive toward completing ideas for redecoration throughout the rest of the house.

"Perhaps you'd like to hear about our bathroom scheme? It's really quite effective, and, though we did have to spend a certain amount for necessary materials, the finished result has proved to be well worth the cost.

"To begin with, we have the usual plain white tub, lavatory, and toilet. We brought these up to date by having the old faucets, etc., replaced by good looking modern fixtures in chromium finish. Previously the walls were all white, tiled half way up. We left the white tile as it was, but had the upper walls and ceiling painted a lovely shade of blue, matching the color in the blue and white tiled floor.

"Then we bought a blue oiled silk shower curtain. We finished this at the top with plaid oilcloth cut swag fashion and edged with white ball fringe. The same oilcloth makes a swag valance for window curtains of blue oiled silk. Our towels are white, with blue borders and monograms, and we have a washable white sheepskin rug on the floor. Now, isn't this success an inspiration for further efforts?

"In two corners of the room we had triangular shelves built, the shelves being wide enough apart to hold tall bottles, jars, and boxes for bathroom perquisites. These, painted blue with chartreuse green trim, take up less than no room and are decoratively effective as well as useful.

"We found one of the wall spaces would accommodate a handy chest of drawers to hold our bath and bed linens. So we bought one, unfinished, and had it decorated this way: First we removed all handles. Then, with rubber cement, we glued blue, chartreuse and white plaid oilcloth on the front of each drawer and covered the top of the chest to match. We painted the exposed framework chartreuse green, replaced the handles, and hung a mirror in a narrow green frame above the chest.

"A pair of glass lamps with shades made of the plaid oilcloth and a makeup box are placed on top of this practical, waterproof and washable chest. Clothes hamper and waste basket have been covered to match. Beside the 'head' of the tub we placed a low metal end table with a chartreuse green and blue tiled top. This holds a convenient smoking set and a succession of current magazines!"

Black, white, and red are cleverly combined to make another striking bathroom. The tub, lavatory, and toilet are white, with black fixtures. Black and white rubber tile is used as a floor covering. White tile with a black border makes a wainscoting. A dramatic effect is achieved by upper wall and ceiling being finished with glossy black paint. A shower curtain shows bright red stars and border on a white ground.

Chromium hanging shelves backed by mirror panels are placed at each side of the window. These hold white glass bottles and jars with black stoppers. Towels are all white, with black and red monograms, and there is a black, red, and white woven rug.

RICH AMERICAN WALNUT GIVES STANCH LINES TO NEWEST FURNITURE

Modern Suites Lose Awkward, Freakish Note

Prize Winning Ensembles Seen at Fair to Be Sold Over the Country.

By Edith Weigle.

SINCE the sixteenth century walnut has been a favorite furniture wood with the English. Indeed, so important did it become in Great Britain that writers on the subject have called a whole period in design "the Age of Walnut."

Stores in this country have sold chairs, tables, beds, chests, commodes, sofas of walnut for many, many years, for it has rivaled mahogany in popularity with Americans. This summer has seen a fresh impetus given the use of this wood through a competition in design conducted by a group of manufacturers.

Prizes totaling $1,100 were offered for the best modern dining room and bedroom ensembles and over 362 entries in the contest were made. A committee of outstanding authorities on design, decoration and industrial art selected the finest of these, which revealed new and vigorous lines and contour without the freakish note which so hampered the advent of contemporary furniture in this country some years ago.

Well known furniture factories have made up the prize winning designs, they have been on exhibition at A Century of Progress, and as this goes to press they are now ready for shipment to leading stores throughout the United States. Regular American walnut, which grew originally in the middle west and the east, and which was carried by early settlers in covered wagons to the Pacific coast, has inspired the designer of the dining room suite awarded first prize, and illustrated today.

J. Gordon Elliott of Guthrie, Ky., created the interesting, graceful, and conservative group shown at the right, and an Illinois manufacturer has brought it to life, so to speak. It is particularly effective in a modern setting, in which the floor is of ebonized maple blocks with silver inlay, corners of the room being made unusual by pilasters of California walnut.

The chairs are covered in ivory or white washable, leather-like fabric. The extension table, though small enough for a dinette or small sized dining room, may be extended to normal capacity. The little server, seen at the extreme right in the picture, is also comparatively small, but it contains three removable and reversible trays that prove exceedingly practical in serving.

The other photograph today shows another dining room suite made by a southern manufacturer. [This design had nothing to do with the contest just mentioned.] Here the wood is walnut again, and is given a brown finish, most artistic, for with it as a starter one can work out all sorts of charming color schemes in the dining room.

It also comes in a dark walnut, called Van Dyke. The chairs are upholstered in leather, which may be had in various shades. We think the base of the extension table most graceful with its curving supports, which rest on single stretchers tipped in brass.

This ensemble is modern in feeling, like that shown in the other picture, yet as with it, conservatism is kept uppermost. Seen at the Merchandise Mart, this group is on sale at Chicago stores.

Walnut is chosen for this dining room ensemble, and given a soft brown finish. Contemporary in style, there is a complete absence here of the freakish quality that for some time delayed the progress of the modern movement in this country.

This attractive walnut group won first prize in a nation-wide contest conducted by a group of manufacturers whose aim was to supplement older types with a truly American, modern design. It was created by J. Gordon Elliott of Gutrie, Kentucky.

Bath Luxuries Are Shown in New Scents and Shapes at the Shops

THE fastidious bather who would never think of stepping into the tub without a dash of bath salts in the water can find at the toilet goods counter in one of the downtown stores a great number of perfumed bath crystals in very attractive bottles.

Thrifty buyers can have a large quantity of bath salts in the barrel shaped jars and, incidentally, these jars are quite ornamental on the bathroom window sill. The odors of the crystals are lavender, eau de cologne and violet.

A gift box of bath salts is a very pretty carton with three small bottles of bath crystals in bright colors. There is also a larger, more decorative assortment containing twelve beautifully wrapped packages of crystals in six colors—pink, yellow, blue, orchid, green, and orange.

For the traveler bath tablets come in small packages of twelve each. One or two tablets are sufficient in a tub of water. The floral scents are delightful.

In glorious modern shaped bottles are bath oils—something new and very fragrant. Large and small champagne bottles contain a bath oil in gardenia and pine. One-fourth to one-half teaspoonful of this oil is enough to perfume the water.

At this same counter are the fancy soaps—in guest size and large bars for the bath. For less than a dollar you can buy two dozen bars of perfumed soap in several colors. They call it "hard water" soap and the bars are large. Also in packages of 6 each are small floral shaped bars in violet, jasmine, rose, carnation and geranium. This soap costs less than six cents a bar.

Cold cream soap may be purchased in bath and toilet size and in several scents for dry delicate skins.

For the people who inevitably lose the soap in the bottom of the tub there are the large, delightfully scented oval bars guaranteed to float.

Jewelry Detail Is Vital Factor in Smart Dress

Tiniest Discordant Touch May Spoil Appearance of Well Chosen Clothes.

"The Eliquette of Introductions," a new booklet by Helen Bartlett, is now on sale at the Public Service Office, 1 South Dearborn. The price is 2 cents; by mail 3 cents, in stamps or coin. Address mail requests to Helen Bartlett, Chicago Tribune.

By Helen Bartlett.

NOTHING, absolutely nothing, may be overlooked by the individual who strives to be ultra correct in dress and behavior, not even the tiniest clip pin or simple signet ring. For jewelry, as much as any bit of clothing or characteristic gesture, depicts personality, and is as much a test of good taste.

How often a poor selection of jewelry, either poor in its lack of fitness, perfection, or quality, has ruined an otherwise attractive ensemble! Or, to reverse reasoning to the positive, consider how a well chosen ornament may enrich the beauty of the gown and add a charming something to help achieve the ideal—a well dressed woman.

Use Ornamentation for Beauty Emphasis.

A sparkling emerald ring, for instance, draws attention to the hand and a brilliant necklace, to the throat. That explains itself. If you have interesting hands and beautiful finger nails, enhance them by wearing a handsome ring. Such smart effects have been attained by clever women simply by the use of bits of jewelry to beautify one feature and at the same time detract attention from another less attractive feature.

Any and every bit of personal ornamentation, however, should be chosen with care. Remember it must always fit the individual as well as the occasion, be simple and of good quality rather than ostentatious and should never be worn lavishly. For even though each piece in itself is in admirable taste, if too much is worn at the same time—rings, watches, clips, pearls, bracelets, and pins [exaggerating, we hope]—only a gaudy picture is presented, and one without distinction. In such a display all charm of the precious stones and perfection of the settings is completely lost. Each splashy piece detracts from the others and nothing is gained save an unbecoming and undignified conspicuousness.

No Rules, but Here Are Some Suggestions.

There are a few specific instances where a word might assist in your choice. There are, of course, no rules to follow. Only good judgment can be your guide.

Jewels are worn a great deal with evening dress. The only warning is to avoid too great a show.

Business women should never make themselves conspicuous by ornamentation.

Older women should maintain a becoming dignity.

Debutantes should follow the rule of simplicity.

Simple tailored rings, such as signet, are not suitable for dressy or formal occasions.

People who are traveling should wear as little jewelry as possible.

Sport jewelry is worn only with spectator sports costumes.

Women in mourning may wear soft-glowing pearls if they have them. Any other ornament should be in dull jet.

Maids and servants wear no jewelry.

Men do better in distinguishing themselves by neatness and fitness of dress. If they do choose to wear jewelry it should be plain, "useful by intention and valuable by chance."

Sumach

By Eleanor Jewett.

The red of the sumach in the woods
Is like a plume of running fire,
Girdling the earth with crimson flight
On fairy feet that never tire.

The red of the apple glistens deep
And the red of the sun at setting hour—
And the red of the rose that summer knew,
When the blue of June was in flower.

Various reds gleam here and there,
Reds that soon will be gathered with skill
To paint the leaves on maples and oaks
When Jack Frost rides on meadow and hill.

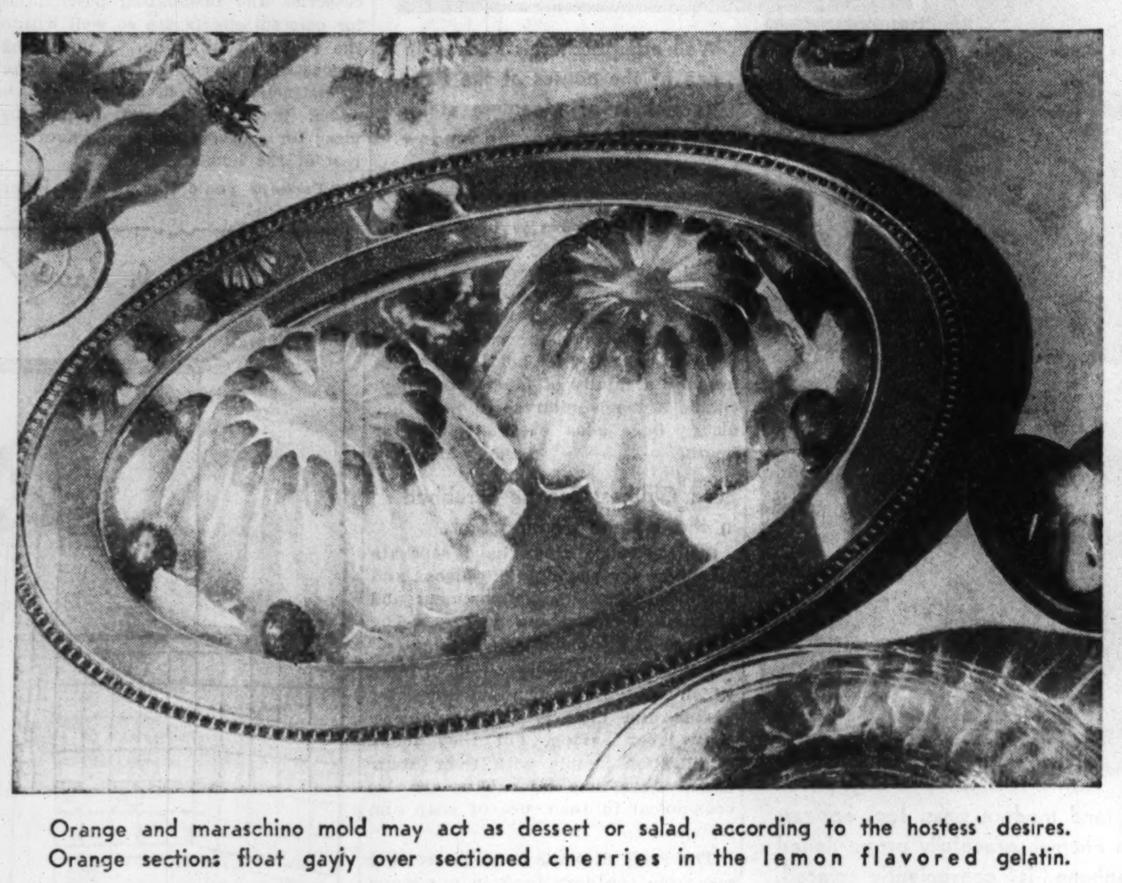
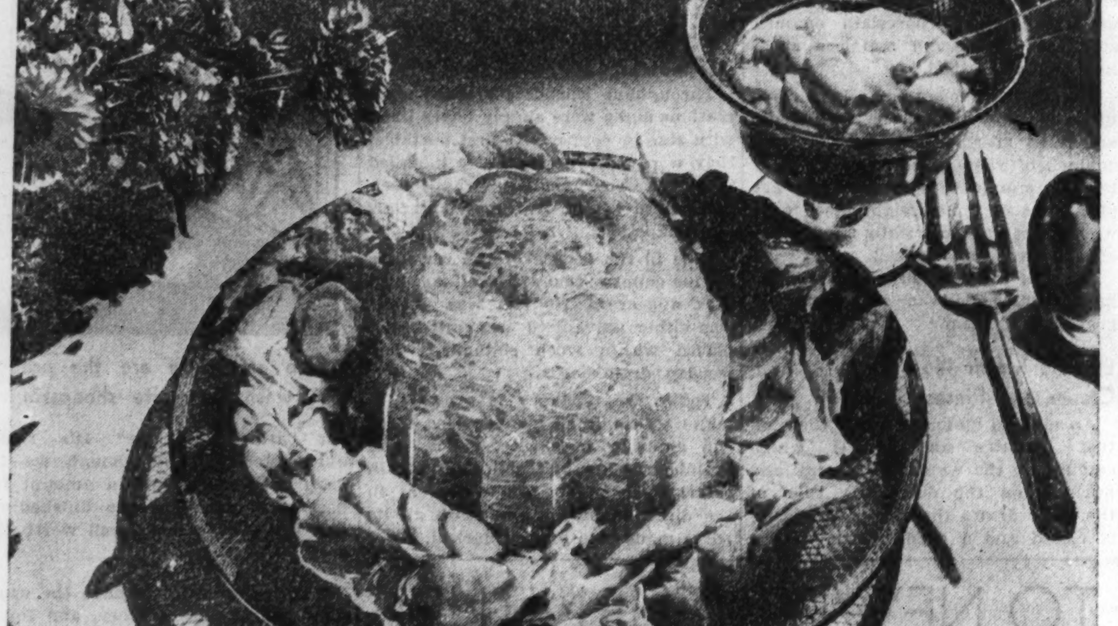
GELATINE IN FANCY DRESS

Fresh peach pie glace forms a pleasing finale for company dinners. Orange flavored gelatin is the base, poured in upon crisp baked pie shell and floating swirls of sliced fresh peaches.



Orange and maraschino mold may act as dessert or salad, according to the hostess' desires. Orange sections float gayly over sectioned cherries in the lemon flavored gelatin.



Carrot and cabbage salad fairly twinkles with sunshine, with finely shredded cabbage and carrot adding the color to the flavored gelatin mold. The garnish is of lettuce and thin carrot slices.

TEMPTING departures from the ordinary, shivering gleefully with their own importance, are makeable by even the least experienced kitchenette cooks these days—providing they are well supplied with the modern packages of flavored gelatine and a group of pleasant inspirations for using them.

And since with fall, pies are again back in full favor, the first quivering suggestion may well be:

FRESH PEACH PIE GLACE.

4 cups fresh peaches, sliced.
¾ cup sugar.
1 package orange flavored gelatine.
1½ cups boiling water.
⅛ teaspoon salt.
1 baked 9 inch pie shell.

Combine peaches and sugar and let stand 10 minutes. Dissolve gelatine in the boiling water. Add salt and pour over peaches. Chill. When slightly thickened, turn into the cold pie shell and chill until firm. Garnish with whipped cream, if desired.

Or for adding a brilliant touch of color to a somewhat monotone meal, flatter the family palates with:

ORANGE AND MARASCHINO MOLD.

2 cups boiling water.
6 marachino cherries, cut in eighths.
2 oranges, sections free from membrane.

Dissolve the gelatine in the boiling water. Arrange cherries in the bottom of the mold. Pour over this the gelatine, being careful not to disarrange the cherries. Add the orange sections and chill until firm. Unmold to serve.

As a third suggestions for varying the three meals a day, the clear white and orange of cabbage and carrot are utterly tempting when suspended in clear lemon gelatine.

CARROT AND CABBAGE SALAD.

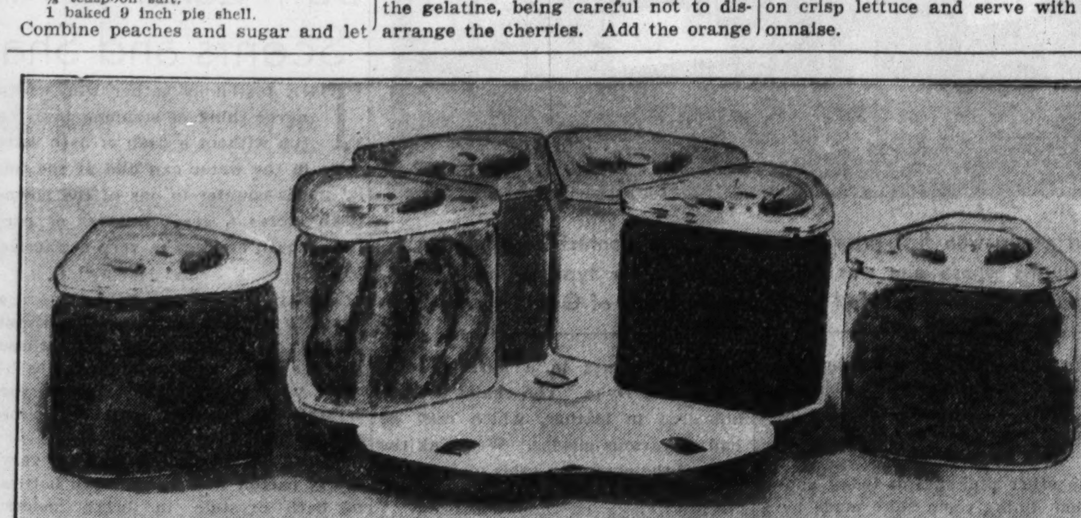
1⅛ cups boiling water.
2 tablespoons vinegar.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 cup grated raw carrots.
1 cup finely shredded raw cabbage.

Dissolve the gelatine in the boiling water. Add the vinegar and salt. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in the carrots and cabbage. Turn into a mold and chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce and serve with mayonnaise.



FOR THE REFRIGERATOR

A new five jar revolving unit of crystal glass on a base of synthetic steel designed for refrigerator, cabinet or pantry, and for serving buffet luncheons. A touch of the finger and this unit revolves, making any one of the five jars accessible at a moment's turn. The glass cover on the jars holds intact all necessary vitamin value in the food. Practical and decorative, too, this set.

Furniture of 40 Years Ago Stirs Memory

Bead Portiere and the Parlor Table Ghosts of the Rococo Past.

By Edith Weigle.

BACK in the days when women wore their hair in billowing pompadours, puffs, and artificial curls, when a rat was not something you caught in a trap, but a padding for your locks, and tightly corseted waists were making the gals breathe ever so lightly—back in the years when a bustle was considered a necessary part of the feminine wardrobe, and skirts went swishing and trailing along, ruffled afterthoughts of a voluminous gown—furniture, too, was different.

What a picture one gets if in imagination one puts a living room furnished in the style of the '90s next one done in the modern décor! In the former a round center table is planted as firmly as a tree in the exact middle of the room. Perhaps it has a white marble top. If not, it's sure to be of dark red mahogany, or rosewood, or walnut. And it has a pedestal base with three claw feet and much carving.

There will probably be a square piano of rosewood in this living room, and near it a music cabinet filled with touching ditties as well as with Brahms, Schubert, and Beethoven. And the floor lamp—don't forget that. With its huge, fringed silk shade and its ornamental brass standard, it may burn gas or oil. From the ceiling depends a gas chandelier and every time it is lighted one has to apply a white taper that is held in a patented curving brass holder.

The Curved Sofa on Which to Languish Prettily.

There is a lovely little curved back sofa in this living room of almost half a century ago. It is of rosewood or mahogany, hand carved roses and foliage decorating the top rail, and it has curving arms. The upholstery is black haircloth, or satin brocade, perhaps. Four little side chairs complete this "set," found in so many parlors of a bygone day.

Of course, in the corners were whatnots where were displayed many so-called choice objects such as pink, curly sea shells, artificial flowers in little stiff bouquets under glass, vases, statuettes, crystal pendent candlesticks, or candelabra.

Carpets in the '80s and '90s ran riot with flowers in a gayer array than were ever seen in mortal gardens. Huge cabbage roses of sultry red, bottle green leaves against a green ground—nothing monotonous here.

Mixture of Monstrosities and Fine Museum Pieces.

Not all the furniture of 40 years ago was funny or fussy. Some of it was very beautiful, indeed, for households that had bought pieces by Duncan Phyfe naturally kept them. There were exquisite examples of Empire and English Regency furniture extant. Many old homes in New England, for instance, were filled with the work of American and English cabinetmakers, items that are now considered museum pieces. Grand old clocks, drop leaf card tables, high boys, low boys, reproductions of Sheraton and Adam and Heppelwhite sofas, sideboards, cabinets, dressing tables remain to tell us of the beauty of the 19th century.

Garment Bags Now Foil Greedy Moths

ONE doesn't overlook new garment bags on the market these days because there is one at home that covers clothing. Heart-breaking disappointments and losses have taught housewives that every innovation in the garment bag realm should be purchased. Damage to clothing by dust and moths has been decreasing steadily; however, there will always be a moth or two hovering about waiting to pounce on a luckless garment exposed in one way or another to their appetites.

Displayed in a Chicago department store is an extra length bag that appears to be of heavy glazed chintz, with apple blossoms and green leaves on a peach background. It is strikingly bound in black. A zipper fastens the side opening. It is of specially woven material, chemically treated so as to seal the pores, thereby making the bag dust and mothproof. Soap and water may be plentifully applied to the outer surfaces without fear of shrinkage or of lessening the bag's resistance to dust and moths.

HIGH in the Merchandise Mart, in the more or less prosaic display room of a famous glassware manufacturer, is to be found a valuable collection of original wooden models for pieces of Sandwich glass.

These models [and it should be emphasized that they are not Sandwich pieces, but the mahogany models from which Sandwich design molds were later formed] are a century old, with a historical significance and artistic import to make the woman who loves that old glass tear her hair with delight.

There are models for nappies, decanters, goblets, salt cellars, candlesticks, sugar bowls, and a variety of wine glasses, all carefully executed in solid mahogany. From these templates or patterns were formed, then actual molds that gave shape and design to the glass pieces.

The molds look exactly like "glasses", made of wood, with their design as finely etched as any in crystal and their lines as beautifully balanced.

Many of these models have been used by the firm that owns them for turning out authentic Sandwich reproductions and others have functioned as an inspiration to their craftsmen in creating new early American patterns.

These models, together with glassware pieces reproduced from them, were on exhibition during the Glassware, Pottery, and China exposition at the Merchandise Mart in August.

Dress Up Gifts with Gay Rhyme, Timed Openings

ALTHOUGH "beauty is only skin deep," first impression means a lot when it comes to gift packages. What is more intriguing than strangely shaped, attractively wrapped, mysterious packages, whose wrappings seem to defy us to guess what's inside.

Every one has occasions to present gifts and in preparing the next gift box the "every hour on the hour" idea might be carried out. Attach a slip to each package giving the hour at which it is to be opened and a line or two hinting at the nature of the gift. For instance, if the package to be opened at 2 o'clock in the afternoon contained a pair of shoe trees, you might have something like this, "And when the clock creeps round to two, you'll find a help for that old shoe."

Such a box makes an extremely acceptable going away present to the person taking a trip. Packages could be opened daily or twice a day. Children, especially those in hospitals on their birthdays, or even those who have to spend a day there for minor causes, are delighted with these packages, which make short an otherwise long day.

An inexpensive and extremely fascinating item to include in the children's gift is a Japanese water plant made of paper, which blossoms out when submerged in water. A line or two similar to this on the slip would afford guessing material, "And when the cuckoo at eight comes out, you've something here which will open and sprout."

It is almost as much fun to plan and arrange a gift box of this kind as it is to receive one.

Humidity Needed in Our Homes in Winter

PLAN to give your home a little humidity this winter! Heat must have moisture. If moisture it not furnished by the heating system or by some artificial means installed in and around the house, it will take it from the glued joints of furniture, from the plaster, from the plants—and from the human body. It is quite ravenous, our heated indoor air in its demands for moisture. And unless we give it some it will seize on it where it can, often to the detriment of our furniture and our health.

Ye Old Drinkers Waved Goblets Instead of Mugs

THE ritziest of modern restaurants serve up our drinks in thick glasses and every one takes the custom for granted, thinking the wear and tear of large scale dish washing precludes the use of the fragile glassware we have at home.

But the use of heavy glasses in restaurants is symbolic of the passing of drinking as an art. At the old English taverns, where all brands of zippy liquors were on tap, and scholars, politicians, and poets indulged in drinking as a serious occupation, the glasses and goblets were fragile and gracefully wrought. Their great variety of shapes lent a piquant and cosmopolitan note to the taverns.

The goblet, in fact, saw its first vogue in these lusty English restaurants. It was popular in square design in the eighteenth century, later assuming the funnel shape in which it is known today.

Gay and picturesque mugs for beer drinking come from the Germans. Perhaps they are better suited to the sturdy beverage, but the English early had ideas for less "hearty" vessels than the stein, and some of their most lithe and slender glasses are dedicated to the quaffing of beer and ale.

Modernization Cost Paid Out of Income

THE comfort of so much modernization at the present time is that it can be paid for out of one's income. Many firms are in a position to do the work on the deferred payment plan.

And as many modernizations of one kind or another pay for themselves in the actual money they save the home owner, the actual outlay of cost to put a home into a more comfortable, livable shape is often not nearly so great as one might imagine.

Try Parched Corn.

As a change from serving pretzels with beer, have you tried the new parched corn? This is made of sweet corn, buttered and roasted, and comes in handy packages.

BY MAE TINEE.

GOOD MORNING!

When I heard they were going to make a movie from that best seller, "The Last Adam," I thought, "O, land, WHY?"—for the book left me as reactionless as a lump of cold lard. But the film based on the novel proved a pleasant disappointment. I liked it a lot.

It will not please the author so well, I suspect; for, without a doubt, James Gould Cozzens' central character, the misanthropic, lazy, loutish Dr. Bull, was no imaginary person. But I hold that he is so exceptional a country practitioner as to be a curiosity; and, while it is certainly all right to novelize about such a find, books and laboratories, and NOT the screen, are the proper dissecting grounds for revolting specimens.

A Doctor's Life.

SO—I acclaim the movie which has bestowed on Dr. Bull kindliness and understanding, softened his busy life with a mellow glow of romance, and made him the friend and not the foe of his community.

The picture—let's forget the book—is a series of episodes—sad, tragic, bitter, humorous—that occur among the inhabitants of the countryside where Dr. Bull has doctored folks and cows for years, and it gives a pretty comprehensive idea of a certain cross-section of life.

The story proceeds in interesting fashion, with Will Rogers in his element as Dr. Bull. (Just heard about that camp he donated to the Salvation Army. Swell of him—and, from what I hear, just one of many kindly things he's always doing for people.) At the moment his current portrayal seems the best he's ever done.

Shrewd Direction.

The character drawing throughout the film is pretty consistently shrewd. I DID find Vera Allen a bit stagy as the woman the hero loves, and got awfully, awfully sick of Andy Devine as a hypochondriac who's forever bursting into the action spouting adenoidically. Here, too, liberties have been taken with the original story.

Direction is astute in the main and the photography's splendid. The world of homely detail delights.

And so this Sunday morning I hand you "Dr. Bull" with my recommendation and the serene assurance that you're going to like it.

Bits aBOUTem.

CONWAY TEARLE has been given a featured rôle in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Forever Faithful," with RICHARD DIX . . . HAPPIEST AMATEUR PLAYWRIGHTS THOSE WHO NEVER ACHIEVE GOAL

By BURNS MANTLE.

NEW YORK.—(Special.)—One thing that is happening to the theater is that practically all the men and boys, not counting the maiden aunts, who have been convinced for years that they could write a play if they only were given a chance have been given that chance. And, what is worse, they have taken it.

Play writing should be embraced by amateurs only as a dream. Like buying a duck farm. Or a yacht. Or a lemon grove on which to retire and spend the rest of an active but woefully confused life.

So long as play writing is a dream it is a lovely adventure. There are millions in it. The thought of all the lovely experiences that could follow the registering of an overnight hit is more stimulating to a jaded soul than even the dream of inheriting a million marks from a German uncle who died of shock the day Adolf Hitler shaved his trick mustache.

But the awakening that follows putting the dream to a test by writing a play is sadder far than any other for which dreams are responsible. Failure, ridicule, blasted hopes, crushed ego, frustrated ambition!

It is easy to forget the duck farm and the lemon grove. It

Opera is with us again. The curtain of the Auditorium will rise tomorrow night to disclose the first of an entertaining series by the San Carlo Grand Opera company. Ina Bourskaya, of the Metropolitan, of Ravinia, and once of the Chicago companies, will open the season as Carmen.

Reversing the usual order of things, Alba Novella comes out of the films into opera. She was the Nedda of "Pagliacci" when Fortune Gallo made the first sound-film of an opera. He is bringing her here with the San Carlo Grand Opera company to sing the role.

HOLLYWOOD HAPPENINGS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—(Special.)—Gentlemen may prefer blondes, but have you ever noticed the reverse, as exemplified by how very few light haired gentlemen there are drawing salaries as screen idols? Of course, Conrad Nagel and Gene Raymond have their following, but how many more occur to you? The girls like them tall, dark and handsome; makes the movie heroes appear more romantic, the prosaic casting directors say.

- Joan Blondell and her husband, George Barnes, camera man, have bought the house they rented for their honeymoon. It's located at the top of a Hollywood ridge and used to belong to Mary Miles Minter's family. The Barneses bought land adjoining the place for a swimming pool, tennis court and terraced gardens.

- Christy Cabanne, who directed "Annapolis Midshipman," himself attended United States Naval academy and served a term as naval officer. So did Merian Cooper, head of the Radio studio, which made the film.

To tell or not to tell? Lutta Berntzan-Rolf ponders the question. This scene is from the Julian theater's new Scandinavian picture "Vi som gar Koksvagen" (We That Go the Kitchenway).

Mae West Will Be Starred in "I'm No Angel"

The Public's Fondness for "She Done Him Wrong" Amazed Her Studio

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—When her studio turned out that last Mae West picture, "She Done Him Wrong," it was less prepared even than Mae for the amazing popularity that greeted the picture. The studio had made it to be a regular "program" picture, expended no particular extra money and had a releasing arrangement which sold the film at flat sums and allowed for the return of little or nothing extra to the studio from the unexpectedly large box office intake. But for Mae's next, "I'm No Angel," all this is changed. The studio will distribute this film so that it reaps a percentage on the anticipated heavy business. And it's no program picture this time. They are as meticulous at the Paramount plant about every item that goes into this film or everything that is said about it as they are over any of the Jovian Cecil B. De Mille's ultra de luxe super specials—which is saying the ultimate.

● A headline screamed at Will Rogers. It read: "Insull Surrenders." Will looked and goshed. Then he walked to a corner of his set on "There's Always Tomorrow" at Fox's, adjusted his glasses and prepared to write a piece of comment about the development. Just then some one suggested, "Better look at the date." It was Oct. 7, 1932. The paper was on the set to be used for a "prop" and concerned the surrender to Canadian authorities of Martin Insull.

● They've been having trouble in making Ruth Chatterton's "Female" at Warner-First National, and now they are re-doing it with most of the scenes "reshot," story changed and several new faces, including that of Johnny Mack Brown, the ex-football player, and that former favorite, Lois Wilson.

● Hollywood was intrigued that Alfred C. Read Jr., the Oakland broker about whom the contention in ex-Mrs. Read's $100,000 alienation action against Claire Windsor centered, tried out as a pitcher with a coast league baseball club this spring. "That fellow certainly knows his curves," amused ones say.

● Since Dorothea Wieck's temperamental outburst at Dorothy Pindelle, the makeup woman whom Paramount assigned her, in which the German star stamped her foot and said, "You come when I call you; in Germany they run when I call them," some of Dorothy's girl friends on the studio lot have nicknamed Miss Wieck "Nazi."

● The smallest part Leon Errol has done in a long stretch of years he is to do more because he likes to than for any other reason. He's to have a part in "Alice in Wonderland." But it will be only a bit in that scene where Alice, walking through the looking glass, comes up in a room where everything is upside down and backside to, and she sees only the nether side of persons. Errol plays the part of her uncle in a frame. But it's the rear half of her uncle that he plays.

Instead of juggling Jack in this film as both Tweedledum and Tweedledee, the Paramount studio is using Roscoe Karns as one of the Tweedles.

● When John Barrymore visited Alaska in 1931 in his yacht he had a favorite guide whom he paid off by check. The guide treasured the check so much he didn't cash it, but pasted it on his wall. Barrymore heard about it, was tickled and sent a second check so the woodsman pal wouldn't lose any money through sentiment. Barrymore went back to the same guide on a recent trip from which he has just returned. When he got to the guide's shack there was the second check pasted alongside the first one. So Jawn took precautions to see that he got paid and stayed paid this time.

● They had to wait until one of four mares gave birth to a colt to begin shooting the Will James cowboy story, "Smoky," which Fox has been making on grazing land 40 miles from Flagstaff, Ariz. The film is all about the tiny colt and its start in the world, and the studio assembled four mares in foal instead of one to be sure the equine stork didn't double cross them. Victor Joy and Irene Bentley are the human principals, the cast also including Hank Mann, original Keystone cop, and that tried and true wild west film campaigner, Harry Carey.

● Martha Ford, wife of the actor Wallace Ford, found time around home heavy on hands so tried writing about the movies. Now she has a steady job as a fan magazine chatterer. Other actresses who turned to writing of the same sort are Reinee Davies, Marion's sister, and Eileen Percy.

● Groucho Marx, who always has ready answers, was rendered speechless the other day when one of his brothers double crossed him, slipping the confidential tip to a razzing pal that Groucho as a youngster sang as girl's trio until his voice started changing.

● Mary Pickford, back from her recent New York trip, decided to cancel her plans to sell Pickfair, the Fairbanks and Pickford estate. She says, "Because I like to live there." Mary said she had had no discussions of any kind regarding steps for divorce and that "when the time comes to talk I will."

● Johnny Bow, Clara Bow's 11 year old cousin from Brooklyn, calls her Aunt Clara and worships the very shadow of Clara's newly slimmed silhouette. Clara repaid the devotion of little tow headed Johnny, whom she has been rehearsing in her own home and with tenderest care, by getting him a place as an actor and a closeup in her comeback picture, "Hoop La," at Fox's this week. It was a carnival scene. Johnny's assignment was to ride past the camera on the merry-go-round.

● Confidentially, the four Marxes, who recently were joined by a fifth, Gummo, who also hangs around their seat, have made things so hectic during the filming of "Duck Soup" that Leo McCarey, director, looks like the second picture in one of these "before and after" sequences. Norman MacLeod is the only film director who handled the Marxes who did not. Everybody else seems to have reached the point where he begins to take the Marxes seriously.

● MacLeod, who is the director of "Alice in Wonderland," was discussing the difficulties attendant on finding the right girl for Alice. They mentioned little Ida Lupino, from the famous British family of comedians. Even Miss Lupino's tests didn't prove wholly satisfactory. "She ought to be good with that family record," one of the studio heads told MacLeod. "O, I don't know; what has she got behind her besides eight generations of comedy falls," MacLeod retorted.

Vaudeville Bills

The current programs of variety entertainment in the downtown cinema-and-vaudeville theaters are as follows:

At the Palace:

Mary McCormic—Former prima donna of the Chicago Civic opera and of the Opera Comique in Paris, in a song recital.

Rosalia—The Mexican fan dancer from A Century of Progress, assisted by a dozen ballet girls.

Johnny Woods—He mimics radio stars.

Norman Thomas Quintet—Negro musical merrymakers.

Gracella and Theodore—Dancers who specialize in ballets, assisted by half a dozen others.

The Chicago theater's program includes Ted Lewis's orchestra and cabaret revue, and Sally Rand in the seventh consecutive week of her fan dance, with ballet.

The State-Lake theater offers the Three Morin Sisters, radio singers; Johnny Lee and the Three Lees, pantomimists; Stratford and Mayberry in "Walking Back Home"; Fid Gordon with Sid Lesser; Fuller, Rawson and Dorval; the Three French Misses, gymnasts; and the Verne Buck stage revue, with a ballet.

STAR LEARNING FILMLAND WAYS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Four months ago to movieland came a timid young German actress, self-conscious because she knew so little English, because faces and places were strange, because she felt she was an unknown in a city of celebrities.

She is Dorothea Wieck, whose performance in the Berlin made "Maedchen in Uniform" brought her promptly to Hollywood with a starring contract.

Today Miss Wieck is no longer shy. She has learned to speak our language remarkably well, with only a trace of an accent left. She demonstrated that she had regained the independence for which she was noted in Germany by sending her manager, George Gumpel, back home, telling him that hereafter she'd handle her own business affairs.

HISTORIETTE

ADRIENNE AMES, who is being so wholesalely photographed recently, is a Fort Worth, Tex., girl—born one Aug. 3. Several years ago she moved to New York to study art. In 1931 while on a vacation she stopped in California for several weeks. Wishing to be photographed by one of the camera men who creates art studies of stars, she had a series of portraits made. She succeeded in getting them into the hands of Paramount executives and the result was a contract.

Following are some of the photoplays she has decorated: "Twenty-four Hours," "The Road to Reno," "Girls About Town," "Husband's Holiday," "Two Kinds of Women," "Sinners in the Sun," "Merrily We Go to Hell," "Guilty as Hell," "From Hell to Heaven," "A Bedtime Story," and "Disgraced."

Miss Ames is 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 120 pounds, and has dark hair and blue eyes. She likes golf.

CABARET GIRLS

These pretty dancers are members of the ballet in the cabaret show offered in the Empire room of the Palmer house. They answer to the names of Lorraine Santschi and Josephine Buckley.

Cabaret Shows Keep Right On Dancing Along

New Bills at Several Night Clubs; "Berlin to Vienna" at Drake.

NIGHT club entertainment in Chicago continues to run along at the unprecedented pace with which it greeted the opening of A Century of Progress. The programs change every now and then, but the shows go on, and World's Fair pilgrims, eager for a glimpse of revelry by night, are always asking for ringside seats.

● Among the outstanding personalities of recent openings are:

The Four Yacht Club Boys at Chez Parec, a dapper quartet of troubadours who write their own topical songs. They are pleasing the customers immensely, but their stay will end Sept. 27 because of other contracts.

The Carltons, Nita and Jack, new ballroom dancers in the Hangar Room of the Hotel La Salle. Their engagement began last Friday night. Johnny Hamp's band will depart Sept. 23 and Clyde Lucas' orchestra will follow.

Frances White, watch charm soubrette of many musical comedies, at the 225 Club. She still looks like the boyish little imp that used to sing "Mississippi" with a lisp.

● Dwight Fisher also appears in the program at 225 East Superior street, but his stay will end next Thursday night. He comes from the Mayfair, New York, where the Yacht Club Boys of Chez Paree polished up their talent.

● Fowler and Tamara, long run favorites in the Drake hotel's Summer Garden room, have changed their stuff. Last Wednesday night they switched from a Spanish to a Berlin and Viennese repertory of dances. The room has been redecorated in modern German style. The music: George Devron's orchestra and Don Carlos' marimba band. At the "gala"—a cabaret word meaning opening—the program ran until the small hours.

● The Empire room of the Palmer house, from which Veloz and Yolanda are preparing to depart [groans from every one!], has seated nearly 200,000 people since the opening of the Fair. About 20,000 have been turned away on sell-out nights. Veloz and Yolanda have promised to stay until Sept. 27.

● Ben Bernie, who will leave the Casino, at the Fair, early in October, says that this engagement has been the most fascinating of his career. He has been kept busy autographing souvenirs. Among the things upon which he has written his signature were a woman's dress, the cuff of a man's trousers, and the cast on a girl's broken arm. The Five Maxellos are now in their fifteenth week at the Casino, and the Four Originalities, whose music gives Bernie's men a chance to rest, continue on the bill.

● Carlos Molina, formerly of the Hawaiian room at the Congress, has succeeded Vincent Lopez as maestro in the Joseph Urban room. His orchestra has been expanded and now numbers sixteen.

● Mark Fisher, orchestra leader at the Edgewater Beach hotel, apparently holds some sort of record for length of residence. He is nearing the end of a full year. His twenty-two men play concert selections from 6 to 8 p. m. and dance music until closing time.

● The population of the Midget Village, which contains some cabaret talent, will not be dispersed when the Fair closes. Under its present management the organization will tour the orient during 1934 and will go to Brussels for the International exposition in 1935.

Faith Bacon, who has a right to the title of "original fan dancer," since she practiced the trick in an artistic manner with Earl Carroll's "Vanities" several years ago, is now the chief attraction of the cabaret show in the Hollywood concession at the Fair. In addition to her fan dance, she offers a "Chinese fantasy" of her own invention. Louis Macloon, former Chicago theatrical man who has been active as a stage producer on the west coast in recent years, is now the promotional manager of Hollywood. After the Fair closes he may stage a play here.

● Marion and Martinez Randall, dancers who have appeared in seventeen different countries, have succeeded the Broughton-Gagnon team in the Boulevard room of the Hotel Stevens. They have Cuban, French, and Brazilian numbers in their repertory.

● Manager Bouché of the Villa Venice hopes that all of the serious ballroom dancing teams in the downtown cabaret shows will "catch"—cabaret word meaning to see—Jane Moore and Billy Revel of his program. They are burlesque dancers who parody the stylish gestures and attitudes of their betters. C. C.

New in Chicago

"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN," which has not been acted in a downtown theater for many years, will be revived for an engagement at the Studebaker, starting tomorrow night. De Wolf Hopper, star of many comic operas and veteran of 55 years' experience on the stage, will appear as Tom. This will be his debut in the dramatization of Harriet Beecher Stowe's famous novel.

Harry Minturn, impresario of the production, will have the rôle of Simon Legree; Enid Markey, who has acted here often in Edna Hibbard's companies, will be Topsy; Margaret Fitch will be Eliza Harris; Guy Hickman will be Marks, the lawyer; and a child named Vivian Larsen will be Little Eva.

Boatner's jubilee choir and Freddie Williams' Gold Coast orchestra will supply the musical accompaniment.

This Actor Is Triple Threat Man of Drama

CRANE WILBUR, who plays the passé movie actor in "Dinner at Eight," is equally well known in the fields of acting, writing, and directing. His career takes him back to the early days of the movies. Motion picture fans will recall him as the hero of that famous serial, "The Perils of Pauline."

Wilbur then joined forces with a new company, known as the Mutual, and wrote, directed, and acted his own films. Next he took over a stock company on the west coast, playing the leading rôles. He also began writing plays for the legitimate stage. Now he devotes five to six hours a day to his writing. He has, incidentally, written and sold a play during the current run of "Dinner at Eight" in Chicago and is putting the finishing touches to another. Among the plays he has written that have enjoyed successful runs were "The Monster" and "The Ouija Board."

The last few years have found him playing leading rôles in several of our most important legitimate offerings. In addition to "Dinner at Eight" Chicago has seen him recently in Eugene O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra" and in the Edgar Wallace thriller, "On the Spot." Earlier plays were O'Neill's "The Fountain," "Bride of the Lamb," with Alice Brady; "The Woman Disputed," with Ann Harding, and "A Farewell to Arms," in which he created the rôle of Rinaldi. Prior to his early movie career Mr. Wilbur appeared on the stage with Mrs. Fiske.

Long Run Honors

"DINNER AT EIGHT," the George Kaufman-Edna Ferber play at the Grand Opera house, is a contender for the long run honors of that theater during the seven years of Shubert management. Now in its thirteenth week, "Dinner at Eight" has the third longest run of any attraction that has played the Grand since 1926. Its only rivals were both musical shows, "A Night in Spain," which ran nineteen weeks in the season of 1927-28, and "Yes, Yes, Yvette," which ran sixteen weeks in 1926-27.

The only other dramatic piece to play the Clark street theater for any length of time, was "Grand Hotel," which stayed twelve weeks. Such musical hits as "Of Thee I Sing," "Pleasure Bound" and "Sunny Days" remained eleven weeks, while the Marx Brothers in "Animal Crackers," Ed Wynn in "Manhattan Mary," and "Gay Paree" ran ten weeks.

Five more weeks will put "Dinner at Eight" ahead of "Green Pastures," which ran seventeen weeks at the Illinois two seasons ago, and "Strange Interlude," which totaled seventeen weeks at the Blackstone three seasons ago.

Eighty Years of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Retold

How Anti-Slavery Novel Became Folk Drama of American Theater.

By Charles Collins.

IN view of the fact that a revival of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be staged in the Studebaker theater tomorrow night, a few remarks about this old war horse of the American drama are in order. Here is our most famous and most frequently acted play, although the present generation of city dwellers know little or nothing about it except from hearsay.

It is a museum piece with an amazing record, to be catalogued as folk lore and a historical document rather than an example of dramatic literature. Whenever the political and economic ferment that led to the civil war is discussed by historians, "Uncle Tom's Cabin"—both the novel and its dramatization—is mentioned as one of the symptoms of that feverish period.

Harriet Beecher Stowe's romance, developing every phase of abolitionist emotion into melodramatic situations, was published in the spring of 1852. The story, as every one knows, took the northern states by storm, and dramatization was the inevitable sequel of this sweeping literary success. The first stage version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" had its première in the old National theater of New York City on Aug. 23, 1852.

Fountain Source of Myriad "Tom Shows."

This was the work of one C. W. Taylor, otherwise unknown in theatrical annals. He took strange liberties with his material. He neglected the St. Clair-Little Eva-Topsy elements in the tale; he overemphasized the sections dealing with George and Eliza Harris, and he gave his play a happy ending. This was a fatal mistake. Destiny had decreed that the institution of slavery and happy endings were incompatible. The play failed.

Then came George L. Aiken with a dramatization that followed the story's pattern of emotion and abolitionist propaganda more closely; that used Uncle Tom as a noble symbol of the sufferings of his people, Little Eva for lachrymose sentiment, and Topsy as a black soubrette. This work was staged in Troy, N. Y., early in 1853, where it ran for 100 nights. On July 18, 1853, at the National theater, New York City, the company began an engagement that lasted for many months and launched "Uncle Tom's Cabin" on its career as a folk drama. The New York run lasted for more than 300 nights.

First Players of Eva, Topsy, Et Al.

This production was the true source of the "Tom shows" that covered the country, except in its section of confederate sympathies, for well nigh eighty years. In March, 1931, the Theater Arts monthly magazine reported that there was, at the time of publication, no record of any itinerant "Tom show" anywhere in the United States. This date may be taken to fix the end of a period. When the "Tom shows" passed away, the whole institution of flesh and blood acting in this country was apparently moribund.

The playbills of this Aiken dramatization name G. C. Germon as the first authentic Uncle Tom; Mrs. G. C. Howard as the first Topsy, and Cordelia Howard [evidently a child, since she is labeled "little,"] as Eva. They were the founders of a populous tribe.

The Aiken version was in six acts, eight tableaus and thirty scenes. Before the end of its New York run it had three rivals, each exploiting variations on the original material in scenes and characters—one at Barnum's theater, one at the Bowery theater, and one in Brooklyn. Another production, consisting merely of tableaux from the novel, was staged in Brooklyn.

A Feast for Piratical Authors.

There was little or no copyright protection for plays at the time, especially when they were derived from published material. Mrs. Stowe's novel was a mine of material into which the adventurers of the theater might delve as they chose. Any new production was within the law, provided it was not an exact copy of the Aiken version.

So the hacks and play carpenters made merry work of their prey, straining their fatuous imaginations to serve up their fictional hash with a dash of novelty. Thus the play became encrusted with all sorts of fantastic nonsense—new characters, songs, tableaux and gags. The jazz age was still unborn, but these vultures jazzed up "Uncle Tom's Cabin" like madcaps of the present day.

The actors also added "new business" to the traditions. For example: William A. Brady, the veteran Broadway impresario, played the rôle of Marks the lawyer in the 1870s at a salary of $20 a week, with board. He is still proud of the fact that he put a new laugh into one of the scenes. When Marks reached the end of his knaveries in a hail of pistol bullets, Mr. Brady had the happy thought of opening his umbrella for protection!

Try to Find a Standard Text.

Thus it will be seen that there is no standard text of the dramatization of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and that many of the versions came close to lunacy. Perhaps the revival staged by the Players' club of New York last spring, a production undertaken with sincerity of purpose, crystallized the play into reasonable and lucid manuscript form. If so, it performed a fine service to theatrical scholarship, and the text should be carefully preserved.

Because of its hybrid authorship, its chaos of versions, and its amazing proliferation over the country, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is a true folk drama, although it is not based on a legendary material of extreme antiquity. It grew out of mass emotions that were passionate in their opposition to an evil.

In this connection one may note that the only other American play which approaches "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in its quality as folk drama also grew out of violent and widespread desires to abolish something. This play, likewise, was a forerunner of disturbed and tragic conditions in our national life. It was "Ten Nights in a Barroom," which voiced the early prohibitionists' hatred of the demon rum.

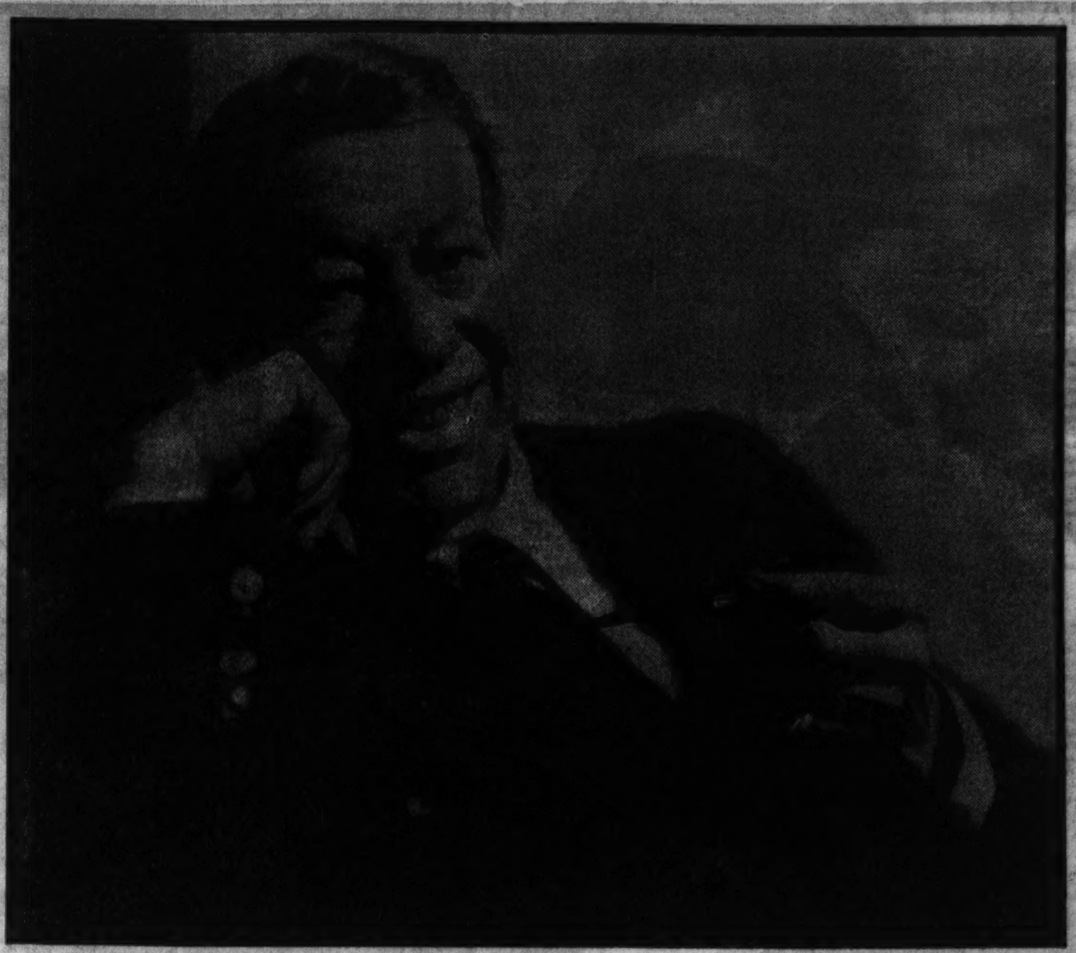
Hauptmann's P. S.

Gerhart Hauptmann, in his 70th year, has surprised the German literary and dramatic world by writing another play after, supposedly, saying his official last word with his preceding work, "Sunset." The new work, "Golden Harp," according to reports, is a fragile historical drama. The chief characters are two young counts and a baroness. The scene is the country house of a German reich count and the time early 19th century. Although the piece is not an operetta, it has been written with the intention that music shall be played throughout.

O'Neill Actors.

Ruth Holden, Donald McClelland, and William Post Jr. will have rôles in the Theater Guild's first offering of the season, Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness!" The play is now in rehearsal with George M. Cohan, Elisha Cook Jr., and Marjorie Marquis in leading rôles.

'UNCLE TOM' STAR



De Wolf Hopper, grand old man of operettas, will branch out into the drama in a revival of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," opening at the Studebaker theater tomorrow night. He will appear as Tom.

IT'S NOT HOLLYWOOD'S FAULT

Carole Lombard, movieland's newest [as this is written] divorcée, was speaking about divorces in general and her own from William Powell, which she obtained a few days ago in Nevada.

"I assure you the fact that we live in Hollywood and work in the movies had nothing to do with our divorce," says she. "It just happened, that's all. Who can say what the cause was? Certainly it wasn't Hollywood as so many people have suggested.

"The first thing the reporters asked me when I came out of the courthouse was, 'What do you think of Hollywood marriages?' So far as I am concerned, there was only one answer, 'I think they're swell.' No, I don't mean to infer that I'm considering another. That is, very soon. I've been so busy since I got back that I haven't had time to think."

Chicago's Love of Opera to Be Put to New Test

Box Office Response to Affect Length of San Carlo Singers' Stay.

By Edward Moore.

THAT opera is not merely an exotic importation but a live force in the music of the theater is the thesis which is going to have a practical test here in Chicago for the next few weeks.

Beginning tomorrow night, Fortune Gallo is bringing his San Carlo Grand Opera company to the Auditorium for a stay of some little time. It may be four weeks. It may even be eight. It all depends on how the test works out. Judging by reports from the Auditorium box office, the chances are good for a complete success as far as the public is concerned.

Tickets Amazingly Cheap —but Cast of Operas Is Not.

Mr. Gallo through a considerable course of years has based his activities on the theory that opera belongs to the public. He has fairly converted the words "popular prices" into a theme song. But never did the theme sing a more winsome strain than in this engagement. A season of opera at prices running from twenty-five cents to $1.10 a seat—$1.65 to you if you insist on sitting in a box—could hardly have a cheerier sound. It is, in a manner of speaking, tempo di scherzo e molto giubilando.

But Mr. Gallo, in addition to his NRA opinions in matters of prices, is also a first class showman, and his San Carlo company in past years created many pleasant memories. He showed then that he knew his voices and how to give them effective casting in operas that the people liked. His company this season looks considerably stronger than ever before. He has picked out a host of established artists, and he has added some recent discoveries of his own. For Fortune Gallo has never needed to be told whether a voice was good or not. He has an accurate eye and ear for talent.

Favorites of Ravinia Among Gallo's Singers.

Among the artists best known to Chicago are Ina Bourskaya, mezzo-soprano, and Leon Rothier, basso, favorites through a number of summers for their distinguished performances at Ravinia, and Dreda Aves, who came close to being the star in a recent performance of "Aïda" in Soldiers' field. These are members of the Metropolitan Opera.

Hizi M. Koyke, a tiny Japanese soprano, is to sing Cho-Cho-San in "Mme. Butterfly." She has never appeared here, but she seems to have made a large sized hit in other cities. Bianca Saroya, soprano, and Dimitri Onofrei, tenor, were leading figures in the San Carlo company the last time it came to the Metropolitan.

Thalia Sabanieeva, soprano, was an agreeable figure at Ravinia some years ago. Aroldo Lindi, tenor, sang one season with the Chicago Civic company and is said to have developed greatly since then. Claudio Frigerio, baritone, has been with the Metropolitan three years. Mario Valle, another baritone, has been making much of a name for himself. And one hears other pleasant words of Mary Lewis, Ethel Fox, Bernice Schalker, and others.

Gifted Strangers Also in San Carlo's Casts.

Some gifted strangers are on the list. Alba Novella, twenty-two years old, was discovered by Mr. Gallo when he made the sound-film of "Pagliacci" some time ago. Ina De Martino, another soprano and hardly out of her teens, is the niece of the former Italian ambassador to the United States. And there are several others.

A calendar of the first week's operas and their casts will be found in another column of this section.

NOTES OF MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

EIGHT "Cantos of American Life" will be presented by united choirs and dramatic units drawn from Chicago churches at the Hall of Religion at 7 o'clock tonight. It is a special program of religious music sponsored by the Chicago Church federation. Prof. H. Augustine Smith, director of Fine Arts in Religion at Boston university, is in charge of the program. There will be no admission charge.

The Woman's Symphony orchestra will play six concerts in the Gold room of the Congress hotel beginning Nov. 12 and continuing on the second Sunday of the five ensuing months. Ebba Sundstrom continues as conductor, Harold Marshman is a new business manager.

Programs under the direction of Mrs. Margaret Lester will be presented in the exhibit rooms of the National Council of Women in the Social Science building on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons. Tuesday's program will be given by Mrs. Helen Guest, pianist, Mrs. Helen Rudolph, soprano, Mrs. Hilda Bryant, contralto, and the Evanston String quartet; that of Thursday by Mrs. Dingeman, soprano; Kathryn Strong Gutekunst, contralto; Louise Cooper Spindle, composer-pianist, and Raymond Hanson, pianist.

Beginning Sept. 30, three performances a week of intimate and dramatic, rather than pretentious and spectacular opera, will be given by the Operatic Art theater under the direction of Edoardo Sacerdote. The Goodman theater is the place, and Mozart's "Don Giovanni" will be the opening attraction. Verdi's "La Traviata" and Massenet's "Manon" and "Werther" are announced for later performances.

The Mozart work will be sung by Janet Fairbank, Raymond Koch, Frederich Mueller, Hugh Dickerson, Leonard Huber, and others. Also in the company are Helen Bartush, Martha Blacker, Barbara Drangalis, Luella Feiertag, Olga Saga, Frida Savini, Eulah Connor, Bertha Waldman, Edwin Kemp, Charles Dobson, James Mitchell, and William Phillips. Prices will range from sixty-five cents to $1.65.

A carillon of thirty-six bells has been under process of installation at the Belgian village. Henry S. Wesson, first American graduate from the School of Carillon Art in Malines, Belgium, is the village carilloneur, giving concerts three times a day. At the end of the Exposition these bells will be given a permanent place in one of the Chicago churches.

Maurine Parzybok, a contralto artist of unusual voice and ability, will sing Guion's "Prayer" at the Fourth Presbyterian church vespers this afternoon. The anthems will be Burney's "Lord God of Hosts" and Rogers' "The Lord Is My Light." Barrett Spach will play the organ during the service, and Philip McDermott will play a postlude recital of works by Karg-Elert, Widor, Reger, and Franck.

A card for Frederick Fredericksen, the violinist, tells that during his vacation in Sweden this summer he played with great success in the great concert hall in Gothenburg.

Symphony Season Pushed Ahead to Benefit Visitors to Fair.

The Chicago Symphony orchestra is starting its season this year a week earlier than usual. Thursday, Oct. 5, and Friday, Oct. 6, are the dates for the first pair of concerts which will be conducted, as usual, by Frederick Stock, with Eric DeLamarter as assistant conductor. This is the forty-third season of the opera.

The early date, the orchestral management explains, is for the highly laudable purpose of showing visitors to A Century of Progress that Chicago stands for something definite and fine in the world of music. Early visitors to the Fair were given the same privilege when the orchestra gave a post-season series of concerts at the Auditorium in June under the auspices of the Friends of Music.

Price of Season Tickets Is Greatly Reduced.

Twenty-eight consecutive Thursday evening and Friday afternoon pairs of concerts will be played, and twelve others on the second and fourth Tuesday afternoons of each month beginning Oct. 10. Prices for season tickets range from $22 to $60 for the Thursday-Friday series, and $11 to $27.50 for the Tuesday one. This is a considerable reduction on prices of the last several years.

According to custom, there will be no soloist on the first three programs. Egon Petri, pianist, is scheduled for the fourth, Oct. 27 and 28. It will be an all-Brahms festival program, at which time Mr. Petri will play the D minor Concerto, the orchestral numbers being the "Academic Festival" Overture and the Fourth Symphony. The first program, by the way, will consist of Bach's Third Suite, Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, Debussy's "Iberia," and Stravinsky's "Fire Bird" Suite.

Maier and Pattison Renew Their Old Artistic Bonds.

Quite a number of soloists are booked to appear during the season. In addition to Mr. Petri, the pianists will be Dalies Frantz, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Rudolph Ganz, Vladimir Horowitz, Gunnar Johansen, Guy Maier, and Lee Pattison, who after several years of separation are once more tied in the bonds of two-piano appearances, Guiomar Novaes, and Artur Schnabel. The violinists are Mischa Elman, Nathan Milstein, Mischa Mischakoff, and Joseph Szigeti. Gregor Piatigorsky and Daniel Saidenberg will share appearances as 'cello soloists. There will be one singer, Grete Stueckgold, and two guest conductors, Sir Hamilton Harty and Feliz Weingartner.

Poldi Mildner will appear as a Tuesday pianist. But he is not on the Thursday-Friday series. Petri and Schnabel are scheduled to play for them. Elman and Milstein will play the violin for the Tuesday audiences and Piatigorsky the 'cello. The two guest conductors will likewise appear in this series.

Anne and Marx Oberndorfer will give illustrated music lectures during the season on the current orchestral programs in one of the Marshall Field & Co. assembly rooms. They are accomplished and able, and they know their subject.

Legionnaires Will Stage Gigantic Music Contest

WHAT is called the world's largest drum corps and band competition will be held on Soldiers' field Oct. 4 as an item in the American Legion convention meeting in Chicago Oct. 2 to 5. No less than 535 drum corps and bands will participate, and of these about 100 drum and bugle corps will compete for the championship.

Beginning at 8 o'clock in the morning, the various organizations will compete at five minute intervals. Eleven will be selected for the finals, to be held in the evening on the same field. The present champions, Salem, Ore., Capital post, No. 9, will defend their title then.

According to J. Gallivan, chairman of the contest committee, the American Legion corps contests have created a remarkable development in military music. Several types of bugles in the keys of G and D, as well as baritone bugles, an octave lower, are now used instead of the single type of some years ago, and consequently, in place of the monotony of "You're in the Army Now," we have elaborate melodies and harmonizations. Those who attended the Chicagoland Music Festival in Soldiers' field Aug. 19 will remember the fine showing made by the Racine post American Legion corps.

The coming contest promises 100 corps of the same standard, with a great variety of music, uniforms, and spectacular drill.

The judging will be by no means the least interesting feature of the contests. Eight judges are necessary. Two pass on drumming, two on bugling, one on cadence, two on military marching and maneuvering, and one on inspection, requirements for the last being as rigid of those of a British guard regiment.

"DR. BULL" SPEAKS

Old Producer's Valedictory to Living Drama

UPON the eve of his debut as a motion picture director Arthur Hopkins, for many years a leader in theatrical production, makes these observations:

"The theatrical producer whose audiences throughout the country have slowly disappeared and who desires to express his ideas to a larger public than the theater can command must inevitably turn to motion pictures or the radio, two fields up to now largely neglected by him. We have been inclined to disregard the tendencies of a changing world and vainly hope for the return of a day that is gone.

"The theater's chief justification is as a social force, and if by its very physical limitations it can speak only to hundreds while the pictures and radio speak to millions its voice must inevitably be lost in the clamor. There is no point in dwelling upon the sadness of this. It is the time of breaking down old adhesions, and the less we struggle against the operation the less we will suffer.

Gloom About Future of Living Drama.

"In a labor conference several years ago some depressing figures were produced showing the average number of weeks' employment the theater had been able to provide for its workers over a period of years preceding the depression. One labor leader said, 'I question the moral right of any business to continue that cannot provide its workers a decent living in normal times.' At no time since have I assembled a cast and theater staff without a sense of misgiving, knowing that unless I produced a success these people must inevitably suffer from my mistaken judgment.

"There has been a great deal of complaining among us about the ruthless raiding of our writers and actors by the picture companies. What right have we to complain when we cannot offer certain employment? I have known actors and actresses to make heavy sacrifices to stay in the theater only to be rewarded with spasmodic employment and, for extra recompense, a few bad notices. It is evident that if the theater is to be kept active by the commercial producers they must find a new source of revenue for themselves and additional fields of employment for their people.

"It is equally evident that if the theater becomes increasingly inactive the picture and radio companies will find seriously reduced the talent essential to their needs.

Film Business Might Endow Stage.

"What we thought was killing the theater may turn out to be its savior. It may be that the picture companies, in their stupendous and costly activities, have erected the machine that will keep the theater running. It may be that out of the picture business the theater producer can siphon the funds to keep the theater and its people active and repay the picture business by the steady development of talent. In his recent Schenectady address President Roosevelt said, 'It is not right that one business should prosper at the expense of another.' It may be equally true that it is not good for either business."

Mr. Hopkins' first picture will be based on Arnold Bennett's "The Great Adventure," the novelist's own dramatization of his "Buried Alive." Lillian Gish and Roland Young will have the leading rôles.

Joe Cook's New Show.

"Hold Your Horses," a musical comedy in twenty-four scenes, with Joe Cook as its star, was recently staged in Boston by the new Shubert corporation. The production employs 104 players, including twenty-eight show girls. Heading the list of auxiliary players is Harriet Hoctor, première American ballerina. Other featured players are Ona Munson, Frances Upton, Inez Courtney, Stanley Smith, Tom Patricola, Dave Chasen, Ed McNamara, Douglas Gilmore, Margie Finley, and Anthony and Rogers.

HOLLYWOOD HAPPENINGS

By George Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — [Special.]— Ivan Lebedeff, Russian emigre and former world war officer, who specializes on monocle wearing, hand-kissing, nobleman types, rates as one of the movie colony's best business men. I don't mean that he's the richest. But judicious investment has multiplied his film savings, which, to start with, were meager during the last four years so that they seem substantial when compared with those of many other highly paid actors. A great many of the stars who earned more are now out of public popularity, or broke, but there's little chance that Lebedeff will ever be financially embarrassed.

● Bruce Cabot's contract provides he may not fly a plane, play polo, hunt big game or box without his studio's [Radio] consent. But the contract doesn't say anything about Adrienne Ames.

● The popular novel which Paramount engaged Author Phil Stong to rewrite into screen form has been renamed for movie purposes, the title "Green Loaming" being changed to "Women of the Earth." It's a rural story by A. J. Cronin.

● In going after information for the Warner film, "Bureau of Missing Persons," Robert Presnell, studio writer-executive, says he was surprised to find the following reasons listed as responsible for the actual vanishing of persons sought by police:

Husband disappears because wife hung baby's diapers on radiator.

Girl leaves home because she had hair on face and wished to masquerade as boy.

Boy, because he didn't want any more violin lessons.

Wife because husband sucked his teeth.

Husband because wife couldn't forget honeymoon was over.

Husband because wife wore pajamas instead of nightics.

Wife because husband wore girl's panties.

Wife because husband snored.

● Edgar Kennedy of "The Average Man" comedies, who threw as many pies and took as many low comedy falls as any of them in the old days, says, "The day of wild fantastic slapstick in the movies is over. Why? Because Mickey Mouse does it so much better, jumping over roofs and such impossible tricks, and looks more natural while doing it."

● Among those taking pride in their unusual professions are Jim Vesey of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, "professional mudslinger," and Jack Casey at Radio-R.K.O., whose trade is "bruise painting." Vesey is listed, technically, on his studio's pay roll as "painter," and at present he's "aging" Greta Garbo's Swedish castle in "Queen Christina" by mixing buckets of synthetic mud which he slings with artistic abandon. He does the same with houses, walls, autos, and box cars, and "ages" furniture until it resembles antiques by sandpapering part of the paint off, brushing on a haphazard coat of stain and then removing part of this unevenly. He also is an expert with candle drippings, lamp black and charcoal smudge.

Casey, who is technically a makeup man, is the gent who always applies the gore, disfigurement, swellings and abrasion to actors and actresses who have to look as though they've been through a fight, a war or an accident. He recently flattened Bill Gargan's nose for "Aggie Appleby, Maker of Men."

● Uniforms made by M-G-M wardrobe department have three sets of buttons and insignia. That's so they can be worn as navy, army or police outfits.

Miss Lombard has decorated walls of her dressing rooms with sketches of the costumes which Travis Banton and other designers have made for her.

● Hugh Herbert, noted both as stage and screen actor, is likewise author of 150 playlets, sketches, and plays, many of them produced by Sam Harris and A. H. Woods. Herbert also collaborated with Murray Roth in writing the first talking picture, "Lights of New York." His current contract is with Warner-First National, and permits the studio to use him either as writer or actor.

● Virginia Moore, who used to be a pal of Barbara Stanwyck (then Ruby Stevens) in the chorus of Shubert New York shows, has recently been Barbara's script girl in her movies at Warner studio. Two other girls who were in the chorus of one show, "Gay Paree," with Virginia and Barbara are Mae Clarke and Claudia Dell. And did you know Barbara, as a girl, taught a Sunday school class and once had ambitious to be a foreign missionary?

● Director Norman Taurog keeps a tiny electric refrigerator in his office at Paramount studio. He keeps it padlocked, too. Who wouldn't like a glass of cold beer on a hot day?

● Bella Finkel (Mrs. Paul Muni) says she hasn't missed a single day on her husband's set while he has been making talkies. Even when Muni is playing on the stage in New York she sits backstage.

● Richard Ralston Arlen, baby boy of Dick Arlen and Jobyna Ralston, has been presented with a tiny gold ring by Andy Devine. On the inside of the ring the name "Elmer" is inscribed.

● Oscar Levant, young pianist, composer, and playwright, is working with Carl Hovey on the script of "Orient Express," in which Heather Angel and Harvey Stephens are to be featured at Fox. This European best seller is to be the first American directorial assignment of Paul Martin.

● Sally Eilers has given away her last five scottie puppies. She says her scotties have raised more than 100 scottie puppies for her during the last few years.

● Here's William Powell's studio luncheon: Thermos jug of hot soup and six pieces of zweiback served in his dressing room.

Debut on Broadway.

Molly Picon, who has been a dominant figure of the Yiddish stage for nine years, will make her first dramatic appearance on Broadway this season in a comedy with music called "On the Wing." The play was written by Claiborne Foster, who intended to appear in it herself until her marriage and retirement to domesticity in Rio de Janeiro.

Will You Do One Simple Thing To Lose Fat?

By Margaret George

Simply Drank Delicious Germania Herb Tea—Lost 5 Pounds a Week

SIXTY-TWO pounds of fat in three months was the welcome loss in weight I registered without taking any harmful drugs or salts—without violent exercising — and without going hungry for a single minute. Drinking 3 cupfuls a day of delicious Germania Herb Tea, obtainable at food, department and drug stores, I hold entirely responsible for the loss of all my ugly fat and the return to me of a youthlike strength and energy I had not possessed in years. Delicious, I found it, and many women and men write and tell me the same.

Before After

Will You Make This Test?

Test Germania Tea under our positive guarantee that it must make you lose from two to five pounds a week, that you must be delighted with the wonderful results or we will pay back your money and no questions will be asked. Amateur Plays Wilt When They Hit Broadway is easy to forgive the German uncle, if any, for taking refuge in Switzerland.

But once put pen to paper and produce a play for the world to sneer at and critics to make sport of and life takes on a bitterness from which there is no recovery.

D. Hubert Connelly; a Good Secretary Gone Wrong.

D. Hubert Connelly was a good lad and successful. Secretary to the president of the local board of transportation, he was making such progress in New York politics as a young man with Tammany connections might be expected to make.

Then he decided to take up play writing. Drama, he insisted, was all about us. Particularly on the first pages of all the newspapers. And no one had the sense to pick it out and put it on the stage.

Months back there was an attempted jail break at the Tombs. Some gunman's moll had slipped him a gat, according to the more chastely worded of the reports, and the prisoner had attempted to shoot his way to freedom.

There, agreed D. Hubert Connelly, was a chance for a great drama. He put it into a piece called "Crucible." The other day "Crucible" was produced. And if D. Hubert Connelly heard the audience laugh at his most dramatic episodes and read the caustic comment of the professional reviewers next day he probably spent the following twenty-four hours in the depths of his own personal hell.

D. Hubert Connelly's dream of being a playwright was fine. All he put into his play was worth considering as dramatic material. It has been used before and it will be used again. But, lacking the invention and the skill to use it creditably, he would have been much, much happier to have played along with his job and preserved his dream.

"The Sellout" Tries to Satirize Radio Advertising.

Mr. Connelly was generous in writing "Crucible." He put everything into it his theater-going experiences had convinced him was effective theater. A kidnaping, a frameup of the innocent heroine, the bribing of an honest turnkey, the shooting of the jail guards, the suicide of the turnkey when he realized what he had done, and the final arrest of "The Blight," who was a secret trafficker in drugs and the cause of it all.

Come we now to a second play that must have been a lot of fun so long as it remained in the dream stage. "The Sellout" it is called, and it was intended as a roaringly funny satire on radio advertising.

A meek little lady inherits an advertising agency specializing in selling goods over the air waves. Trying to uphold her reputation as a stickler for moral conduct and high business ethics, her staff is having a hard time getting any business when she calmly suggests that what they really need is a good beer account.

They find a prospect and are giving an audition of one of those funny programs that you have all heard, including the announcement by a sweetheart announcer and a fifteen minute episode in a stirring crime drama, with sound effects, when a couple of beer racketeers break into the studio and threaten to blow it up if anything more is done about advertising the rival beer.

To top the satire the sweet little lady who has inherited the agency not only sells 51 per cent of her agency stock to one racketeer but 49 per cent to his gangster rival, and then marries one of them.

Mr. Miller Creates Fun in a Confused Way.

The Albert G. Miller who wrote "The Sellout" has some fluency of expression and a sense of fun. But his ideas as a playwright are confused and his director has not been able to clarify them. The comedy is neither smart enough for satire, extravagant enough for farce, nor true enough for comedy. It, too, would have kept its author much happier if he had been content to preserve it as a dream of the great comedy he was one day going to write.

Minnie Dupree is in this cast, playing the lady who owns and sells the agency, and Jane Seymour is the smartest of her employés.

The question used to be, What actors are going from the legitimate theater into the movies? A question of greater interest today is, Which of the actors who have gone into the movies are coming back to the theater?

Two years ago I, realizing the growing seriousness of this situation, sent forth a Macedonian cry to John Barrymore, pleading for his temporary return to take the open leadership of the American theater.

John made no public reply. Privately he admitted that he would like to come back, but could not afford to give up the $175,000 a year the pictures paid him.

Helen Hayes Urges Colleagues to Return to Living Drama.

A few weeks ago Helen Hayes, also sensing the seriousness of the situation, issued a personal summons to her friends and contemporaries of the stage to take time out for rebuilding purposes. Let them, pleaded Helen, consider the mother who bore them and fitted them for the career that has made their fortunes. Let them come back to the legitimate theater and play a part or two for the good of the drama, as well as for the salvation of their own artistic souls.

This year outstanding parts have been offered to Lionel Barrymore in the hope that he will return for at least a few months. Kathryn Hepburn has been offered and has half promised to play, at least one part and perhaps two. Roland Young, among the lesser stars, is already back. Laura Hope Crews is coming back for one play at least, and perhaps two.

There has been a good deal of angling for Marie Dressler and May Robson, following their screen successes.

A Century of Drinking Songs in "Bottoms Up"

IS the advent of beer changing the tempo of our popular music? So far it is perhaps a little too early to tell. The tempos set by the jazz orchestras, perhaps the most accurate arbiters of public taste, are still rather insistent.

Possibly by next summer there will be some band concerts that have something to say on the matter. For bands are quite as insistent on their own tempos as jazz orchestras on theirs.

While waiting for a decision, one might take a look at a collection of songs just off the press of the Paull-Pioneer Music corporation. Edited by Clifford Leach, the book describes itself by its title, "Bottoms Up."

Ring Lardner gives it an introduction with this:

When congress done scuttled our schooners
Whose cargo was oil for our pipes,
It made us a nation of crooners,
Sans harmony, "minors," or "swipes.'
But now that once more we are getting
Real brew, you will hear once again
Real songs that were meant for quartetting
By real and noncrooning he-men.

Unfortunately Lardner comes near to ruining it all in the next stanza by opining in mocking language that it is hardly possible to have 6 per cent singing on 3.2 per cent beer. But his original intentions were good.

Clifford Leach is said to be the pen name of a song leader in the east who has had a good deal to do with college glee clubs. Apparently he knows a lot of songs. In 128 pages he has collected about every drinking song that ever had circulation, not only the established favorites of former song collections but a considerable number of the saltier variety that have usually passed from mouth to ear and from ear to mouth, "Frankie and Johnnie, "Cocaine Joe," and "Morphine Sue," "The Souse Family," "Willy the Weeper," "Mademoiselle from Armentieres," and an uncommonly hairy-chested chantey, "The Drunken Sailor," are among them. Frequently there are footnotes indicating that the printed version is not entirely accurate.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

Women's Features

SEPTEMBER 17, 1933.

Ellen Wacker and Durie Malcolm were among the pretty young sub-debs at Miss Nancy Morse's debut in Lake Forest a week ago Saturday, when six young girls—three in Lake Forest and three in Winnetka—were presented formally to society. Ellen is returning to school at Dobbs Ferry this fall, and Durie left Thursday for school in Chatham, Va.

Miss Jessica Slocum and Miss Barbara Bastien are full-fledged young ladies now. Both are to be debutantes this season, the former in New York, where she lives, and the latter in Glencoe, where she resides with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin E. Bastien. Miss Slocum has been visiting Miss Bastien, who was her roommate at Dobbs Ferry.

The most diminutive equestrienne on the littlest pony at the recent Dunham Woods horse show was 4 year old Peggy Orth Jones, who proudly displays in this picture the yellow ribbon she won in the children's pony class. She is a daughter of Mrs. Frances Orth Jones of Wheaton. Her 7 year old sister, Patty, also was an entry.

Chicago Learns Fun of Being Foolish, Asserts Genevieve

Returned Expatriate Finds that City by the Lake Has Gained a Lot of Knowledge from A Century of Progress Exposition.

By GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

OMENA, Mich., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Still on vacation, with the time drawing near for the return to Washington and work, by way of Chicago and play.

Ever since we went to Washington, three years ago, my theme song has been: "Chicago's a marvelous place to work, but Washington's where they know how to gather the rosebuds in off hours."

But after a crowded twenty-four hours in Chicago last week I'm not so sure that theme is right; in fact, I'm beginning to think it is as wrong as Peggy Joyce was a long, long time ago when, being interviewed along the old lake front, she snuggled into her mink coat, caressed with diamond-laded fingers the orchids at her waist, and murmured lazily: "O, your wonderful Chicago weather; it makes me feel like working."

For this new Chicago, of which I had a gleeful glimpse this week, has donned her prettiest party dress, stuck a ribbon in her hair, put slippers on her feet, and is gayly insistent that this is a fiesta day and that she be permitted to "carpe diem," or whatever it was the old Romans used to use as an alibi for not keeping office hours.

● This new Chicago has, thank the Lord, the same verve of old; the verve we've longed for often in leisurely Alexandria, Va., which is, for the present, home; the verve that makes a Chicagoan run for a street car, even when the car is standing still; the verve that makes a Chicagoan push, maybe a bit too briskly, into the elevator, but likewise enables him to grin when the other fellow pushes in even more briskly.

But this new Chicago, thanks, doubtless, to A Century of Progress, has, along with the old verve, a new gala spirit. She has always known the meaning of the maxim, "Business is business." Now, it seems to me, she has grown in knowledge and knows when business isn't business. She has learned, again thanks to the Fair, the fun of being foolish, even futile, on a happy holiday.

● Even the usual agony accompanying an early morning arrival on a train was changed into ecstasy as I jumped off the train so early in the morning that a mirror seemed a gratuitous insult. . . . The department store bigger and better than ever. I grew quite lyric as I bought a pair of gloves. The salesgirl was puzzled, but polite, as she explained to this hick: "No, the aisles haven't been widened; it must be the indirect lighting that makes you think it is all so much larger." . . . An hour at the beauty parlor; who ever argued that a vacation in the country was a substitute for drug store color? . . . Then a

Abandoning Traditions, Turks Turn Faces Sharply Westward

Men of Constantinople Lay Aside Their Long Knives and Red Trousers; Women Emerge from Veiled Past as Judges and Aviatrices.

By COUSIN EVE.

VENICE, Italy.—(Special.)—The waters of Constantinople were always full of ships, and these were full of tourists. Not Americans, but Europeans. One night the Oceana, a new Italian liner, was in. Blazing with lights, dance music blaring from all her decks, she was the picture of up to date luxe.

They called her voyage the "Cruise of Five Nations." Italians, Austrians, Hungarians, Germans, and Dutch people of a wealthy class were aboard and making the round trip of the Mediterranean, stopping at many of the islands, like Corfu, Malta, and Rhodes, now the popular port of call.

Woman Pilot Rises at Four to Fly.

The weather this year happened to be perfect. Cairo was cooler than Italy. Jerusalem was chilly. Turkey was springlike.

One American tourist said to an eminent Turkish woman: "I have been riding round Constantinople all day and I haven't seen a single Turk." "What do you think we are—people who wear baggy red trousers and carry long knives?" replied the Turkish lady with just resentment.

For have the Turks not two women judges, and their first aviatrix, Mlle. Bedrea, who is a sort of second Amy Johnson? Working as a stenographer to support her mother, she rises daily at 4 in the morning, flies for two hours, and now has her pilot's license. In October she makes her first flight to Ankara with an air squadron, to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the Young Turk party.

Miss Caris Mills Aids Refugees.

The most interesting woman we met in Constantinople was an American, Miss Caris Mills. She has a charming small house on the heights overlooking the Asiatic shore, where she has been carrying on a general welfare or rescue work since the times after the war when two million Russian refugees came surging in. Still young, good looking, and what Italians call sympatica, she is a sort of unofficial ambassadress to the sublime porte, and knows the secrets of the mysterious city as she knows her own pocket. Her work of rescue still continues, but her gifts from America are dwindling with the times. She disposes of forty hospital beds, has the popularity to get jobs for men and women, and finds food for the perishing.

Miss Mills' visitors' book contains the names of Harriet Monroe and Mrs. Robert Gregory, as well as that of Abdullah Kiry of Afghanistan, whose family and suite were so numerous taxi ride to another store. The taxi went faster than any in Washington, but I felt seven times safer. No wonder the driver was surprised that a fare so obviously not wealthy should give him such a fine tip.

A TITLED FORMER CHICAGOAN AND HER SON

Chicagoans Learn Fun of Being Foolish

● Then the first glimpse of A Century of Progress. They tell me it should have been at night, preferably a mystic, moonlit night. Noon, with the sun glaring and the mercury soaring, was good enough for me. I'm like the lady who said she didn't care much about bright colors, just so they'd let her have red and orange. Add purple and I'm happy. So the dazzle was grand. Sun glasses would have been a desecration.

A luncheon over in the Trustees' lounge. . . . Rufus Dawes at a nearby table. Mary McDowell, bless her big heart, next me. . . . Across the way Ora Snyder, the candy kid, in a gown as pretty and pink as one of her bonbons. . . . Ethel M Coleson Brazelton, the lecture lady, telling what the Cordon club has done this busy summer. . . . Mrs. Harlan Ward Cooley of the Chicago Woman's club extending happy hospitality. . . . Frank Lloyd Wright's son, John, with a design for a new United States stamp in his briefcase. . . .

Another luncheon over at the Century club. . . . Clare's a perfect hostess. . . . Even had a photographer over to snap the crowd. . . . There are no photographers in the world who can compare with the Chicago newspaper cameramen for courage, candor—yes, and charm. . . . Didn't the prince of Wales invite Eddie Johnson over to visit him, and didn't Rumania's royal Marie remember Mike Fish? . . . The snapshots on the walls of the lounge. . . . That's particularly good of Mel Traylor. . . . A nice one of a nice man, as Ned Beck smiles down from the wall (boss, please note). . . . George Dixon in sepia. . . . Lucy Linn in black and white.

● That picture of Mrs. Howard Linn got Antoinette Donnelly, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE's beauty oracle, to talking about the glamorous gals in town. . . . Mrs. Linn, I believe, does an Abou Ben Adam at the head of the list. . . . Antoinette ought to come to Washington (there I am back at work again) to do a series on the celebrities of the capital.

● Who are they?

First of all, whether they like her or not, every one rates Alice Longworth. . . . I happen to like her a lot. . . . Even if I didn't I'd have to admit that she stages a dramatic third act entrance wherever she goes. . . . Never dresses elaborately . . . makes rather a point of not . . . very little makeup, perhaps nothing but powder . . . an inevitable bit bag, tweed in the daytime, velvet or satin for evening . . . a package of her own cigarets, so she can count her smokes and never go over the day's allotment.

Daisy (Mrs. J. Borden) Harriman . . . gray hair and very large eyes . . . the most magnificent carriage and posture in Washington . . . she says it's all due to her parents . . . they made her balance a book on her head for half an hour every day of her childhood life . . . if that's true we'd all better buy a book.

Lady Lindsay, American wife of tall Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British ambassador . . . a little plump, but so very pretty.

Rose Nano, Mexican wife of Frederic Nano, Rumanian chargé d'affaires, is usually rated the most glamorous lady in the diplomatic corps

Señora Espil (Chicago's Courtney Letts Borden to you), recent bride of the Argentinian ambassador, will certainly give Rose a run for the title

With which clever linking of Chicago and Washington I shall call it a day and return to my holiday.

ONE OF THE BEAUTIES OF LONDON

A noted English beauty is the duchess of Leeds, who, before her marriage last March to the duke of Leeds, was Mlle. Marianne de Malkhazouny, daughter of the late M. Iskender de Malkhazouny and Mme. de Malkhazouny. Their wedding was an event of the London season.

Health Resorts Are Advised to Prevent Noise

LONDON.—An important precaution to be taken by managers of health resorts, the distinguished London physician, Lord Horder, said recently in an address at the British health resort of Herrogate, is to prevent noise.

Many health resorts which have excellent medicinal springs, facilities for special bathing or for treatment with light and other needs of invalids are rendered useless by excessive noise, he said. Noisy amusement concessions are permitted. Fast automobile traffic is allowed to pass close to hotels and hospitals.

Turks Abandon Vivid Traditions, Turn Faces West

that the sweet little stone house could not contain them all and the overflow was out in the garden.

We sailed away from Istanbul in the morning. The Bosporus glittered and small boats full of melons danced on the bright waves. Our ship was not large, but with a nice swimming pool and deck tennis. The food was wonderful and the passenger list included the names of many celebrities, among them an Egyptian princess and suite and a Turkish cabinet member, Minister of the Interior Sakra Bey, with his family. Also on board were Mario Indelli, one of Mussolini's youngest envoys in the Ministero Estero, a very handsome and purposeful young diplomat, and Prof. Friedrich A. Breuhaus of Berlin, architect of the liner Bremen, whom I got to know quite well. Not only did he plan the spans of the superliner, but also those of the Super-Graf, No. 9, to be finished next year. This airship will have two promenade decks, sixty cabins, hot and cold water, and shower baths.

Many exciting details of this were lost to me because Dr. Breuhaus speaks no English and my German was acquired before the days of airships. Perhaps one would imagine the German builder to be a plethoric, bewhiskered gentleman, behind spectacles. But no; a dark eyed athlete, he looked about 30, has a round, smooth face, and is the father of eight sons. His architectural business had led him to Ankara, where he was building for the Turkish government, as well as to Italy, Spain, Switzerland, and South America; also Greece and Czechoslovakia. Frau Breuhaus was a slim blonde, smartly dressed, graceful. Business was very good, said the noted builder.

Insull Gives Gorgeous Dinner Parties in Athens.

The trip from Constantinople to Venice is without compare—a rosary of dazzling hours in blue seas of almost intolerable beauty. Cool breezes, purple and golden sunsets. We take in Gallipoli and its amazing memories, to which a cool granite shaft stands witness, and the Dardanelles, with swift running currents, emerging into the Ægean sea. Here a divine atmospheric combination weaves magic spells over sea and sky and Grecian islands, floating fair and free. Many and jewel-like they lie, abodes of peace and beauty, everywhere on the horizon.

Our next stop was Athens. A chief table topic in this locale is Mr. Insull, resident of Athens. Men who frequent the Grande Bretagne hotel, and others of the great world in Constantinople, had given us vivid pictures of the Insulls. Often entertaining large dinner companies of sloe eyed Greeks, Mr. and Mrs. Insull presided in their old form; the hostess in grand toilette with diamond bracelets to the elbows and necklaces of pearls. Mr. Insull with a wry, rare smile. Then there is the legend of the heavy Insull suitcases deposited at the express company under guard. All Athens knows of this valuable freight.

Greek and American Refugees Seek Peace in Athens.

At high noon, as soon as we arrived at Athens, I took a car, a guide and set forth to see ruins, to court adventure. It was a dry, hot day, vibrant with light, color. Piraeus, the sprawling port, was somnolent. By long, smooth toll roads we came to Athens, each yellow house locked in by itself behind its own walls, its own gate. Dry and dusty, blazing hot. We passed the new little houses of Greek refugees from Smyrna; three families to a house. We passed the Armenian refugees' encampment, they and the Greeks having intrigued against Turkish rule and been expelled from Turkey. Soon we galloped to some very handsome ruins, Temple of Zeus. Then a whirl by the ex-palace of the ex-king. Two sentries in white ballet skirts and bayonets were on duty at the ci-devant royal gates. We saw the new stadium, holding thirty thousand. For Olympic games only, it is a half ellipse, with a background of young cypresses. The shops of Athens look quite nice; there are one or two solemn looking tea places.

At the Grande Bretagne they said that Mr. Insull was at Khivissa, a hill resort a half hour from town. "No rich man stays in Athens in August," said the concierge.

Venetian Bomb Was Sad Blow to Parthenon.

And so we whirled round and round, ever higher, circling toward the sublime ruins of Pericles' City on the Hills. Our guide made us get out at the Temple of Theseus, the most perfect of all the ineffable ruins. Directly below it, and between us and the Acropolis, are the deep and extensive diggings of the University of Chicago archaeologists. The name of Prof. Capps was mentioned. The guide volunteered that all the streets and buildings up to the Acropolis would be torn away and the immense tract, costing one hundred million dollars, excavated. "How will they finance this?" said I. "Half from the University of Chicago and half from the Greek government," said the guide, who then explained that the statues yet to be found and books to be written on the subject would repay the debt. Superb optimism, one thought. The excavations did not look so very interesting from the little squint I had. But in the face of Mars Hill where Paul preached the living God and one's impatience to reach the topmost pinnacle of these relics of the Golden Age, that was natural.

A terrific climb to the Acropolis. Steep steps worn by the ages, and majestic ruins on all sides. If the Venetians had not dropped a bomb in a powder magazine in 1647 the Parthenon might have reached us in perfection. As it is, the columns of the north side have been wonderfully restored and now work has begun on the south side. There it stands, its marbles a pink yellow with eternal sun and time, no two pillars of the same proportions, no two spaced alike.

Famous Hill Brings Memories of Socrates and Saint Paul.

The tiny temple of Victory wins your heart with its loveliness. The Erectheum with its six graceful caryatids shows bits of a magnificently carved stone roof.

The guide takes his flock out in front. Really, as between the ruins and the view, give me the view. The distant sea, blue and gleaming, and nearly the whole of Greece basking in the fierce sun. So few trees, almost no green. Over in that cave Socrates took his first hemlock cocktail. Over in that bay, Themistocles walloped the Persians. Xerxes, sitting hard by, was an eye witness. Paul climbed those narrow steps to Mars Hill 54 A. D., his figure easily visible from the Prophyleal. You could look down into two theaters, one Greek and one Roman, now excavated and in good repair. A strong fresh breeze blew on the hill and the heat was not intolerable.

Currant Kings Now Reign in Corinth and Patras.

One hated to leave the glorious scene, this center of an art era long gone by. And yet one must leave some time—the ship siren was beginning to hoot. So we fled, pursued by dozens of venders, photographers, beggars, youngsters, other tourists. Soon the Isles of Greece fell back of us in their atmospheric haze of enchantment and were swallowed up in a black velvet night. Hardly one star was familiar. Even the Dipper looked a little queer, so big and ostentatious!

Then the Corinth canal. We ripped through that in one hour and was fairly amusing, searchlights leaving it bright as day and cooler. Corinth and Patras are Greek towns that house the currant kings. Their palaces adorn the shores of these waters, their yachts float on the seas.

One day Sadka Bey and I had a long chat. Laughing he showed me an article he was reading in a French magazine, Le Mois. It was by Lord Snowden and entitled "Mr. Roosevelt, Laughing Stock of the World." I asked the Turkish minister of the interior if Snowden made his points. And he said, decidedly not. And then in a very charming, friendly way, stated that since his inaugural Mr. Roosevelt had shown himself to be one of the great men of the time and that Turkey was full of his admirers and glad to coöperate with him.

I told the minister I should have been glad to see the Gazi. But this, he said, was contrary to a definite Turkish policy. The president works twenty hours out of twenty-four, and in August takes a cure and receives nobody. Even the forceful Herriot in Turkey for reasons of counter diplomacy, was obliged to go down to Ankara to hold the conferences he had crossed Europe to have. The minister explained that Kemal Pasha's object in abandoning Istanbul and creating the new capital in Anatolia was similar to George Washington's when he took the government away from Philadelphia and decided upon Washington.

Venice Doesn't Pale Before Constantinople.

After we left Brindisi in the night came a long serene day and night in the jade green waters of the Adriatic. So near the shore of Dalmatia did we run that houses and villages stood forth on the bare hills. The sea was absolutely smooth and the volcanic islands many. In the early morning Venice lay on the horizon, the pale sea full of small yellow sails. Soon we were sailing in, past the doge's palace and the lagoon quite full of big boats and Italian war vessels. It all looked perfectly charming. I was afraid that Venice after Constantinople would be like the morning after the night before. But not so. Venice was safe in her own perennial charm.

Dashing out into Venice one sees the greatest changes. Shops are smartened up, there are no beggars. Streets swarm with visitors, but they are Italian and French and buy nothing. All are traveling because of the 70 per cent reduction in railway fares.

Acid Causes FAT
says Noted Doctor
An authority has said that adults frequently gain weight in direct ratio to the acidity of their systems. He found that by correcting acid balance you could reduce over-fatness and tend to correct the irregular and excess fat-making activities so that chin, face, bust, hips and abdomen would gradually regain their normal proportions. Shadowfoam restores acid balance and reduces you the safe and sane way.
REMOVE YOUR SHADOW OF FAT
Shadowfoam contains no dangerous drug nor weakening physic. It helps the food you eat turn into vital energy instead of fat. It is a simple, harmless way of burning up your fat by oxidization and makes you feel like a new person while reducing.
A representative of Shadowfoam Co., Battle Creek, Mich., will be in our Drug Department on the Main Floor (State Street Store), to consult with and give free advice regarding excess weight.

Americans Quit Salzburg, Flock Back to Paris

Travelers Seek New Diversions as Music and Drama Festivals End.

By May Birkhead.

PARIS.—[Special.]—A number of New Yorkers, some of whom visit the continent regularly about this time of the year, have been returning these days from Salzburg, where the big August musical and dramatic festival has just come to a close. Salzburg, this year perhaps more than ever, has become a center for making professional engagements for the coming season.

One of those who took advantage of the festival to arrange for continental stars to appear at the Metropolitan this winter was Paul D. Cravath, who spent the entire month of August at the historic Schloss Weitworth, which he rented from Fuerst Auersbach. This is a considerable property, beautifully located in the midst of lakes and snowy peaks, something over a dozen miles from Salzburg. With Mr. Cravath were his daughter, Vera, Mrs. William F. Gibbs, and her friend, Mrs. Alice Damrosch Pennington, and the children of both of them.

Emil Winter Decorated by Austrian Government.

Emil Winter of New York and Pittsburgh has just reached Paris after spending part of August at Salzburg. He went from here to his steel manufacturing works in Carinthia, taking with him a number of guests who had a chance to see the interesting ceremonies held at the village of Radenthein in connection with celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of Mr. Winter's establishing his plant there. He received on this occasion the highest decoration bestowed by the Austrian government.

Among other cosmopolitan figures who are finding their way back to Paris after attending the operatic, dramatic and orchestral performances in Salzburg are Geraldine Farrar, Comtesse Sala, the former Mrs. Edwin Bayer of New York; Mrs. Henry Evans of New York, who is an habitué of the festivals; Marlene Dietrich, who was staying in Salzburg at the Hotel de l'Europe, and Baron Maurice de Rothschild of Paris.

Marlene Dietrich Guest at Baron de Rothschild's Party.

The baron is usually seen in Deauville for the grande semaine there, but was with a party of friends in Salzburg in late August. In June, during the week preceding the Grand Prix, he gave a brilliant party at which Marlene Dietrich was one of the principal guests. Other New Yorkers seen in Salzburg were Mrs. Gertrude Moulton, Michael Strange and Ernest de Weerth, who collaborates with Max Reinhardt.

Recent arrivals in Paris from Cannes, where the season has been animated, are Princess Illyinsky, wife of the Grand Duke Demitri of Russia; Lord and Lady Castlerosse, Mrs. Winston Churchill, duchess of Villarosa, who was Mrs. Robert Goelet; Marquise del Sera Fieschi, the former Mrs. Clafford of New York, and Mrs. Charles H. Chadwick of Chicago.

BRITISH DIPLOMAT'S WIFE POSES READILY

One of the favorite subjects of newspaper cameramen is pretty Mrs. Malcolm Henderson, wife of the British vice consul in Chicago. "Because," they explain, "she knows how to pose without making it apparent." Before her marriage last spring Mrs. Henderson was Miss Paula Wilms.

SAUCE for the GOOSE

By D—— D——.

MRS. EDWARD H. BENNETT'S outfit at the recent Dunham Woods horse show, in which she was a judge, was just about the snappiest thing in country clothes and made every woman who saw her wish she had just such an outfit to wear this fall. But not every one would look so stunning in it as Olive Mead Bennett does. It consisted of a brown tweed skirt, striped vertically, a white shirt like a man's, with a brown string tie; a brown felt hat very much like a fedora, and flat heeled brown suede oxfords. When a shower made it necessary to put on a wrap she donned a loose three-quarter length polo coat, very swagger and smart.

● While our thoughts are on clothes we must remark about the number of good looking new fall outfits seen at the tennis matches at Onwentsia last week. They weren't comfortable on Tuesday, for the sun was hot, but the next day they were au fait. One of the smartest new suits was that of Mrs. T. Philip Swift, a gray cloth with a three-quarter length swagger coat that had a yoke of velvet the same shade. A touch of red on a gray hat and the former Betty Hoyt was chic as well as pretty.

● Vivian McGrath's method of holding his racquet with both hands in most of his backhand strokes surprised many at the tennis matches who didn't know that this was permissible. "You can hold a racquet with your feet if you can and want to," explained Larry Callahan to a lovely lady who questioned McGrath's method. McGrath, by the way, is pronounced as if it were spelled McGraw.

● "Men never hit women. This is such a tradition that if a husband hits his wife the law allows her to get a divorce. So you mustn't hit your sister, no matter what the provocation," explained grandmother to 8 year old Johnny.

"Well, then, why don't all the married men just hit their wives and be free and happy ever after?" queried this precocious young man.

● There is the cab driver who hasn't yet lived down the embarrassment he suffered one day during the recent women's amateur golf matches at Exmoor. Driving a young woman, he broke into conversation with her about the tourney.

"And who," questioned the young woman, "do you think is going to win?"

"Well, I don't know much about it," he answered vehemently, "but I hope it's anybody but that English woman . . . Wilson—that's her name."

His passenger was THAT English woman . . . Enid Wilson.

● Arthur Bissell's greatest joy in life at the present moment is a hundred year old Venetian mirror—a handsome reflector a dozen feet in height framed in gold. After years of storage Mr. Bissell has found just the proper place for it in his new sea green and tomato colored quarters on upper Michigan avenue.

The mirror belonged originally to Mr. Bissell's great-grandmother. It was in front of it that he and Mrs. Bissell were married a few decades ago.

● There was nothing at last week's Fort Sheridan-Cantigny Farm polo game to match Mrs. Jacob Baur's ostrich tipped hat. Lavishly decorated with navy blue and white plumes both above and below the brim, it attracted more attention than the hard riding of the army and civilian polo stars.

● Did you know that Howard Linn got a pilot's license way back when flying was young and airplanes didn't even have wheels on which to land them?

● Apropos flying, one of the funniest conversations we've heard in many a day was one in which a woman who prefers flying to any other mode of transportation was trying to convince Owen Jones, the owner of the Palwaukee field, that flying was just as safe as riding on a train or in an automobile. The young woman was insistent that she was as safe in a plane as she was in any other public carrier. If the debate had been reversed it wouldn't have been funny at all, just natural.

● There's a delicate point of etiquette involved in this: Was it quite polite for the little debs who had attended a large debutante luncheon on the north shore recently to go to the drug store in the same village in which the hostess lived to add to the slim luncheon they had had? Straight from the house in which they had been entertained most of them went to the store in the center of the village, and there in a body they satisfied the healthy hunger that hadn't been satiated at the party. Wouldn't they have been embarrassed if the debbie or her mother who had given the luncheon had walked in?

Gala Concert Will Aid Southampton

SOUTHAMPTON, L. I.—[Special.]—A gala concert is to be held in the auditorium of the new grammar school in aid of the Southampton Village Improvement society, of which Mrs. Arthur B. Claflin is president.

On the committee in charge are Mrs. John G. Peck, Mrs. George Barton French, Mrs. George C. DeWitt, Mrs. Frank Corwith, Mrs. Clarence Foster, and Ruth Enoch.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. King, who were at the Irving this summer, are sailing today for Europe on the Bremen. Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Whigham are at Sunnycroft, where they will remain until October.

Also here are Mr. and Mrs. T. Markoe Robertson, Mrs. Charles E. Van Vleck, Mr. and Mrs. Pendennis White Reed, Mrs. George Sloane, Mr. and Mrs. Fraser Horn, Mr. and Mrs. William Adams Kissam, Mr. and Mrs. Delancey Kountze, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Williams Sage.

SKIRTS AGAIN BRUSH ANKLES

The "sun-back" dresses of summer days give way to frocks with just a suggestion of "open-air" effect for fall wear. Two distinctly feminine features of this frock are the fluffy sleeves and long skirt.

N. Y. Society Stops Briefly in Home Town

Social Leaders Expatriate Selves, Use Eastern Homes as Way Stations.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—I dare-say we shall have warm weather before the snows fly, but at present, just as if the elements were aware that fall officially follows Labor day, we are having proper autumn breezes.

Of course, it is far from undesirable. Every one is back in town for the few weeks between summer sojourns and winter departures. The subdebs and their older sisters who follow the cult of higher education are getting their wardrobes ready for the scholastic semester. The young hopefuls now entering college are departing for the various freshman weeks, and Gotham matrons are in a maze.

Autumn Days Mean Bright Ensembles and Brisk Polo.

Out at Belmont the cool, bright days are bringing society forth in the most colorful of ensembles. Long Island is listening to the crack of mallet on ball, and along the avenue it is once more delightful to saunter from the Ritz to the Plaza. It is the one time when New York is delightful. Personally, I cannot resist haunting the east side of the avenue most afternoons; basking in the sun and being honestly glad to see people again.

But while town is thronged just now, that condition will not last for long. More and more the fashionables are taking to Europe for their fall and winter residences.

Numberless notables are absent even now, and more are planning to depart.

Mrs. Herbert Shipman Cultivates English Society.

One of these is Mrs. Herbert Shipman, widow of the late bishop, and daughter of Edson Bradley. Julie Shipman has quite given up Newport and the imposing Bradley mansion, Seaview Terrace, to cultivate English society. For the last two summers Julie has been ensconced in the midst of Mayfair, much to the disappointment of the Rhode Island spa, and fall will find her retiring with the rest of fashionable London to the Riviera.

Also among the expatriates are the Harry Hays Morgans—Harry being the brother of Viscountess Furness that was, and by name still is, and of Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt and of Mrs. Benjamin Thaw.

The Morgans have been summering at Cannes, doing no end of flying, and making part of the gay crowd of internationals. Incidentally Mrs. Morgan, the erstwhile Mrs. Paul Arnold of Philadelphia, is expecting the birth of a young Morgan who will be a cousin of little Gloria Vanderbilt and of the Hon. William Anthony Furness, who is now four.

Ronald Tree Takes His British Hunting Seriously.

The Ronald Trees must also be included in the absent group. Some years ago Ronnie and his wife, the one-time Nancy Perkins, niece of Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson and of Lady Astor, purchased El Mirador, the colonial estate at Greenwood, Va.

Having spent her childhood in old Virginia it was only natural for Nancy to cherish the south. But, while she still owns El Mirador, the Trees are never there. Ronnie Tree prefers England and its hunting. He is joint master of the Pytcherley hounds, and has recently purchased another hunting place, Ditchley park, in Oxfordshire. The Trees are dividing their time between the park and Kelmarsh, in Northamptonshire.

Alice Astor Takes Up with the Intelligentsia.

Alice Astor von Hoffmanstahl is also of the foreign colony at present, though the sister of Vincent Astor and former wife of Prince Serge Obolensky is to return to town for the autumn and winter season.

Alice hasn't seemed to care much for Gotham society. I do hear that she has become an ardent follower of the intelligentsia, and recently has been in her schloss near Salzburg, neighbor to her friend Max Reinhardt who is preparing to dispose of his famous home at the same place.

PHOTOGRAPHIC FAVORITE

When Chicago Was Young

THROUGH TEN DECADES WITH THE MARTHAS

The Famous Fifties

By Herma Clark.

A letter from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York. (Note: Herma Clark interrupts her story of Chicago of the Eighties to review Chicago's century of social life. The letter of today is written by Martha Freeman Esmond, whose mother, Mrs. Martha Freeman, wrote in the "Thrilling Thirties" and the "Fabulous Forties" to Mrs. Julia Boyd of New York. Martha Esmond's letter is addressed to Julia Boyd, the "Dear Julia" of the story usually found in this column.)

Abraham Lincoln, as photographed on July 4, 1856.

DEAR JULIA: This is to ask you to make us a holiday visit, spending Christmas and the New Year with us and as much longer as possible. I want to exhibit my new husband—I still feel thrilled at being addressed as "Mrs. William Esmond"—and I want you to see our new Ontario street home. It is pretty, dear Julia, "if I do say so as shouldn't," to use the old New England phrase. It's not pretentious, but very pleasant. I feel sure you'll admire my parlor carpet of body brussels with a bright pattern of roses, which gives a cheerful aspect to the room; the black walnut parlor set, upholstered in horsehair; the marble topped center table, on which lies the family Bible mother gave us on our wedding day; and the what-not, whose shelves contain curios . . . among other things a wax fruit piece under a glass dome (wedding gift) and a large conch shell which father brought home from Cuba. I love the steel engravings on the wall, especially "Trial of Lord William Russell" and "Shakespeare and His Friends." Our house is heated by open fireplaces in every room, and we have gas for lighting. So convenient! My heart is full of gratitude for all my mercies and blessings.

I don't mean to boast of my husband. You'll see him soon and can judge for yourself what a prize I've drawn in the matrimonial lottery. But I will just say that every day brings me new evidence of the high estimate older men put on his character and attainments. I was so pleased when Mr. Silas B. Cobb engaged him for some legal work yesterday. Mr. Cobb is one of our most substantial citizens, with large real estate holdings. And—if you'll believe it—Senator Stephen A. Douglas has written Will from Washington, D. C., asking him to look up a point about the charter of the new University of Chicago. Will is not the university's lawyer, but, because he has done some work for the Illinois college at Jacksonville, Senator Douglas seemed to think he would know about this matter.

Doesn't it seem as if Chicago is really coming along to have a university in the city? The building is situated on a plot of ten acres facing Cottage Grove avenue, property given to the institution by the senator. The corner stone was laid July 4, 1857, and the university is now flourishing. It is pleasant to feel that our young men will not need to go east for a college education.

Senator Douglas is the great Democratic orator and statesman, you know—the one who debated last year against the Hon. Abraham Lincoln of Springfield. These debates aroused so much attention, even in the east, I'm sure you must have read some of them. Senator Douglas, known as the "Little Giant," was eloquent in defense of the Dred Scott decision, but Mr. Lincoln's "hot bolts of truth," as Will calls his speeches, drove home to his hearers the moral issue that must be faced. Senator Douglas says: "I care not whether slavery is voted up or voted down." Mr. Lincoln says: "No man has a moral right to own another man."

What exciting times these are! Mr. Norman B. Judd and Mr. Joseph Medill—the latter one of the owners of the PRESS AND TRIBUNE—were here this evening talking to Will about the possibility of Mr. Lincoln's being nominated for President by the Republican party next spring. Father hardly thinks Mr. Lincoln can defeat the great William H. Seward, who is sure to be a candidate.

To go back to your visit, which I again urge. I want so much to have you see Chicago, which has changed since you were here. Your first and only visit was in 1854, when father had just come here and we were living on Wabash avenue, near Madison street. Now father's home is on Van Buren street, near Michigan avenue. Our city changes rapidly, improving all the time. I think even mother likes it now, though she used to insist she wouldn't live here for worlds.

We have horse cars on State street and it seems quite city-fied. Our dry goods stores are excellent, and you'll want to buy silk for a gown at Potter Palmer's store on Lake street. Cooley, Farwell & Co. have recently completed a fine building on Wabash avenue. I have just met a young man who is clerking there. His name is Marshall Field, and he came from a place you and I knew well in boarding school days—Pittsfield, Mass. He worked in Deacon Davis' store on North street, he tells me, but I don't recall him at all. Do you?

Mrs. George H. Laflin (our schoolmate, Mary Brewster) is living here, as is Mrs. Charles B. Farwell, who was our brilliant teacher at Maplewood institute. Mrs. William Blair (our sweet school friend, Sarah Seymour) will want to entertain you in her beautiful home on Michigan avenue, near Congress street, I'm sure. Her widowed sister, Mrs. Ballard, is staying with her, and I know you'll love her. Then I want to have you meet Mrs. William Gold Hibbard, whose husband has done well in the hardware business. They are devout members of the Episcopal church, so you'll have much in common.

I plan to take you to the Tremont house to dine in the ladies' ordinary while you are here. It is our finest hotel. Indeed, travelers say it is one of the best in the country. It is equipped with every luxury, having 300 rooms and seven bathrooms.

I hear Will's key in the front door, so will close. He has been at a meeting of the Chicago Historical society.

Lovingly yours,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

P. S.—Mr. Potter Palmer is still a bachelor, and I shall give him a chance to meet you. He's quite a catch.

Miss Clark will give her illustrated story, "Dear Julia," at the Illinois Host house, A Century of Progress, Tuesday, Sept. 19, at 2 p. m. Readers of this column are invited; no admission charge.

Dolly Madison Pictured in Rotogravure

By Eleanor Nangle.

[Picture in rotogravure section.]

DOLLY MADISON'S was the blithest spirit a strict Quaker upbringing ever tried to quench.

A small heritage of Irish blood was one of her weapons.

In her girlhood Dorothea Payne was so beautiful her mother dressed her in somber, all concealing clothes, but her slight figure, oval face, jet black hair and sparkling blue eyes wrought havoc among the Quaker lads, who stood where they might watch her pass and, almost to a man, laid their hearts at her feet.

At twenty-two she was married to serious young John Todd; at twenty-five she was a widow—poised, charming, warm, and endearing of manner.

A friend, the young senator, Aaron Burr, one day asked if he might bring the "great little Madison" to see her. It was at Madison's request. Dolly debated, said "Yes."

Madison Was Many Things Dolly Was Not.

The great little Madison was many things that Dolly was not; he was discreet, industrious, self-disciplined and a bit introverted, but his wooing of Dolly was methodical and swift. Madison was forty-three, she twenty-six. Again Dolly debated and again she said "Yes." It was, like so many matings of opposites, almost a perfect match.

Dolly Todd became Dolly Madison in 1793 and almost at once Dolly's heart, repressed in girlhood, thrilled to gaiety and social activity.

Adams succeeded Washington as President. Jefferson followed Adams, and in the White House a new social order began. The Adamses had half-heartedly built up a social system, the foundation of which were barely settled when Jefferson knocked them down with his naive simplicity.

Mrs. Madison, wife of the secretary of state, saved the day for Jefferson, a widower. With an instinct for the social gesture, she made an ideal hostess in the executive mansion. Under her tutelage Washington grew up socially. For eight years Dolly was Jefferson's hostess—excellent training, if she had needed any, for the eight years she was to spend in the White House as first lady in her own right, when her husband succeeded the great Democrat.

Dolly Madison had every quality needed for the successful wife of a great executive who must be social. She had buoyant health, genuine enthusiasm, a flattering memory for names, and a gentle Irish sense of humor. She brought grace and formality to formal functions; "levees" became gay parties.

Mrs. Madison Meets War Magnificently.

Not even the war of 1812 could crush the resilient, warm spirit of the first lady; and when, in the summer of 1814, it was brought to the very capital of the nation, Dolly met it magnificently. On an August day of that year, twenty-one English vessels sighted off the coast of Virginia proceeded up Chesapeake bay to the mouth of the Potomac river and, without interference, landed a force of some 4,000 several miles below the city of Washington.

Left alone [the President was on an inspection trip] she set about certain tasks with a foresight and practicality her critics found astounding. She overlooked no detail in protecting her husband's papers, the handsomest of the furnishings, the silver, books, and velvet curtains. All these were calmly, swiftly, placed beyond the reach of the invaders who were, in fact, advancing steadily.

Through that day Dolly was in command of the White House. In the middle of the afternoon a furious rider brought a command from Mr. Madison for her to leave at once. The Americans were retreating; the road to the capital was now unprotected, and the enemy was about to enter the city but Mrs. Madison, with soft firmness, would not leave until her tasks were finished. At last impatient entreaties moved her; she was about to enter a waiting coach when she wheeled about and turned back into the house. At the last moment she had realized that the Gilbert Stuart portrait of George Washington was still on the wall. She pressed into service all who were available, had it taken down and, because it was so large and the frame so heavy, ordered the canvas stripped from the wood.

Returns to Find Home in Ruins.

Quite calmly, then, Dolly entered the coach at the door, ordered a servant to take her parrot to a neighbor's, and proceeded, with innumerable bags and boxes, to seek shelter. When the British evacuated Washington she returned to find her home a heap of ruins.

In the spring of 1817 James Monroe succeeded James Madison. Dolly was content. Leisurely, with her husband, to whom she was increasingly devoted, she prepared to resume life in Montpelier, definitely out of public life.

Madison's sight began to fail; she became his eyes; as he grew more and more feeble, his care and comfort became almost her only interests. When he died, in 1836, loneliness drove her back to Washington.

After twenty years she had not changed, except to age, but she was poor, poorer than any one suspected. As a young woman she had delighted in handsome clothes; now her gowns were plainly old fashioned and worn.

She lost Montpelier and her servants. There were lawsuits—and bare cupboards. It was only the agreement of congress, on her 80th birthday, to buy her husband's letters and notes for $25,000 that saved her from dying in destitution.

But the shabby gowns were worn with the same queenly dignity with which she had once worn handsome ones. People streamed in and out of her little house. As late as Polk's presidency she appeared at gala functions in Washington, old and shabby, perhaps, but surrounded always by admirers.

Neither age nor adversity vanquished her spirit. Only death, which came quite quietly when she was 82, could possibly do that.

ONE OF THE SEVEN LANDSCAPE WONDERS OF THE WORLD

French Nudists Excited About Statue's Nudity

Unable to Decide Whether It Should Be Altogether or Only Partly Naked.

PARIS.—[U. P.]—The French nudists in the cocklebur camp of Physiopolis, on the Island of Villennes in the Seine, are all excited. They are unable to decide whether a statue of a living nudist should stand on its pedestal altogether naked or court decency with a fig leaf or Roman toga.

Grateful French exponents of nakedness decided to build a monument on their island to the first man to dare to undress in public—a German watchmaker named Ungewitter, is the grandfather of all this theory. Back in 1906, in Thuringia, he shocked his family and worried the police by disrobing and sitting in the sunshine.

Idea Is Splendid but Not Practical.

In theory, the monument idea seems fine enough, but in practice it cannot be worked out peacefully. Long into the night, the torrent of debate runs on. From a distance—along the well dressed bank of the Seine—the roar which comes from the island campfire groups sounds about like Niagara from the suburbs of Buffalo.

The camp is really two camps, those who do and those who don't feel that a nudist is a nudist, dead or alive, in stone or in sunburned, cocklebur-scratched flesh. A slight majority seems to feel that it is not in keeping with good decorum to portray in stone the complete nakedness of a living man; that is all right for Roman gladiators, but there are no living Roman gladiators.

Man Is Not Always the Same.

Anyhow, they point out, no man is the same from one day to another. He might be sculpted after a big dinner and the rounding lines will not do him justice. He may be put into stone after a hard night of seeking sleep on the cold, cold cockleburs of Physiopolis, which, all the French naturalists will tell you, does not improve upon beauty. For that reason, the French camp may eventually decide to limit its statuary to Roman gladiators long since dead.

The island camp is a cosmopolitan place this year, with fat ladies and thin men from a dozen climes and countrysides. There are no Americans, but the ferry is running for the day some American will be willing to join. There are dozens of Germans, a sprinkling of rather finely drawn English ladies in their upper forties, who break the nudist rules by wearing their hats while they play volleyball in their camisoles.

Nudist styles seem to have changed little from last season. Those women who wore little snips and snaps of colored cloth here and there, tied together with shoestrings, last year, wear the same proportion of snips and snaps this year, and in the same strategic places.

Utah Cave May Hold Secrets of an Ancient Race

KANAB, Utah.—[U. P.]—Far back into the mystic shrines of Monument valley in northern Arizona and southern Utah there are untold proofs of civilization existing as early as 500 A. D. yet untouched by savants, T. R. Kelley, field director of a group of Arizona and California scientists who recently explored the 2,000 mile square area, is certain.

Robert Branstead, a member of Kelley's party, challenged great danger and death to slide down a 40 foot rope from the crest to a cave. It was located deep in the solitude of Monument valley, into which no white man has dared to wander because of evil repute among natives.

There he found what Kelley believes were two pieces of pottery of the basketmaker type, known to have been made about 500 A. D. The room he discovered was bored into almost solid rock, much in the manner known to have been used at that prehistoric date. No tools or implements were found, however. The entrance to the cave was blocked almost completely by great boulders that had dropped into position and wedged tightly.

The cave evidently had been the resting place for animals during past centuries. Many bones littered the floor, and here and there was scattered evidence of a death battle between great beasts of early days.

Barn Party Is 'Comme Il Faut' on West Coast

Kay Francis and Husband Start Craze for Frolics in the Rural Manner.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal.—[Special.]—With the Pacific coast going "barn party" with a vengeance after the now famous haystack celebration thrown by Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth MacKenna (Kay Francis) in the Vendome at Hollywood, Santa Barbara and Montecito swung into step this week.

Many members of the Chicago colony here were prominent among those attending the barn party given by Baron and Baroness Maximilin von Romberg in the stable of Glen Oaks, Montecito estate of the baroness' mother, Mrs. W. H. Hall.

Another outstanding event was the arrival of H. M. S. Dragon, English warship commanded by Capt. W. F. Wake Walker, which will anchor in the roadstead for a week. A large number of social events are being planned for the visiting officers by Montecitans.

Maharaja's Gout Stops Plans for Reception.

Prominent among those giving dinners at the Biltmore Beach club were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence B. Mitchell, Senator Hiram Johnson and His Highness Sir Hayija Rao III., Maharajah Gaekwar of Baroda, who is resting at the Biltmore for a week preparatory to continuing his trip to his native land by way of San Francisco, Vancouver, and the orient.

Plans for a reception for the Indian potentate, reputed to be among the seven wealthiest men in the world, were blasted by a slight attack of gout suffered by the monarch.

Chicagoans Compete in Pacific Coast Golf Tourney.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Strobel of Chicago, who have been spending the season at the Biltmore, and Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, who also has been there, left this week for their homes.

A number of Chicagoans competed in a mixed doubles golf tournament at the fashionable Valley club in Montecito, Mrs. Clarence B. Mitchell and William H. Yule capturing first honors. Mrs. Agnes P. Wilder, paired with James Canby, also played, as did Joseph M. Patterson, with Mrs. J. C. Vandyke, and Alden Printer, with Miss Marion de Rham.

Miss Noel Kennerly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude S. Kennerly of St. Louis, was hostess at a tea in the family home on Schoolhouse road in Montecito. Mr. and Mrs. Fitzwilliam Sargent have left for their home in Haverford, Conn., after visiting with Mrs. Joseph Patterson. They will visit in Hollywood before returning east. Their son, Fitzwilliam Jr., is returning east to school by plane. John Coleman, San Francisco, has completed a short visit with his aunt and uncle, George Edward Coleman, in their Montecito home.

Chicago Colony Active in West Coast Junior League.

Mrs. Agnes P. Wilder was one of the guests at a reception given for Miss Clara Emily Corrin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred George Corrin of Boston. Following her marriage to Harold H. Hull of San Pedro, Cal., Miss Peggy Wheeler, daughter of Mrs. Kathleen Page Wheeler, and Mrs. William J. Knapp will visit in Chicago while en route to Mrs. Knapp's home in Milbrook, N. Y. Mrs. Frances V. Lloyd and Martha Dickinson were among the members of the Chicago colony attending a meeting of the Junior league, in which plans for the winter season were outlined.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Jameson have returned to their Montecito home after visiting their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Jameson Jr., in Danville, Cal.

Ocean Airline Is Announced for Next Year

Steamship Will Serve as Mid-Atlantic Base for Flying Service.

RIO DE JANEIRO.—(AP)—Experiments with the steamship Westphalen as a midocean base for trans-Atlantic air mail service has been a complete success, and the first transocean line will get under way in 1934, says Capt. Fritz Hammer.

Capt. Hammer, former pilot of the giant flying boat Do-X and director of the Syndicato Condor, Brazilian representatives of the German Lufthansa company which will operate the ocean line, piloted the first flying boat catapulted from midocean in a test run to Brazil.

The Westphalen, now on the way home to Bremen, Germany, for minor changes, will return to midocean in September or October for final experiments. The ship already has received and catapulted planes from Africa for Brazil and vice versa, besides taking part in numerous offshore landing and catapulting tests.

In all these experiments, extending over many months, only one accident occurred—Capt. Hammer, experimenting with the landing machinery aboard ship, cut off part of a finger.

"The ocean air line, alternating with the Graf Zeppelin, will at the start give four day service from Berlin to Rio," said Capt. Hammer. "Later, as night flying is instituted along the African coast, and faster flying boats are placed in service, the time will be reduced and is expected to get down to 50 hours before many years."

The transocean part of the line will require from 12 to 14 hours, depending on flying conditions. Planes from Bathurst will reach the Westphalen in midocean in six or seven hours, the transocean tests demonstrated.

Snake Descending Stairs Now Rivals Nude of Same Occupation as Puzzler to Art Lovers

M. Roy's Reptile Strikes Observers as Odd Sort of Household Pet.

By Eleanor Jewett.

ONE of the most amusing of the modern paintings in the gorgeous exhibition of great pictures at the Art institute is "Danger on the Stairs," by Pierre Roy, a Frenchman born in 1880 and, from the evidence of this canvas, an enthusiastic student of Sherlock Holmes. Holmes and his adventures of "The Speckled Band" come instantly to the mind of the average spectator contemplating at long length those hideous coils of snake slithering down the steps.

One would not think of the painting as the kind to be taken ultraseriously, at all events not so seriously as to involve letter writing, and yet a visitor from Texas does write:

"The two paintings in which I am most interested are Pierre Roy's 'Danger on the Stairs' and Piscasso's 'Seated Woman.' I want to know the meaning of the snake on the stairs."

"Man in Blue," by Cezanne, from the private collection of Conger Goodyear, in the A Century of Progress exhibition current in the Chicago Art institute.

Miss Jewett Suggests Cabling M. Roy for an Explanation.

This brings the problem of the snake into the limelight as a concrete obstacle to some person's thorough enjoyment of a great exhibit. For a satisfying answer to the problem one must search the imagination, unless the search of a pocketbook would be easier, in which case a cable to M. Roy, the painter, would undoubtedly [if he has not forgotten the reason back of his creation] bring the correct solution. It might be that M. Roy would say with Browning—"When I painted this picture [naturally Browning said "wrote this verse"] God and I knew its meaning. Now only God knows."

Why should a large and frightening snake be allowed loose in a house that is perfectly commonplace in every other respect? Has it escaped from a visiting scientist's luggage? Is a snake charmer staying in the house and the snake a pet which is permitted the freedom of the stairs after the house has gone to bed? Is the snake a symbol of some mischief secretly afoot?

Movement Is Essence of "Nude Descending Staircase."

The Art institute recently dealt with the situation in relation to another painting hanging in the same back gallery that also has aroused a great deal of speculation, though not nearly the interest which first met it on its introduction to the public at the Armory show in 1911. This second picture is the cubist painting, "Nude Descending the Staircase," by Marcel Duchamp. It is explained in regard to it that the object the artist had in painting the picture was simply to suggest downward movement. Duchamp engaged a nude model to walk repeatedly down the staircase until he realized a certain movement of line and form. If to us the lady looks like a quantity of barrel staves falling flacidly in a brown monotone, he envisioned her as movement and tried to interpret this movement with numberless vertical lines, interrupted at certain points and diverted into angles corresponding to the bending of the neck, to the movement of the hips and to the bending of the knees.

One must, warns the Art institute comment, study the picture carefully to discover any semblance to the human form, and even then the majority fails to recognize any similarity.

One visitor, after studying the canvas for some time, turned to our friend "Danger on the Stairs," in which the large snake is discovered in the act of descent: "There!" he exclaimed, "that's a real nude coming down the stairs; not a stitch of clothing on and ready for trouble.

Posterity Pays Belated Tribute to Cezanne.

By far a better modern, and one whose name will more probably sound with meaning in the ears of future generations, is Cezanne, whose "Man in Blue" is reproduced today. Cezanne has been honored with an entire gallery in the Art institute show. The honor is well won, though, like all honors which now go to him, far too late to warm his lonely, sensitive soul. He lived a curiously unbalanced and unworldly life. Nothing but his painting and its problems interested Cezanne. Fortunately his father left him enough money so he could be independent, and independnt he had to be. His merit as a creative force in contemporary painting was discovered to but few before his death. More lately those pioneers have been followed by the entire art conscious world.

Form and color, these two were Cezanne's creed, and the greatest of these was form. His one man exhibit adequately represents his ability and his progress. His landscapes are particularly beautiful. Here is modern work that puts modernism to the blush. A vibrant, tingling beauty runs through the finest of his work and where that is dulled a softened melancholy cloaks his thought. The

ART NOTES

The O'Brien galleries are showing attractive prints during September. The Green balcony is hung with German woodcuts, quaint and colorful, representing flowers, boats and landscapes. Rockwell Ken's woodblocks and lithographs, some of them new to Chicago, hang in the Pine balcony. The illustrations for "Beowulf" are striking.

The third group of prints is by Stow Wengenroth, a young easterner, who submits New England harbors and frame houses in a persuasive fashion. His drawing is sure and strong. The American show of oils by such men as Henri, Kroll, Speicher, Louis Betts and Fechin, remains in the four main galleries.

Water colors, a brilliant group chiefly of scenes in New Mexico, by Carl Hammond, have been shown in the Tudor gallery, Chicago Woman's club, the first half of September. The exhibit closed Friday to the great regret of the many who enjoyed Mr. Hammond's work tremendously.

The Hoosier gallery, 211 West Wacker drive, opened an exhibit of prints and water colors by artist members of the Hoosier Salon Patrons' association last week to continue for several weeks. The regular fall exhibition season will open in the gallery Oct. 17 and the arrangements for this will be announced later.

Meanwhile in the Indiana hall on A Century of Progress grounds, there has recently opened to continue through Sept. 24 an exhibit of twenty of the prize winning pictures of former Hoosier salons. Among the artists represented are Frank V. Dudley, Edgar Forkner, Lucie Hartrath, Olive Rush, C. Warner Williams, Guy Brown Wiser, Karl C. Brandner and G. Ames Aldrich.

Miss Clara MacGowan, assistant professor of art at Northwestern university, has spent the summer in Mexico City painting and studying. She will return to Chicago about Sept. 25.

Australia Finds "Showboats" of Trade Success

CANBERRA, Australia.—Trade "showboats" sent out by Australia to Netherland India, the Federated areas, have proved so successful that a series of vessels laden with exhibits of the country's product is planned. In an effort to expand its markets in Netherland India it dispatched a "showboat" to Java with a varied assortment of goods earlier in the year.

It was well received by government officials and the people. Tanners and footwear producers of Australia have sent a display of their products on board a ship to the East Indies and the Federated Malay states. Other interests are preparing to send out "showboats."

"Made by the makers of

GULISTAN

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

..that's all I need to know about a rug!"

Illustration shows an 18th Century Lavere Kirman Design, with the historic Tree of Life motif. Ask to see Gulistan No. 25135

"Oriental rug luxury is what I crave in all the rugs in my home. I can be sure of getting it in ANY rug made by the makers of Gulistan. They are the best-known makers of Oriental rugs and it's marvelous how they give that same Oriental beauty, at prices about one-third the originals. As I gaze at the rug on my floor—it's all there . . . the lovely Oriental design . . . the soft colorings . . . and that rich, silky sheen which simply transforms a home!"

When shopping for ANY Oriental Rug Reproductions, look for the label of the Best Known Makers of Orientals!

No matter what you wish to pay, you will find what you want made by the makers of Gulistan. Four qualities to choose from, at popular prices: many sizes and patterns in each grade. The success of these rugs comes from their trueness to the Oriental Rug tradition. The House of Karagheusian, with its production centers in Sultanabad, Hamadan and Tabriz, weaves the fine Persian Rugs of today, and imports them to America. In the Gulistan series of rugs made in America they use the same designs . . . the same type of sturdy Oriental wools . . . and the very same finishing processes as in their Oriental creations. Experts hesitate to tell the difference! Kashans, Kirmans, Sarouks (many of them museum pieces), may be found reproduced in all these qualities. See them at any good Furniture or Department store. No need to sift out substitutes. The Karagheusian name and label on the back of the rug are your guide.

Beauty BEGINS WITH THE HAIR

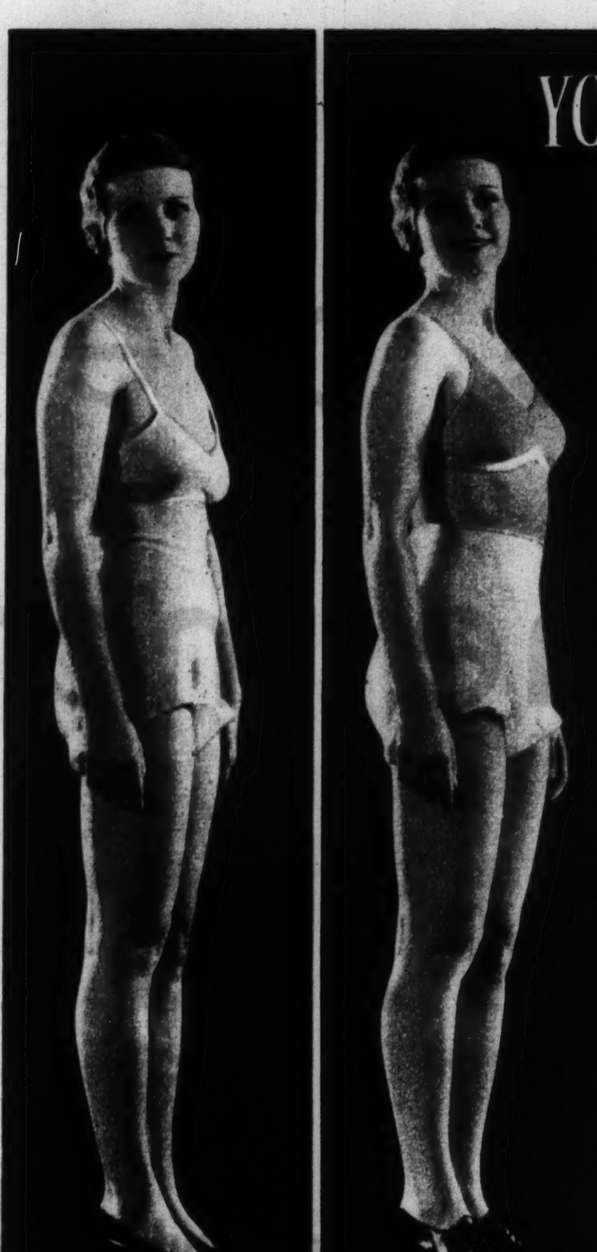
GABRIELEEN

RECONDITIONING OIL PROCESS OF PERMANENT WAVING

You cannot be too careful of your hair... more than any other feature it can make or mar feminine beauty. For coiffure charm, for lustrous hair and waves of loveliness, insist on GABRIELEEN, the reconditioning oil process permanent wave which actually restores life and vigor to all types of hair, whether dyed, bleached or white. Look for the name GABRIELEEN on the pads, the bottle of compound and the machine used for your permanent wave.

What have shoes to do with YOUR FIGURE?



A beautiful figure—but ordinary shoes encourage an unlovely posture. Flat chest; protruding stomach; drooping shoulders.

But see the difference produced by wearing proper shoes! Erect figure... full chest, flat hips and abdomen.

NRA WE DO OUR PART

Well, you'll hardly believe it—but shoes have a great deal to do with the beauty of your figure. Correct shoes, of course. A famous orthopedic surgeon discovered this thrilling beauty secret. And he's proved it—beyond all doubt—with countless experiments.

Here are two photographs. Both are of the same woman.

But look at the difference! One photograph shows the unnatural posture that any woman may unconsciously acquire as the result of wearing the wrong shoes.

In the other photograph you see the effect encouraged by wearing the right shoes. How trimly smart her figure! Full chested; head well poised; hips and abdomen flat.

That is because correct and properly fitted shoes—such as Enna Jetticks encourage a natural posture. When you put them on you notice an entirely new sensation of "balance." You stand, walk and dance more gracefully. Knees, instead of being "locked" are relaxed. Leg muscles that were "bunched" regain their natural positions.

Try Enna Jettick Shoes. You can get correct shoes due to the wide variety of lasts; you can be properly fitted because there are 189 different sizes and widths in the smart, new Fall models.

Any of the stores listed below can fit your feet perfectly in Enna Jettick Shoes.

2. FRESHNESS

The vacuum process of packing coffee, originated by Hills Bros. in 1900, is the only method that fully preserves coffee freshness—the air is removed from the can and kept out. There is no magic about a vacuum can—it will not make poor coffee good, but it will keep good coffee fresh. No can of Hills Bros. Coffee will ever go stale. The vacuum can keeps it fresh always!

3. GRANULATION

Hills Bros. Coffee is ground right to taste right. No coffee, however good, can be uniform in taste unless uniformly roasted and uniformly ground. Hills Bros.' exclusive, continuous process—Controlled Roasting—and correct granulation insure this uniformity. Hills Bros.' granulation will give best results by the drip process or any other method.

1. UNIFORMITY

Every pound of Hills Bros. Coffee tastes exactly like every other pound! Hills Bros. Coffee isn't roasted by usual methods. It is roasted a little at a time as the blend flows evenly, continuously through the roasters. This is Controlled Roasting—Hills Bros.' exclusive process which roasts every coffee berry to perfection.

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

There are 3 reasons for the matchless goodness of HILLS BROS COFFEE

Hills Bros. Coffee is roasted, ground and packed to perfection! It has everything you could want in a coffee—and it has it in every pound. There is never any variation! Just wait till you begin using Hills Bros. Coffee regularly, and you'll know what we mean. There's nothing—not even a single word that fully describes the delight you will find. You must drink Hills Bros. Coffee and taste it for yourself. Order your first pound today, by name, and look for the Arab trade-mark on the can.

ROMANCE BEGINS

with that schoolgirl complexion

A lovely skin invites Romance

YOU must take the first steps toward romance alone. Yet those steps are made easier . . . if you let beauty light the way. Luckily, a lovely skin will help you most.

Nature's own beauty aids

Won't you let Palmolive — the soap of youth — help to bring out your hidden beauty? Palmolive's precious blend of olive and palm oils casts a veil of loveliness over your skin. It is soothing, tender, infinitely kind. It cleanses gently but with a thoroughness that leaves skin clear, fresh, radiant. Palmolive lather penetrates the pores, freeing them of accumulations easily . . . leaving skin soft, smooth, gloriously clear and fresh.

Pure, safe, natural

Buy three cakes today. Caress that bland lather into your skin. Rinse it off with warm water, followed by cold. Rejoice in a young skin — in the romance that is every woman's right!

This vial shows the exact amount of olive oil per cake used in the making of Palmolive.

REMARKABLE NEW VARNISH and ENAMEL WORK HOME MIRACLES

Home owners marvel* at the resistance of this amazing new finish for all home decorating. Thanks to a wonderful new process, Super-Valspar looks like satin, wears like iron

Super-Valspar is the thrilling new discovery now amazing home painters. Easy to apply yet it defies wear that quickly ruins ordinary varnishes and enamels.

Super-Valspar clear varnish is a tremendous improvement over even the original Valspar—the only varnish that even boiling water will not turn white.

Now Super-Valspar defies even boiling oil! Alcohol and strong soaps, too! Pound it, hammer it, maul it. You can't hurt this amazing finish.

Linoleum type floor coverings last indefinitely when coated with Super-Valspar clear. For less than $2 you can save up to $35 guarding floor coverings this thrifty way. Keeps designs bright and handsome while giving you a surface easier to keep clean.

Super-Valspar in Colors

Super-Valspar is also offered in 20 exquisite shades of super-enamel—the kind you see on expensive furniture. No brush marks. One coat covers. And the colors stay true.

These new-day enamels almost go on by themselves. Any man or woman can do a color job anywhere in the house, and get a handsome, glossy, long-wearing surface that everyone envies.

Now you can refinish the old car, too, easily, quickly—any color you want. Super-Valspar goes on smoothly, dries in 4 hours, and won't crack or peel.

Of course, Super-Valspar costs a few cents more. But it goes much, much farther than ordinary products offered to you as "just as good but cheaper." Beware of such misleading advice. Get Super-Valspar today!

Only Super-Valspar gives you these amazing advantages.

Only varnish that defies boiling oil—403 degrees!
Positively will not turn white or show rings.
Longest wearing, yet dries in only 4 hours.
Triples life of linoleum-type floor-coverings.
The only enamels made by the marvelous Super-Valspar process.
Simplifies auto refinishing.

The original boiling water test that made Valspar famous—the only varnish that will not turn white under this remarkable test of waterproofness.

Five hundred girls said M-m!

BEFORE we put the new La Cross Nail Polish on the market, we had five hundred girls try it. And the five hundred said, "Mmmmm!" which, interpreted, means "Perfectly marvelous!" or "Simply wonderful!" or "Swell!"

It comes in five shades, colorless to garnet. Quick-drying. Long-lasting. And a larger bottle of a better polish for 25 cents. At most drug and department stores.

Autumn's gay by-word is BRIGHTNESS

BRIGHTNESS in our mental and financial outlooks, brightness in our frocks and faces! Yes—definitely—dullness is passé! Of course, there's art in this new fashion, or it wouldn't be so very exciting:
Artful cut in the bright-surfaced satin frocks and hats; artful blending in the new make-up! If ever there was a face-fashion that revealed Coty Powder to you in one of its most precious aspects, it is this new Fall Fashion for brightness. Perfect Coty tone-blending doesn't call for layers of powder to hide your skin. Instead, Coty Powder is actually so true to human complexion tones that you need only a light film—and there's no color clash. Your tone is ready in lovely fragrances: "L'Aimant" or "Paris"—so smart for day; "L'Origan"—long the favorite of beauty; exquisite, jewel-like "Emeraude"—so glamorous with evening things. Just ask for the famous powder-puff box!

Gentle, Jealous Guardians of an Exquisite English Skin

BY APPOINTMENT TO HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN OF ENGLAND

TEXTURED like velvet, colored like a bit of Dresden china or a Botticelli portrait, there is a story-book quality about the Englishwoman's exquisite complexion. And it's a story with a happy ending. For everything she does to achieve that lovely skin is as easily possible to the American woman.

She uses three preparations, only three, but all are of finest quality . . . "England's best," and all are from a single famous perfume house: Yardley of London. First, Yardley's English Lavender Soap, for the Englishwoman knows that nothing . . . nothing . . . will replace cleansing with a mild, pure soap.

Then Yardley's English Complexion Cream, supplementary to the soap-and-water ritual, and for cleansing at odd moments during the day; as an emollient, to lubricate the skin and rebuild the tissues while she sleeps; and as a foundation for Yardley's English Face Powder . . . so fine that only the smooth, warm bloom of your skin attests to the fact that you have used it at all. (There's magic in the right face powder.)

There are many other preparations in the Yardley series, about which you will also want to know. May we send you our booklet TR-9, "Complexions in the Mayfair Manner"? It is free. Yardley & Co., Ltd., British Empire Building, 620 Fifth Avenue, New York City; in London, at 33, Old Bond Street; and Paris, Toronto, and Sydney.

YARDLEY'S ENGLISH FACE POWDER IN SIX SUBTLE TINTS

It will leave your skin with the velvety bloom that is the supreme achievement of a really good face powder. For we have tinted it so subtly that it blends indistinguishably with your natural coloring; and we have refined it so completely that not a single particle is perceptible after you have powdered. Yardley powder will cling for longer than you would have believed it possible. It is scented delicately with Yardley's English Lavender. You have only to find your own particular shade, among the six we have created, to realize that here, at last, is a perfect face powder. Our newest color, English Peach, is especially interesting . . . a warm and becoming rachel with an undertint of pink. $1.10 a box.

Yardley's English Lavender, a light and charming fragrance for all occasions. Englishwomen prefer it particularly for morning and sports. In purse-sized flacons or elaborate decanters, from $1.10 to $15. The bottle illustrated sells for $1.10.

English Complexion Cream . . . cleansing cream, skin food, and powder foundation; and English Lavender Soap, to give your skin the mild stimulation that results in a clear and healthy coloring. The cream, formerly $1.50, now $1.10; the soap, 35 cents a cake; bath size, 55 cents; guest size, six in a box, $1.05, or 20 cents singly.

AT THE EXHIBITION . . . A complete Yardley exhibit has been established on the second floor of the General Exhibits Building at A Century of Progress. Here you may see (and sample) "Fragrance" and other Yardley preparations. Yardley extends a cordial invitation to you to inspect the display.
